News In Modern Building

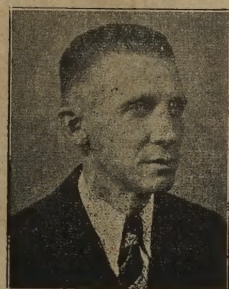

The new and modern building and printing plant of the Chilton County News, shown above, is rated as one of the most efficient weekly newspaper plants in Alabama.

News Began Upward Climb Ten Years Ago
This Week; Each Year Brought Some Outstanding Accomplishment

On the first day of January, 1927, the Chilton County News changed ownership and began an upward climb until ten years later, January 1st, 1937 finds it rated as one of the most outstanding weekly newspapers in the entire state with one of the most modern buildings and printing plants. Ten years ago, Hon.
J. B. Atkinson, well known attorney of Clanton and former mayor, purchased the News and began its operation. Four years later it was sold to Billy Smith, editor and manager and who now is owner and editor.

Short Illness Is Fatal To Seed And Feed Merchant Here

Evan Parrish, widely known young man and citizen of Clanton, died at his home here last Thursday, following a short illness caused by blood poisoning.
He was manager of the Southern Seed & Plant Co.

Mr. Parrish became ill on Christmas Day from an infection which set in a cut on one of his hands. He was 37 years old. Born in 1899 in the Providence community of this county, he was a member of one of the oldest families in the county. At the age of 10 he moved to Clanton with his family and attended the local schools.

After completing his education here he was employed for two years in Connecticut. He later returned to Clanton where he was employed by the Louisville & Nashville Railroad. He then entered the coal and produce business here for himself.
At the age of nineteen he was united in marriage to Miss Glennie Evans of Clanton and has since made his home here. Mr. Parrish was considered a friend of everyone, especially the farmers of the county whom he aided all he could while engaged in the seed and feed business.

He built up what is now perhaps two of the largest seed stores in the county, being formerly manager of the Chilton County Exchange, Inc. and had

Each year of the past ten has brought some outstanding accomplishment or forward step for the News. In 1927 old printing equipment gradually gave way to new and modern equipment and in 1928 one of the most modern type setting machines was installed at several thousands of dollars cost. As each year came and went, the News found itself growing in business and in circulation.
From a small book containing the names of approximately 350 subscribers in 1927, the present circulation of this newspaper is far above the average weekly in Alabama.

Honors Bestowed
In 1929 the News was selected along with ten other weekly newspapers of Alabama as a member of the "All-Alabama Eleven" and two years later became captain of the "team" and was awarded the loving cup which is the state award for the weekly newspaper rendering the greatest service to its community and accounting for the larger number of worthwhile accomplishments for its people. These selections and awards were made by the Alabama Press Association and were based on activities proven by the printed word and testimonials from those affected.

Investigation Of Robbery Continues

No arrests have yet been made in the daylight robbery Tuesday of last week of the offices of the tax collector and the city clerk, according to Sheriff Hardy.

He stated, however, that the investigation was still being pushed and that everything would be done to bring the culprit to justice. Over two hundred dollars were taken from both the offices while they were closed for lunch.

Hon. J. C. Patillo, the county's efficient

Although Mr. Patillo expects to be out of his office for about two weeks, the office will remain open and under the capable management of the circuit clerk's assistant, Mrs. Beatrice Pratt.
The News joins the friends of Mr. Patcovery.

Bank Resources Here
Reach Million Dollars

Founded In 1901, The Peoples Savings Bank
Grows From First Resources Of $31,810.09
To Over One Million In 35 Years

When William McKinley was president of these United States, back in the year 1901, there was founded in Clanton, the little village's only and first bank.
That was back when there were only three small brick buildings in the now prosperous city; when there were no automobiles, no electric lights, no pavement here. That bank was the beginning of the now large Peoples Savings Bank of Clanton.

Connell Still Confined
On Murder Charge

G. Mosely Connell, of Coosa County was still confined in the county jail here Tuesday awaiting preliminary trial.

Connell is alleged to have killed
Basley Lewis Saturday night, December 26th, by shooting him with a shotgun near Clanton. He came in and surrendered to Sheriff Hardy following the shooting. Reports stated he would be given a preliminary hearing Friday but this was not confirmed at the Sheriff's office Tuesday.

The End Is Near

The Chilton County News' big prize campaign will soon be over.
The last report to be made to The Campaign Department will be January 16th. There is another great reduction in votes at that time. Only 25,000 votes instead of 50,000 will be given with each club of $10.00. Extended subscriptions will not count, and the 10,000 votes for a cash report cannot be given, after January 16th.

This is a close race for that beautiful Dodge Sedan. Someone will gain the winning votes January 16th for a winning lead will be hard to overcome after all the extra votes are gone.

There is a great difference in being the winner of a major prize and a commission check.

Two 5-year subscriptions NOW average 130,000 votes
Two 5-year subscriptions after January 16th are 85,000 votes.

One of the following contestants will win the Dodge Sedan. Names making a cash report of two subscriptions each report day will have to be dropped from the list. Next week two or three names of contestants are likely to be dropped.

This is a close race for the major prizes. Only a few subscriptions may determine the winners. Each moment is valuable until the last big vote offer ends on January 16th.

The Honor Roll
Three contestants having the highest cash reports made direct to The Campaign Department last Saturday night are:

| MRS. L. C. REYNOLDS |

These names are in alphabetical order and not entered according to the reports made.

Mrs. J. C. Hughes of Billingsley would have been on The Honor Roll Saturday night if she could have made her report direct to the office but it was in the mail and did not reach us in time, however, she will likely be on this week for she is doing excellent work and had one of the best reports.

The Chilton County News will give away all prizes January 23rd. The contestants will select judges to determine the winners.

OFFICERS GET OFFENDERS IN HOLIDAY GAIETY

Liquor Charges Out Number Others During Arrest Of Fifteen Here

Records at the office of Sheriff J. R. Hardy showed Tuesday that fifteen arrests had been made in the county during the recent holidays. Liquor apparently caused the majority of the arrests as four were for public drunkenness, five for driving motor vehicles while intoxicated and three for violating the prohibition law.

One arrest was for forgery, one for murder and one for reckless driving. The forgery case is that of a negro man who is alleged to have forged the name of W. C. Robinson, well known lumber man of Clanton, to checks and attempted to cash them.

The negro is said to have succeeded in cashing one check for a neat sum and attempted to cash another in town, but both were soon detected and officers were hot on the negro's trail, bringing him to jail.

Sheriff Hardy stated Tuesday that there are thirteen prisoners now confined in the county jail, ten of whom are state prisoners and three Federal. Those making these arrests during the holidays were the sheriff and his deputies and state highway Patrolmen Henley and Waites.

In a statement issued this week the Peoples Savings Bank, through its president, Frank J. Callen, shows total resources of over one million dollars, the largest figure in that column ever to be shown by a bank in Chilton County.

This bank has the distinction of being the first bank organized in Chilton County. It was, in the beginning, the financial center for the then little village of Clanton—now it has become outstanding in Central Alabama.

When this bank was founded by W. T. Holloway, of Montgomery, the late W. T. Callen, father of Frank J. Callen, was cashier. That was back when all the work was done with the old pen and ink method and at night by kerosene lamps. The late Mr. Callen became president of the institution in 1904 and remained in that capacity until a short time before his death.

Now, the son of the earlier president of this institution has carried on and has seen the little bank grow into one of the strongest in Central Alabama. Mr. Callen has been connected with the bank for the past fifteen years and has been rightfully given much credit for the continued growth of the business. He served as president from 1927 to 1930 when H. Glenn Boyd, was president. The latter now occupies the president's chair of the large City National Bank of Selma, Alabama.

The Peoples Savings Bank has used several slogans, such as "Safe Since 1901" and "Straight Ahead For Over Thirty Years" and others. All have been well suited and well placed. Its history embraces seasons of panic and pestilence, good times and bad times, war times and peace times, but from the time of its beginning—over a quarter of a century—it has discharged all trust and met all obligations with absolute fidelity. During the great World War, this institution took over the entire quota of Victory Bonds assigned to Chilton County, approximately $60, (Continued to back page)

As announced in the beginning of this campaign all persons not making a cash report of two subscriptions each report day will have to be dropped from the list. Next week two or three names of contestants are likely to be dropped.

This is a close race for the major prizes. Only a few subscriptions may determine the winners. Each moment is valuable until the last big vote offer ends on January 16th.

The Honor Roll

Three contestants having the highest cash reports made direct to The Campaign Department last Saturday night are:

MRS. R. W. LOWE,
MISS EUNICE POWELL,
MRS. L. C. REYNOLDS.

These names are in alphabetical order and not entered according to the reports made.

Mrs. J. C. Hughes of Billingsley would have been on The Honor Roll Saturday night if she could have made her report direct to the office but it was in the mail and did not reach us in time, however, she will likely be on this week for she is doing excellent work and had one of the best reports.

The Chilton County News will give away all prizes January 23rd. The contestants will select judges to determine the winners.

Contestants: Your friends will say it with subscriptions. Others will wish you success.

My Sincere Thanks

January 1st, ten years ago, the Chilton County News changed ownership and on that day I became affiliated with the newspaper in the capacity of bookkeeper, press feeder, and printers devil, later being given the title, Associate Editor. Two years later I was placed in the rather delicate position as editor of the News. Since that time the years have passed rapidly, but it has been my pleasure to see the Chilton County News grow into what is now considered one of the most outstanding weekly newspapers in Alabama, and the newspaper that received the state award a few years ago for having rendered the most outstanding service to its community. We have grown in every way and in our growth we have endeavored to pass on to readers of the Chilton County News and customers of our job printing department the benefit of that continued growth.

However there is no secret to this growth. We realize with a deep feeling of satisfaction and appreciation that it took thousands of people of Chilton County to make this possible. Your friendship, your confidence and support are obviously back of the success of the Chilton County News. It took the advice and the criticism of friends and enemies to give the News strength to withstand the experiences of the past ten years.

There are so many things I would like to say to the people of Chilton County and surrounding territory where the News' circulation goes into nooks and corners—so many things in an attempt to express my sincerest thanks and appreciation for this cooperation, confidence and support. So, please believe me when I say, thank you, ever so much.

We have had our ups and downs, as everyone has had. But we realize that if it were not for the "downs" there would be no "ups," and if there were no wrongs there would be no rights. So, with that thought in mind we start a new year, a year that looms bright ahead for everyone. We enter this year with a new determination—a determination to make the next ten years more productive, more successful and full of more accomplishments for our county and our people, and to give you a bigger and better newspaper, one you will be more proud of.

With your help we believe we will be able to accomplish this end and hope that it will come more rapidly than those in the past. We realize that we have made many friends and many have made us their friends. That, in itself, is worth the ten years of work in building the Chilton County News into a newspaper that still comes off the press under the thought that "Community Interest In Its Editorial Policy Is The Cornerstone Of This Newspaper." With the following lines, sent us by a friend, I say thank you again and that I want you to know that the News is YOUR newspaper:

"To have life and feel the glow and flow of sentiment,
"To be rich in friends and see in each the human and divine,
"And to ignore the little things that tend to undermine,
"Is to realize upon the good in life in great abundance."

I hope that 1937 brings to you and yours everything that you would like, and by all means come to see us anytime. We'll be glad to have you.

Sincerely,
Billy Smith, Publisher

That's What I Think

Saul M. Goldstein

Twenty years ago, we in the United States were carrying on our daily business affairs in our own way. We got up in the morning, ate breakfast, went off to work, came home in the evening, read the newspaper, discussed the affairs of the day, and went to bed. The main affair of the day, of course, was the European War. We took sides (in our conversations, of course) and argued the matter over: there was glib talk of the Central Alliance and the Triple Entente, the possibilities of success on either side, and—just about twenty years ago today—there was beginning to be some rumors about some terrible atrocities committed by ferocious German beasts upon poor little defenseless French and Belgian women and children. Discussion was about as far as the matter got; we had just reelected a President on the platform that "he kept us out of war," and we had settled down to carrying on our daily business affairs in our own way, and let Europe settle its own troubles.

Suddenly, the atrocities became worse; notes were exchanged by our government and foreign powers; Inauguration came, Congress was convened—and lo, and behold! war was declared. No longer could we carry on our daily business affairs in our own way. The flower of our youth was grasped from our midst, and transported, via training camps, to death, injury and a complete moral transformation. Billions of American dollars, hundreds of thousands of American lives, all went into the insatiable jaws of War.

Today, twenty years later, we in the United States are carrying on our daily business affairs in our own way. We get up in the morning, eat breakfast, go off to work, come home in the evening, read the newspaper, discuss the affairs of the day, and go to bed. The main affair of the day, of course, is the European War Scare. We take sides, (in our conversation, of course) and argue the matter over. There is glib talk of Communism and Fascism, the possibilities of success on either side, and—yes, we are beginning to hear some rumors about some terrible atrocities committed by ferocious Fascist or Communist beasts upon poor little defenseless Communist or Fascist women and children. Discussion is about as far as the matter gets; we have just reelected a President who passed a stringent neutrality act, and we have settled down to carrying on our daily business affairs in our own way, and let Europe settle its own troubles.

Suddenly, the neutrality act spring a leak. The "war" in Spain isn't a war after all, but just a family quarrel, so American exporters can ship armament to either or both sides after all. The Communist government holds a German Fascist steamer as carrying contraband, while the Fascist junta forces fire on a Socialist French ship. Italy signs an agreement with Britain about the Mediterranean and tells Germany it has changed its mind about interfering in Spain and advises the Nazi to go to and do likewise.

Inauguration is coming, and Congress will be convened. So far in the story, history has been repeating itself slowly but surely. Whether it will continue to do so is another story. I doubt very seriously if the American people would care to send more billions of American dollars and more hundreds of thousands of American lives into another European war, but the arrows point that way. We can only avoid it by reading our signposts carefully and going in the opposite direction. We, the people, are the government of the United States, and as long as we guard that privilege jealously and let our duly elected representatives know that their acts must reflect our feelings, we can stay out of that war; but the minute we relax our vigilance we will be on the old road again. If we want to stay out of this war, let us lift up our voices in unison and say so.

Anyway, that's what I think.

Dawes Says Prosperity Being Underestimated

Chicago, Jan. 2.—Former Vice-President Charles G. Dawes, who predicted the end of the depression two years ago, said today prosperity was here with greater potentialities "than we are inclined to predict or to feel."

The noted banker and statesman said in an extemporaneous talk before two score prominent Chicagoans at a breakfast meeting:

"The extent of returned prosperity is being underestimated."

His conclusion, he explained, followed extension of the study which prompted his prediction in December, 1934. He superimposed a chart of the business course since 1929 on those of the depressions which began in 1873 and 1893.

"There is going to be a greater activity in exchanges of good than we are inclined to predict or to feel—and these things are largely a matter of feeling," he said.

CARD OF THANKS

I want to thank each and every one for the help given me and my family since the storm, December 6, 1936. I also thank Mr. Martin and the Red Cross for helping out in our need. May God's blessings rest on each of you is my prayer.—E. F. Sewell and Family.

Enlightened Farm People Face Year

Rural Folks Reading, Thinking More Than Ever Before, Leaders Report

My L. O. Brackeen

Auburn, Ala., Jan. 2.—The new year finds farm people reading and thinking more than ever before, according to observations by agricultural workers and farmers over the State. "Rural people are better informed on all subjects, including farming methods, markets, economics, county, State and national affairs and every other subject than at any time during my remembrance," comments one farm leader who works with a large number of Alabama farm men, women, boys and girls. "Farmers are not only reading more newspapers, farm journals and magazines, but an increasing number are using the radio for information and entertainment."

Farmers Well-Informed
One city observer goes so far as to state that farmers are becoming one of the best informed groups in the State and nation. "Mention most any subject to most any good farmer and see if he doesn't know a great deal about it. They are by far the best informed on best farming practices and latest agricultural developments."

"No one knows better than newspaper editors and reporters that people both rural and urban, are reading a great deal," says an editor. "Make a mistake and then you will find out immediately that an error has been committed."

Possibly, one of the greatest contributing factors in causing farmers to read and study more is the New Deal national farm program, observes a number of farm leaders. To understand what the program offers from year to year it is necessary for them to read newspapers, magazines, bulletins, pamphlets, rules and regulations. While doing this they have learned the importance of being fully informed on all subjects.

Records Kept Well
Establishing records and then keeping them up to date also have caused farmers to think more about different phases of farming. Information required for obtaining payments under the Agricultural Conservation program has caused them to know more about their farming operations than at any time in the past, it is stated. New developments of agricultural experiment stations and the United States Department of Agriculture also have made farmers realize the importance of their keeping fully informed, states a leading farmer. "We must know of the

COMMITTEE IS HOLDING FARM TENANCY MEETINGS

Five regional hearings are being held this week and next by President Roosevelt's committee on farm tenancy in an effort to find ways of solving the farm tenancy problem.

The first meeting was held in Dallas, Texas, Monday, Jan. 4; the second in Montgomery, Ala., Wednesday, Jan. 6; and the other three will be held in Indianapolis, Ind., on Thursday, Jan. 7; in Lincoln, Neb., Saturday, Jan. 9; and in San Francisco, Cal., on Tuesday, Jan. 12.

The committee plans to submit its report and recommendations to President Roosevelt by February 1.

Brief Farm Facts

The American Farm Bureau Federation endorses the efforts being made by the Tennessee Valley Authority "toward the production of new types of phosphatic and nitrate fertilizers in an effort to lower costs to farmers of plant food production and to produce improved products, particularly any product of high plant food concentration."

Setting out black walnut seedlings, or planting the nuts in fertile spots about over the farm, is a profitable investment, reports Lyle Brown, extension forester, in pointing out that there is always a strong demand for black walnut timber and the nuts are valuable for home use and for sale.

Rural fires in recent years have taken annually an average total of 3,500 lives and piled up a property loss estimated at $100,000,000.

Every sheep brought into the flock should be inspected for scabies and certified by a competent inspector, warns the Bureau of Animal Husbandry in advising that "sheep scab mites are usually brought into a healthy flock on community bucks, feeder sheep, and other new animals."

It now seems possible that cattle tuberculosis—which once cost farmers millions of dollars a year—will eventually disappear from all dairy and beef cattle herds in the United States.

Hints to Gardeners

By Harold Coulter Vegetable Expert Ferry Seed Institute

Soil Study Important

A few minutes' consideration of the condition and make-up of the soil in your garden just before planting can make a marked difference in your success as a gardener.

Clayey soils require the most careful handling but are heavily productive. Sandy soils are "early" and sandy loams are just about ideal for most home garden crops.

In some southern states two crops may be grown, one in fall and one in spring.

Peas, lettuce, cabbage, broccoli, cauliflower, beets, carrots, radish and onion prefer plenty of moisture and moderately cool temperatures during development. These should be planted about as early in the fall as weather permits in order that they may make their early growth before cooler weather sets in.

These plantings will yield an abundance of produce for use during winter months. Some of these vegetables may be planted again in early spring for green spring vegetables.

The following vegetables are not as hardy as those listed above and are better grown as spring crops: Sweet corn, beans, tomato, pepper, egg plant, cucumber, melons, squash and pumpkin. They prefer abundant sunshine and while they prosper best when ample moisture is available they are able to do well during comparatively dry weather. They do best on loamy soils, but carefully prepared clay soils produce splendid crops.

Herbs do well in comparatively poor soil and maintain growth under rather drouthy conditions. Under the same conditions, radish, turnip, persimmon, saffron and other root vegetables may be expected to perform fairly well.

If you must do some of your gardening in ground that is shaded, try growing beets, radishes or peas.

Most drivers have had the feeling that they would like to run the careless driver right off the road, including the road hogs, the weaver, the snatcher of seconds at red lights, the speed demon, the "driver" who never signals—and also the horn blower.

Many a time a driver has been heard to say, "I wish I had a 10-ton truck to chase the pests off the road." But there is a better way to get rid of the pests. And that is to have a sufficient force of police on the main roads. A policeman patrolling the road can make almost a goody-goody out of the most dangerous driver.

Until people grow up in their use of motor vehicles, it seems to be necessary to provide many watchmen. Here's something funny about the "pests you'd like to swat." There are so many of them, at various times, that if all were driven from the highway, there would be practically no one left. Who are the pests of the road, anyway?

MISS ASHURST AND MR. HARRIS MARRIED AT QUIET CEREMONY

From the Tallahassee, Ala., Tribune

Quiet simplicity marked the marriage of Miss Sarah Frances Ashurst to Mr. Herman L. Harris which took place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J.H. Ashurst, in Carrville on Christmas Eve afternoon at four o'clock.

The ceremony was performed in the presence of relatives and close friends by Rev. Colby Cunningham before an improvised altar of southern pines, ferns and potted plants. White tapers in candelabra were placed at either side, which were lighted by Jack Carr and Dan Herren just preceding the ceremony. There were no attendants and the bride and groom entered together.

A pre-nuptial musical program was rendered preceding the ceremony. Mrs. A.J. Noble, violinist, played a beautiful number, accompanied by Mrs. E.G. Moore, after which, Mr. Wilson Patterson, tenor, sang, "All For You," also accompanied by Mrs. Moore. Lohengrin's Wedding March was used for the entrance of the bride and groom and during the ceremony Mrs. Noble and Mrs. Moore softly played Mendelssohn's "To A Wild Rose."

Mrs. Harris is a charming young woman, pretty and attractive. After attending the schools in Tallahassee, she graduated from Auburn in 1936. While there, she took a pre-medical course. She was an outstanding student in school activities, having been a member of Phi Omega Psi, a member of the staff of Plainman and a member of D.A.R. For her wedding, she was becomingly dressed in aqua crepe with accessories of brown. Her flowers were a corsage of sweetheart roses and valley lilies.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. G.F. Harris of Clanton. He was also a member of the class of '36 at Auburn, having studied business administration. He is a member of Theta Chi and Phi Kappa Phi fraternities. He is an amiable young fellow with every promise of a successful business career. At Auburn, he was a member of Scabbard & Blade, business manager of the school paper, "Plainman" and Blue Key. At present, he holds a responsible position with General Motors Acceptance Corporation in Birmingham.

An informal reception was held after the ceremony. A beautiful tiered bride's cake was the center decoration of the lovely lace-covered table which was placed at the rear of the spacious hall. White tapers in silver candlesticks completed the picture. Hot tea was served with afternoon refreshments.

The bride and groom left immediately for a short wedding trip to St. Augustine and other interesting points in Florida, after which they will be at home at 1417 25th St. N., Birmingham.

Out-of-town guests at the wedding were Mrs. Nash Carr of Selma and Mrs. Oakley Melton of Wetumpka, sisters of the bride, and Mr. and Mrs. G.F. Harris of Clanton, parents of the groom.

The Appeal Of Beauty

We often wonder how many of our local citizens are aware of the beauties inherent in our native landscape. "Familiarity breeds contempt," is an old saying which seems to carry much truth. With eyes untrained to that would quicken the pulse of any artist with scarcely a good look, say nothing of an expression of understanding or appreciation.

Of interest in this connection is a recent announcement that a famous artist, John Steuart Curry has taken up his abode at the College of Agriculture of the University of Wisconsin, where, we understand, he will devote most of his time to work in his studio but a few hours to lectures before students of the college on the subject of art.

It seems like a far cry from the study of balanced rations, and breeding for production to an appreciation of art. We can scarcely imagine the practical minded student of agriculture going into raptures over the projection of familiar scenery on a canvas. But after all the idea is not so absurd as we may imagine.

There is much joy to be gained out of life through appreciation of the beauties that surround us. The ordinary farm scene may bring a glow of pleasure to those of artistic tendencies. It might also bring some pleasure to the average citizen if he were only taught to appreciate it.

We're not holding a brief for that form of modern art which defaces the walls of many art galleries with a shambles of clashing color and meaningless figures. But art that presents the beauties that surround us in their true form and color is something else.

We call upon the readers of the News to give more heed and thought to the beauties that nature has bestowed upon us. There is probably something gorgeous in the landscape that you view daily with never a moment of appreciation.

Opportunities to New Industry

The opinion among those who know persists that 1937 will be a good year in business and will present many outstanding opportunities to communities like Clanton. For industry is on the march today, and it is seeking locations where it may be free from some of the labor disturbances that characterize large metropolitan centers.

There was a time when industry was forced to congregate in these vast industrial regions. Proximity of raw materials, available power, and transportation facilities all account for the present location of most of our industries. But today these advantages are rapidly disappearing.

Power may be easily transmitted by high lines over vast areas, and communities like Clanton offer the same advantages in this respect that can be secured in the largest cities. Location of raw materials is still important to some industries, but with this age of changing industry many factories find it of little importance. Transportation facilities that are adequate are available in countless small towns and villages that formerly were almost isolated. The highway and the motor truck as well as rail and water ways enters into consideration.

In view of this situation we urge the citizens of Clanton to recognize their opportunities. A little unity and cooperation should accomplish wonders for our community during the year 1937.

To be sensitive when you're active in public affairs is a serious handicap.

Poise is that quality which enables you to try on a new pair of shoes without any attention to the hole in your sock.

John Hamilton received a vote of confidence from the Republican National Committee, but hardly as a prophet, we assume.

We Must Face This Problem

Not long ago the headlines of our newspapers were literally aflame with the earthquake disaster in Central America which claimed the lives of about five hundred people. We have all been appalled over the slaughter of soldiers and citizens in Spain during its bloody civil war.

But distressing as these disasters are, the loss of life which they bring is not great when compared to the fearful slaughter that continues week in and week out on our public streets and highways.

American citizens lost their lives on our highways. More than a million were made cripples for the rest of their days. The property loss reaches the staggering total of almost one billion dollars. Yet we accept this condition with scarcely a protest, with only a shrug of the shoulders as much as to say, "Well, what can be done about it."

But leaders in safety work throughout the nation and persons interested in safety work here in Chilton County who have given the problem some study will tell you that something certainly can be done about it. All that we need today is an aroused public opinion, an awakened conscience to the horror, the suffering, and the heartaches that this needless slaughter causes.

Accidents don't happen, they tell us. There is a cause, and in 96 per cent of all cases that cause is due to a failure of the human element. Drivers who violate the rules of the highway and pedestrians who pay little attention to the elementary rules of safety are at fault. What can we do to enlighten these people to the danger's inherent in careless and reckless operation of a high power motor car? This is one of the burning questions of the hour.

We cannot attempt here to present some of the thoughts and plans which will promote safety. They would extend far beyond the limits of an editorial. But we can urge at this time that the citizens of Clanton realize the seriousness of the situation and accept the findings and recommendations of safety experts who have definite and specific plans to promote greater safety on our roads and streets.

The rules and regulations they desire are all advanced to make it safer for you to operate your motor car. It's your life and your health and property which are at stake.

What We Need

What we need here in Clanton is what all communities need—namely more men and women of vision to see a bright future ahead for the community and the ability and willingness to work effectively for the realization of that vision.

What we do not need are jealous, envious, and pessimistic people who see nothing ahead for themselves or for the community, who would rather throw a wet blanket on every enterprise than to offer a word of encouragement, who would prefer to criticize and knock the efforts of those who try rather than to undertake to carry just a small part of the burden themselves.

Gather Your Profit

"To my way of thinking," observes Roger W. Babson, "advertising and selling are going to play a tremendous part in the coming boom. The minute the low point of a depression is reached, and the turn towards better times comes, I become bullish on advertising. This bullishness develops into a white heat as business reaches the normal line."

These remarks followed by others of equal interest appeared in the Rotary Magazine. The thought he advances is significant for, as he points out, those who profit from the next boom must be able to realize that modern business tactics must be pursued.

He observes that you've got to work as hard during the boom to make money as you did during the depression to avoid loss, that you have got to maintain sales to come out on the top of the heap, that depression hits everyone but prosperity is selective as shown by the fact that only ten per cent of all business men really were able to make profit out of the 1929 boom.

His conclusion, in other words, is that we are approaching a period of active business in which there is opportunity for those who are sufficiently alert to grasp it. But this prosperity will not bring profits with it for those who are out of date in their business methods, for those who are not willing to work for business success, and for those who do not appreciate the fact that advertising is one of the greatest of all forces in modern business.

MORAL ECHOES

D. W. Haskew

While I was a lad on the farm three of us boys sat on the creek bank fishing with ruggedly provided tackle. We had rigged ourselves out with Sweet-gum poles, cotton string for lines and rusted hooks to carry the bait. One boy thought that he had a hard pull from a monstrous fish and he jerked his line with vigor. The pole went high and the rusty hook circled around finding the arm of the other lad and there it buried its barb into the flesh. It was no little job to get that hook out of the flesh of the boy in agony. To be sure it was an accident, but it was caused by carelessness. We meet people who are just that careless with barbed words. They fling them about saying that it matters not where they may fly, they belong to them, but beware, my friends, your barbed words will hit human hearts and will hurt where you did not intend. It is a rather delicate task to handle a human being who has been hurt by unkind words.

We had two lads to bless our home. One of them came to us as a light out of heaven. He lived two years and then one day God carried him on high. The other lad came also as a light out of heaven and he lived through childhood and into manhood. The first lad cost us but little but he was precious. The other lad cost us much in the way of food, clothing and cultivation, but he was worth it. Today he is a man among men and is doing his part in helping the world. One child cost little because he died in infancy, the other cost much because he lived and we prepared him to live the fuller life. What kind of a church do you want—one that is dead, or one that is alive? If you want a church that is alive, one that is growing and lifting the race, it is going to cost you something. Count every dollar that you spend for the church a dollar well spent. It is helping to grow your church and it is helping the world.

A tramp stood at the back door and begged the lady of the house for a cup of coffee. She ventured to ask, "My good man, what was it that made you a tramp?" He replied, "The wind," and then explained by saying, "I have always traveled with the wind, my good woman." In other words that man traveled the ways of least resistance. We have a great host of church tramps. They live with their backs to the ways of life and Christianity. They never line up with anything, they never accept any responsibility, they are always somewhere else when something is to be done, they travel the ways of least resistance. A church tramp is one who is not willing to face the winds that blow, the tasks that must be performed. He is one who expects other folks to provide the needs of his spiritual life while he drifts around and does his pleasure. What do you think of a tramp who begs for his living? Wonder what God thinks of "Church Tramps?"

I went home with a family from a country church and, on reaching the family room the wife addressed her husband thus: "Now, John, you go right into your room and take off that Sunday suit and hang it up in the closet out of the dust. That is your only Sunday suit and it will be many a day before you will be able to buy another." I have heard of both men and women who are like John in one respect—they have only one suit of religion and that is their Sunday suit. In fact, there is but one suit of religion and that suit should be worn every day. If I were called upon to put my finger on the one sore spot in church life, I would touch the membership right here. Like John, when we reach home from church on Sunday we take off our suit of religion and place it away in the dark for the entire week. We may get it out next Sunday if we go to church, but if we decide to go picnicking we just let it hang there for weeks and weeks. Look yourself over and see if you are wearing your religious suit now.

I heard a young lady snarl thus at her little brother who was slowly following her: "Why don't you come on and stop that limping and hobbling as you walk?" The little fellow replied: "Guess you would limp and hobble too if you had to carry this load and wear these shoes." Many of us are inclined to ridicule people when they go limping and hobbling along. It could be that many of those arrogant who are unable to do as you are doing, are carrying loads that you know nothing about. It may be that the reason why they hobble along they have a tack in their shoe. When you are inclined to ridicule folks who cannot keep pace with you, stop for one moment and ask yourself: "Would I do any better if I had to carry their load and walk in their shoes?" Many of us make believe that we would do better than the other fellow, but would you if you had to carry his load and wear his shoes?

THRIFT NOTES

"Now that thrift week is almost here," says the office boy, "It reminds me of old Sandy who used to go on excursion to express his sorrow when he had to buy a new suit. It happened every thirty years. One day he was clearing away bramble brush from his back yard with his feet bare."

"Man alive, he was asked, 'what you doin' that work bare footed for? You'll hurt your feet!'"

"My feet'll heal," says he, "but my shoes won't."

"He had a son who walked twice five miles to see a football game and then missed it because he was too tired to climb the fence."

CROWN OF THORNS
DOUBTS of the identity of the leading presidential candidates, so thoroughly dispelled early in 1896, sometimes have held on to the midst of the conventions.

So it was that the Democratic gathering of 1896 provided a tremendous upset, giving the party William Jennings Bryan, a leader who literally was to wear a "crown of thorns" through three unsuccessful campaigns.

No less than 13 candidates for the Democratic nomination were regarded seriously in 1896 and the usual stable of dark horses was present.

"Pitchfork Ben" Tillman of South Carolina, whose hat was definitely in the ring, prodded the delegates unmercifully and the wordy battles from the platform spread to one fist fight after another on the floor. Then Bryan was recognized.

"We are fighting in defense of our homes, our families, and posterity," he declaimed. "We have petitioned and our petitions have been scorned. We have begged and our entreaties have been disregarded. We have begged and they have mocked us when our calamity came. We beg no more, we entreat no longer, we petition no more—we defy them!"

His remarks were on the financial plank of the Democratic platform and Bryan fired them directly at the delegation from New York. Then he closed with the defiance which still rings down the corridors of time: "You shall not press down upon the brow of labor this downy opium of thorns, you shall not crucify mankind upon a cross of gold."

He "stopped the show." The delegates went wild. When the business of the convention could be resumed the day following, Bryan was nominated.

His defeat by McKinley, two succeeding failures for the presidency, in truth, settled a crown of thorns upon the brow of Bryan, which he was doomed to wear until the last public act of his life—participation in the famous "monkey" trial down in Dayton, Tennessee. He held, and he swayed, multitudes with the power of his oratory, but on election day he could not mark their ballots for them.

Fruits Need Planting Before Heavy Rains

Auburn, Ala.—Fruit plants should be put out before heavy spring rains begin so that the soil will be firmly settled around the roots by the time the weather warms up enough for growth to begin in the spring, advises Hubert Harris, instructor in horticulture at the Alabama Polytechnic Institute.

"It is very important that trees be set in a good location," he further advised. "Plants set near the farmstead should not be put in too close competition with shade trees."

"Where fruit trees are set the soil should be at least fairly fertile, and it should have a fairly deep, rather heavy and well-drained sub-soil."

THE ALABAMA'S QUILT

In the Alabama department of Archives and history in Montgomery is one of the most famous quilts in the world, which find their permanent resting place after many wanderings.

It is the quilt made by Confederate women during the Civil War to be auctioned for the benefit of the fund for the building of the warship Alabama, which caused the Federal a lot of trouble before she was finally sunk on June 19, 1864, by the Kearsarge, off Cherbourg, France.

After the quilt was made it was put up at auction, and time and again the lucky bidder would donate it back to be auctioned again. Thus it passed through many hands, and from it was realized much of the money for the purchase of the ship. It finally came into the possession of the family of Mrs. Mary Hutchinson Owens, who presented it to the state as a memento of the Lost Cause.

The Alabama was commanded by the intrepid Rafael Semmes, and during her eventful career of two years captured one Federal steamer and no less than 67 sailing vessels, besides causing the transfer of 348 Federal ships to the British flag. Her destruction by the Kearsarge, commanded by Captain Winslow, was a great relief to the Federal.

The Alabama went to the bottom of the sea, the Kearsarge was destroyed long after by being wrecked on a Caribbean reef in 1894, but the Alabama quilt, wrought by loving hands in what they considered a sacred cause, is preserved for posterity in the cradle of the Confederacy.

A BELATED RESOLUTION

By Clayton Rand

If I were a business man and were doing some "resolving" for the New Year, I'd first look one fact square in the face—business will be better in 1937.

Then, believe it or not, I'd figure out some way to present my story to the public intelligently and effectively through my local newspaper, and cash in on this increased prosperity.

The federal government has primed the business pump until we have more inflation than we had before the crash of 1929.

Business won't be good forever, but a man that can make some money under present conditions might well fold up his tent and look for a permanent berth in the public dole.

WITH YOUR HOME Demonstration Agent

CONDUCTED BY MISS META GRACE

The Farm Home
Facts of the Farm Home, its people and the part each of us play in the world today as they should be known. In the beginning, let me say each of us are just a part of this great universe, like the sky dotted with stars, so are the homes and our families. We make the homes beautiful and welcoming with sunshine or dreary and merely a place to eat and sleep. Through this great organization of ours, The Home Demonstration Clubs, we never before had so great a chance to be happy and successful. By belonging to a Home Demonstration Club, attending leadership meetings and working cooperatively we learn each other's ideas and get the knowledge of how to beautify our homes and surroundings, how to arrange the furniture properly, how to feed the family properly, how to cook and to sew, to save and spend our money advantageously.

Picture to yourself a visit. Come with me and let's go into the homes of those who are active club members and those who have never belonged to the clubs. Notice the difference in the woman's conversation, her dress, her outlook on life. The club woman's a thrifty person. We have our department of agriculture, who spend thousands of dollars in each state of the United States to give the men, women and boys and girls this simplified information, to those who may never get to attend college and who may be an outstanding success if they will use their time to best advantage. Practice reading so much daily. Practice what they have learned through their reading, through their clubs and through their daily experiences.

Since life is what we make it let's work with an understanding. Let's fight for what is right, let's keep our homes the most sacred place on earth, let's keep and bind our families with that beautiful bond of love and understanding so that when the children leave their fireside they will not be careless and negligent, they will not let this wonderful family spirit divide and lose its honor, its pride and its strength. Let's not have our country weakened by the common law marriages, let's not have our boys and girls of tomorrow with loose morals, low principles, but let's fight for what is right. Let's strive to build such a strong foundation that the homes of tomorrow will have so strong a foundation that even through the storms of troubles and trials comes sweeping in we can sit steady and comfortably knowing that we are doing our duty, that we are worshippers of a true and living God and not mere idols, that we are lending our cooperation to a Government that is backed by a president who is not only bringing us out of this chaotic period but will help to guide us onward to greater and bigger undertakings.

LYNCHING RECORD IN U. S. SHOWS DECIDED DECREASE

According to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute that there were 9 persons lynched in 1936. This is 11 less than the number, 20, for 1935; 6 less than the number, 15, for 1934; and 19 less than the number, 28, for 1933. Six of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; two were taken from jails, and 4 from officers of the law outside of jails.

There were 35 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern States and thirty in Southern States. In thirty of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the five other instances armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of six persons, seven white and sixty negroes. The offenses charged were: rape, 2; attempted rape, 3; murder, 1; attempted murder, 1; strike, 1; charge not reported, 1.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are as follows: Arkansas, 2; Florida, 1; Georgia, 5; Mississippi, 1.

Every Farm Should Have A TELEPHONE

A farm without a telephone is so isolated, that once you have a telephone on the farm, you'll wonder why you ever tried to do without it. A telephone call will often save many miles of travel.

And, as one farmer says, "the telephone not only keeps us in touch with the market for farm products and able to call the family doctor or the veterinarian, but it adds happiness to our home in being able to sit by our fireside and talk to our friends and loved ones."

A single sale of some farm product, made at the right time with the aid of the telephone, might pay a year's cost of the service. In case of fire, summoning help by telephone may be of priceless value.

To order your telephone, just get in touch with the telephone business office when you're in town. You'll find the cost is so reasonable that you really can't afford to try to do without it.

FARMERS COOPERATING IN CONTROLLING EROSION

Farmers in demonstration projects and camp areas of the Soil Conservation and Extension Service in Alabama have signed cooperative agreement to put into effect erosion-control practices on a total of 307,118 acres, according to O. C. Medlock, acting State coordinator.

The purpose of these demonstration areas, Medlock explained, is to give farmers in the entire section represented by each area an opportunity to see these methods in actual operation on the farms of cooperators under conditions similar to those found on their own farms.

MORE BABIES ADOPTED

It speaks well for the humane spirit of our people that the number of orphans and children of incompetent parents who have been adopted into comfortable homes has greatly increased during the depression.

Since 1927 the number of such adoptions has been about 100,000 annually. During the same period the number of homeless children who have been cared for by institutions remained practically at a standstill, the yearly average being about 160,000.

These facts are presented by the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor in Washington, which points out that the difference between institutional and home care shows a significant trend in the housing of these unfortunate little ones.

Commenting on this humane trend the Houston Post says: "Such children have brought joy to thousands of childless homes. The door of every childless home in America should be thrown open to one or more of these unfortunate tots. It will mean happiness to the foster parents and a real chance for the youngsters upon whom fate has not smiled."

If our Christian faith be well founded, the adoption of a homeless child must be pleasing to Him who said: "Suffer little children to come unto Me."

How Much Is A Million Dollars? How Long Is Thirty-Five Years?

On December 7, 1936, this bank was THIRTY-FIVE years old. Can you visualize the changes that have taken place in this period? In 1901 William McKinley was president of the United States. Theodore Roosevelt, Taft, Wilson, Harding, Coolidge, Hoover and Franklin D. Roosevelt have followed. In 1901 the United States was emerging from the after effects of the war with Spain. Time has passed, depressions have come and gone, the world has gone through the worst war in its history. In Clanton in the year 1901 there were three brick buildings, no paved streets or sidewalks, no automobiles, no water works, no electric lights, no radios. There was one bank in Chilton County, a little bank in a little village. The village has become a city, the bank has grown with it and has become an institution of total resources of a MILLION DOLLARS. The growth of the community is reflected in the growth of the bank. The figures in the statement below show a new all time high mark for Chilton County Banks. This statement is the first ever to be published by a Chilton County Bank showing total resources of a MIL-LION DOLLARS. How much is a MILLION? Place a million dollars end to end and they will reach five hundred thousand feet, almost one hundred miles. A path of one dollar bills reaching from Birmingham to Montgomery would be quite a stretch of cash. Naturally we are proud of the PEOPLES SAVINGS BANK and we feel that you, too, are proud of the fact that Chilton County has a million dollar institution. The officers, directors and stockholders do not deserve the credit. It is you good people who, by your achievement through the years, have made it possible. We have only guided the bank's policy, it has taken your efforts to build the community, to build the agricultural and industrial interest of Chilton County and to build its banks. The bank is a public servant, if the community prospers, the bank prospers. We contend that our community has prospered. The figures in the statement show that this bank has prospered. We publish below our first statement, Dec. 31, 1901, and our current statement, December 31, 1936; compare them.

ward W. Smith, was held from the Brislin Brothers chapel at 3 p.m. with Dr. A. F. Fogartie, pastor of the Broad Street Presbyterian Church, officiating. Burial was in New Live Oak Cemetery. Pallbearers were G. C. Blanton, Earl Childers, Harmon Carter, Catesby R. Jones, Emile Siegel and Donald McMahon.

The two remaining fire victims were in critical conditions Monday night. Mrs. Clarence Agee was reported to have spent a "fair" night Sunday, while Mrs. James T. Rowell was said to be "holding her own."

Announcement was made Monday by Archibald Reeves, chairman for Selma's 1937 Roosevelt birthday ball and by Henry L. Doherty, national chairman, that no ball will be held. The affair was set for Jan. 29 and contract had been made with the Auburn Cavaliers for the event. Three previous balls held at the Country Club were largely attended each year by Phantom Club members.

Mrs. Smith was born in Meridian, Miss., Jan. 1, 1898, the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. H.L. Bardwell. Her father was prominent in financial circles there, as president of the First National Bank.

Graduating from the Meridian schools she attended Mississippi State College for Women at Jackson, and after graduating there continued her studies by post-graduate work at Columbia University, N.Y., preparing herself for teaching in the Meridian High School.

Her marriage took place in 1928 to Ed Smith, of this city. Mrs. Smith had been affiliated with a number of organizations. She was a member of the Charity League, the American Legion Auxiliary, of the West End Club, the Phantom Club, and took an active part in the work of the First Presbyterian Church.

A number of Selma business firms remained closed during the hour of the funeral, which was attended by a number of out-of-town persons, including Trotter Jones State adjutant of the American Legion Department of Alabama.

Every B. T. U. Department is urged to be present. We will have Mr. Chester L. Quarles, a state worker, with us.

May we each resolve to make this a better year of service in our church work.

More than 30,000 families in Alabama were aided by the Resettlement Administration during its activities up to November 1.

Pictured above are the old and the new buildings of the Peoples Savings Bank. The upper photo is the building on Second Avenue where the "million dollar" bank is comfortably quartered and is one of the most modern and attractive buildings in Alabama.

The lower view shows the building occupied by the institution since it was founded in 1901, thirty-five years ago. The new home was erected, or rather remodeled from the old building in 1935.

News' Anniversary

pinching financial conditions of the country during the past ten years and through service, satisfaction and courtesy, built the foundation which began the forward steps bringing the news paper up to its present standing.

In 1930 the News assembled and published what is believed to have been the largest single issue of a weekly newspaper ever published in this country. That was the widely publicized "Booster Edition" of forty pages carrying step by step in word and picture, the history and progress of this country.

Politically Speaking

In politics, the News since its founding in 1921 has been a staunch supporter of the principles of the Democratic Party, although at that time and up to 1932, this county was solidly in the arms of an opposing party.

With continued efforts, undaunted and fighting for what it believed right, the News aided in electing the first Democratic official in 1932 this county had in approximately twenty-five years. The editor of the News handling the campaign in this county for the Democratic presidential nominee, saw a county swing in a history making election in 1932 and cast the larger number of ballots for that nominee—the first time that had occurred in forty-four years.

Continuing its fight toward that end, the News, without fear, without condemnation, and without giving unjust criticism, saw almost every county office taken by a Democratic candidate in 1934 and two years later realized the ambition of seeing all but one county official replaced by a Democrat.

The yearly total of advertising carried in the News has shown a noticeable and continual climb each year and the amount carried in 1935 and 1936 eclipsed any former amount.

For sometime, the editorship of the News was under the control of Vernie Teel, with Billy Smith as its publisher. Mr. Teel came to this county from Coosa County and spent the greater part of his newspaper career with the News. From here he went to Chambers County, where he accepted a position as managing editor of the Chambers County News.

Following his resignation to accept this position, Bonnie Hand, who has completed six years of efficient service with the News, became associate editor and still holds that position. It was with this newspaper that Mr. Hand had his first taste of printers ink and his first glimpse of a piece of type.

The personnel of the News is now composed of all young men, who are studying while working, the newer methods in printing and journalism. The success of the News is attributed to the confidence and support of the people of the county and to the fact that its first advertisers and customers are still patronizing the plant.

The new home of the News, located on the main highway through the city has been termed by many newspaper people as one of the most efficiently arranged plants of its size in the state or elsewhere.

War Clouds

The American Legion may have the best opportunities to shape policies and strength in the near future. War clouds are coming bigger and blacker in every large foreign country. Countries are having troubles, and the United States even slipping a notch—although quite innocently. Legion strives for peace, and hoping we won't have to go there to fight, but if the war start over here, we believe they'll watch out, because then we'll be something.

300 Years

Speaking of war clouds, we're afraid that if we went into Levine's store last Thursday we'd have seen some. In the well known New Year's greeting from this store, published in last week's issue, it read "Our Policy For 1637." Of course it was purely a typographical error on the part of the printer. We know too, that Mr. Levine shows his usual friendly attitude and grin and take it. He did and better after he said "Well, what a hundred years between friends' 1637 should have been 1937."

EVAN PARRISH

His outstanding work in the Methodist Church, of which he was a member, and his activities in the circles won for him many friends. A steward in the church and son and has the distinction of holding almost all positions in church that of pastor. The large crowd attending the quiet yet impressive services attested to the friendship for this man.

Funeral services were held Saturday afternoon at two o'clock at the Methodist Church with the Rev. C. W. Parrish, of Dr. E. M. pastor of the Clanton Baptist officiating.

Active pallbearers were E. H. L. C. Ross, Grady H. Deraunus, Horace White, John Strong, Honorary pallbearers: A. Gray, V. J. Elmore, M. L. C. VanDerwee, A. S. Prince, J. Alred, Frank J. Callen and L. art.

He is survived by his wife, one daughter, Helen; three sons, Mrs. Garry Borland of Birmingham, Mrs. Sally Colson of Atlanta and Roy Osborn of Daphne, Fla. Surviving also are his parents, Leonard of Birmingham and H. Wetumpka.

Interment took place in the cemetery with Martin & Son in charge.

BOY SCOUTS TO HAVE AN ACTIVE YEAR FOR 1937

Nine Member Are Presented With Official Badges And Cards Here

This year looms as being a bright one for the local Troop of Boy Scouts of America, according to Reese Mullins, scoutmaster. Last Monday night one of the most impressive and interesting meetings held in sometime by the local Troop, took place at the city hall.

At this meeting with a Boy Scout executive present, nine members of the Troop were given their official Boy Scout badges and cards having passed the tenderfoot tests. The awarding of these badges and cards was made during an impressive service with the Scout executive presiding. He impressed on the youths the great importance attached to receiving a Boy Scout badge.

The Troop has received its official charter and is growing in memberships and activities.

Local Red Cross Receives Benefit Legislator's Pay

When Chilton County's Representative, Charlie Cox, received his check for his salary for the famous 14 day Christmas holiday, he began to look around to find some worthy cause to give it to.

Representative Cox voted against the payment to legislators during the extended holiday, and made considerable argument against it. "I don't feel that we were entitled to be paid during the holidays and so voted against it," Mr. Cox stated.

However, the resolution was passed and the legislators paid. A News reporter found Mr. Cox's check in the hands of the local Red Cross Disaster chairman, J. Mell Martin, who stated that Mr. Cox donated the check for the relief of the distressed in this county.

LARGE GROCERY STORE PLANNED FOR CLANTON

Clanton Cash Store Buys Wade Grocery, Enlarges Into Huge Store

Announcement was made here this week by O. B. DeLoach, manager of the Clanton Cash Store, to the effect that they had purchased the Wade Grocery & Market. The sale was made January 11th.

This purchase will no doubt bring to Clanton one of the largest grocery stores in this section. W. F. Irvin, formerly manager of the Taylor Grocery, will be in charge of the second store of the Clanton Cash. He will have as his assistants, Adolphus Motts in the meat department and Greeley Powell.

Mr. DeLoach stated that the stores would be connected by a large storage room in the rear, as they are only one door apart. This will combine the two buildings. He stated that the purchase was made in order to carry a larger stock, have more room and better telephone and delivery service as the former Clanton Cash Store was becoming crowded due to increasing business. Another delivery truck will be added, also.

Grocery orders, outgoing and incoming, will be loaded at a side entrance from both buildings. This arrangement will eliminate busy telephone lines and orders being delivered late.

The rear of the two stores will serve as a huge storage room for a more complete line of feeds for poultry and dairies.

Mr. Irvin, the manager of the newly acquired section of the Clanton Cash Store, invites all his friends to drop by to see him in the building formerly occupied by the Wade Grocery & Market.

"THE PLACE JUST ABOUNDS WITH BLACK WIDOWS" HE SAYS

Stanley Mims, well known citizen of Route 6, dropped in the News office the other day and presented the editor with a jar containing three fine specimens of live black widow spiders. They were found near his home under rocks in the yard.

"Say, we've got a lot of those things around out there and haven't thought much about them, except to see that one didn't get hold of us," he told the News. The spiders brought to the News were full grown and well developed with the usual red spot. We hope Mr. Mims doesn't bring one in his pocket.

REPORTS WILL COUNT MORE BY SATURDAY

Huge Valuable Prizes Will Be Awarded On January 23

CONTESTANTS SHOULD MAKE WEEK COUNT

Contestants in the Chilton County News' big prize subscription campaign, headed by an $800.00 Dodge Sedan, have reached the turn, make your last report in place for the final dash. From now on until the final January 23rd, they will battle for supremacy.

Leading contestants who wish to win one of the major prizes are preparing with feverish haste and intensity to make their final stand for victory, this Saturday night, January 16th—the day of the Second Vote Period, and incidentally the last of subscriptions to be made direct to the Campaign Manager.

The Chilton County News has added hundreds of subscriptions to their list and hundreds of the old subscribers have renewed. It is hard to estimate the number of subscriptions that will be turned in this week. Each contestant is making every effort to gain a lead before the big reduction in votes. Everyone is wondering who will win the new Dodge Sedan. The proud winner of this handsome $850.00 Sedan is likely to be the contestant who does not become discouraged at the usual rumors.—The one who will not admit defeat and who does not wish to see her friends who have helped her year of the shop, lend much help. The one who will not try to figure just how many votes it will take to win, but who goes out to get every vote that (Continued to back page)

Fiddlers Convention Will Be Held Soon

A real old-time fiddlers convention will be held on January 29th at the Thorsby Junior High School, according to an announcement given by N. W. Cox. The first and second prizes will be cash and there will be prizes for all entrants. Admission will be ten and fifteen cents. Further announcements will be made next week, it was stated. It is being sponsored by the Athletic Association.

MODERN BEAUTY SCHOOL IS MAKING MUCH PROGRESS

The Modern Beauty School of Clanton is making excellent progress in training young women in modern methods of beauty work. The recently installed new Realistic permanent wave machine and the untiring efforts on the part of Mrs. W. C. Robinson, manager of the shop, lend much to the developing talent of the students.

There are seven students enrolled in this school now. There have been several students to graduate in the past year. One of these students made ninety-eight on her final examination last week.

This is a school at home where you can finish a complete course and get your diploma and we know this is a great advantage to the girls in Clanton county who are interested in this line of training.

Bookholdt-Yeargan Marriage Solemnized

The marriage of Miss Lena Yorgan to Mr. B. F. Bookholdt took place Sunday afternoon at the home of Dr. S. J. Ezell, pastor of the Baptist Church. The ceremony was performed in the presence of only a few close friends.

Mrs. Bookholdt is a popular young lady of this county, and attended the local high school. She is the daughter of the Rev. Rufus Yorgan, of Clanton.

Mr. Bookholdt holds a responsible position as bookkeeper with the Superior Dry Cleaners of Montgomery. He attended high school here and junior college at Newton. They will make their home in Montgomery.

MRS. ROOSEVELT BECOMES NEWSPAPER GUILD MEMBER

New York—Mrs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt became a member-at-large of the American Newspaper Guild recently through her association with the United Feature syndicate as columnist. According to Milton Kaufman, secretary of the New York guild, a letter of application was received from the wife of the President, dated Washington, D.C., and she was immediately accepted for membership.

Benjamin Franklin

We pay honor this week to the memory of Benjamin Franklin, one of the greatest figures in American history, by the observance of National Thrift Week. But those who think of Franklin only in connection with his many canny sayings admonishing thrift and prudence, do not hold a true conception of the man's many amazing qualities.

Franklin was a philosopher, an advocate of thrift, moderation and good sense. Every citizen even today may consider these sayings with benefit to himself.

He was a diplomat, possibly one of the greatest diplomats who ever represented America in a foreign court. To his genius as a diplomat may be credited the intervention of France in the war of the Revolution, at a time when the outcome was shrouded in uncertainty.

He was a scientist. His experiments with electricity, though crude according to present day standards, won not only the interest but the respect of all men of science of his time.

He was a practical inventor. One of the most valuable and practical of all of his many inventions was the development of the heating stove. In a time when homes were heated only by huge open fireplaces, his practical invention brought comfort and happiness to millions of people.

He was an educator. To him is credited the first movement for universal education. With vision far ahead of his time he saw that democracy can function only when founded on an enlightened, intelligent, and educated citizenry.

He was a business man, a printer and publisher. And from what we know of his work as a printer and publisher we may assume that he was a man of great ability who knew how to profit in business even in the face of adverse circumstances.

He was a statesman of the first rank. This is best exemplified by the notable part he played in the Constitutional Convention when the charter of our government was founded. There were times during that convention when the clash of interests and opinions almost brought the convention to a break-up. It was then that the moderate judgment and wise counsel of Benjamin Franklin saved the day.

Those who have studied his life pronounce him one of the greatest figures in our entire history. It is well, therefore, that we observe his birthday anniversary each year and consider the value of his many contributions to American civilization.

On Home Ownership

Among the trends in Chilton County which we view with interest and satisfaction is the growing interest in home ownership. A survey of the community will show that more people are buying and building homes in this vicinity than at any similar period in many years. All indications are that this trend will become more pronounced during the year 1937.

This is a healthy trend. Home ownership, after all, lies at the very foundation of community stability. When people own their own homes they demonstrate intangible form their faith and belief in the future of the community. It is furthermore among home owners that we generally find the public spirited citizens whose work can be relied upon when a job must be done to develop the community's assets.

It is our opinion that an investment in your own home is one of the safest and best of all investments which you can find at the present time. We take pleasure in encouraging our readers to consider the present advantages it offers.

These European dictators evidently know how to get people in a warlike attitude. Putting them on short rations makes them want to fight.

The Home Town

"Whenever I've been away from home for even a few days, perhaps at a convention or just following a pleasure or business visit to the city, the old home town always looked mighty good to me."

Thus observed a friend of ours recently. We believe he has expressed the experience of most of us. This feeling is particularly pronounced with us after a visit to a large city. We find that we are glad to get out of the noise, the confusion, the dirt, the traffic jams, and the general discomfort that we always encounter in a big city. When we return home the small community in which we live assumes new attractions. For a time, but all too short a time, we appreciate the many advantages that life here in Chilton Clanton has to offer.

And while we're on the subject it seems just too bad that we can't maintain this attitude toward our home town at all times. There is something about life here which is particularly gracious and enjoyable about which we should be constantly aware. Aside from the matter of comfort which the small community offers, there are the friendly personal contacts that characterize all of our activities. A business day is not one devoted only to trying tasks, but one in which we make many personal and friendly contacts all of which tend to make life enjoyable.

This is probably why we experience such a glow of pleasure upon a return to Clanton after a brief absence. It is a comfortable place in which to live and a friendly place in which to work.

Public Health And Soil Conservation

We always believed a carrot was a carrot and spinach was spinach, and that they provided our bodies with certain food requirements if taken in proper proportions. Recently we have been led to understand, however, that many of our vegetables are lacking in necessary mineral salts, vitamins and other needed substances because the soil upon which they were grown was deficient.

This opens a new and highly interesting field of research. Food crops produced on deficient soils are lacking in necessary minerals, according to experiments at some of the leading institutions of research in the country. This lack of food elements essential for health contributes heavily to our national doctor and hospital bills, we are informed.

So here we find added reasons for intelligently directed soil conservation work. Within the last few weeks many of our farmers received a government subsidy check for contributing their part to the soil conservation program, but this was largely a production control plan. True, some benefits were paid for liming soil and producing soil building crops, but we doubt seriously if the possibilities of real soil conservation has ever yet been widely explored.

From the time when soil conservation as a program of agricultural rehabilitation was first presented we felt that it had great possibilities. But in the light of the findings of chemists and scientists engaged in research, it now appears far more important than we ever assumed.

It now becomes obvious that the general public has a definite interest in the program. It is not something of concern and interest to farmers alone. The nation's health seems to be at stake and in view of that the millions of dollars expended to stabilize agriculture, our greatest industry, and promote public health should be regarded as a sound national investment.

Don't hesitate to write to your congressman, advises a friend. He has plenty of secretaries to do his work for him.

We feel that the greatest enemy of the freedom of the press is the propagandist whether he's on the government payroll or private payroll.

It's well enough to strive to become a soldier of success if one doesn't pay too high a price for the uniform.

Trying to act busy when you have nothing to do is one of the hardest jobs we know anything about.

There are always a few old fashioned fellows who believe it is as important to teach a young man how to make a living as to tap dance.

If we could only learn to consider ideas on their merit rather than on personalities, there would be quite a boom here in Clanton in community progress.

MORALECHOES.

D. W. Haskew

As I walked into the church a minister was in the pulpit delivering his message. He was so calm and composed, so unemotional and so unsentimental that I was reminded of a war statue on the square of an inland town. It seemed to me that if a living man was talking to dying men about their souls that he should show a little animation, but not so with that gentleman. Abraham Lincoln was never known to be very religious, but I have always admired his estimate of a man in the pulpit. Here is what he said: "When I see a man deliver a sermon to men, I want to see him acting like he was fighting bees. If you have ever seen a man being attacked by a swarm of mad bees, you have an idea of what the great president meant. The mannerism of some preachers in the pulpit seems to say, 'You are going to hell and I am glad of it.'"

Recently the papers have been full of Sara's nine dials in one day. The little doctor gained wide publicity by using the exchange bullets and cross swords with nine men because of an imaginary insult. They had accused him of marrying his wife for her money. Anyway the enraged man craved the privilege of defending his honor by meeting nine of his foes in one day. That was rather heavy fighting, and we rather admire the doctor's courage. What I want to know of you is, have you the courage to fight nine duels a day against the foes that would destroy your honor? If you are going to be a real man, a noble woman, you have got to cross swords with the enemies of your character and life. The hardest duel that you have to fight daily is none other than your own self. Learn the art of defending your honor daily.

A news boy dashed up and down the sidewalk crying the sale of his papers. Showing one beneath my nose he said, "Mr. buy this paper—it will tell you all about the awful train wreck and how many people were mangled." Wanting to keep up with the news I bought the paper and started at once to locate the big headlines telling of the disaster. On the last page I found a little note saying that a train had wrecked in China. Several coaches had gone down an embankment, but not a life was lost. The little rascal was doing a landside business, but it was surely a deception. I never expect to buy a newspaper from that lad. It never pays to deceive in business, or in any other relation of life. Pushing business under pretense may gain a few dollars for the time being, but those dollars are lost in the long run. One of the finest virtues of life is to be perfectly honest. Try it. It works.

While sitting on my cottage porch I saw a school of Porpoise go by. All of those fish had the same habit. I observed that every twenty seconds those fish would come to the top of the water and blow the spray into the air and then go back under. Not a porpoise would blow a bubble while under the water. He always waited until he came to the top. This habit is not followed by the human race. We are inclined to think that many who reach the top blow and bubble a lot, but they are not alone. We observe many who are very low down as they do a lot of blowing. Recently I listened to the report of a mission preacher. I knew what he had been doing during the year and it occurred to me that he was blowing louder at conference than he had worked during the year. If you must blow, follow the habit of the Porpoise and blow when you are on top.

At one time Charles Lindbergh came near wrecking his plane on a private landing field. He had gone into the air, leaving his pet dog on the field. When the call of the Aviator was over he glided to the ground. His pet dog saw him and made a dash to meet the plane, running directly in front. Lindbergh swerved to miss his dog and for a moment it seemed that an awful crash awaited him. A friendly dog came near wrecking the plane that carried his master. Many a time have we known a man's friends to get him in an embarrassing situation. A great man said "My friends have embarrassed me a thousand times." If you have a sure enough friend be careful not to get in front of him—you might get him in an embarrassing position. Lindbergh was glad to see his pet, but not in his path.

BOYS 4-H CLUB WORK

The Cooper 4-H Club held a meeting on Friday morning at 10:30 o'clock. The house was called to order by the president, the roll was called and each one gave his part well, which was on "The Care of Poultry." Mr. B. N. Ivey, Assistant County Agent in 4-H Club work gave a talk on general care of poultry.

The meeting was closed in a manly order and a song was directed by the song leader.

NEW CAR SALES

Chevrolet's new car sales totaled 101,286 units, in December, it was announced by W. E. Holler, general sales manager. This figure represents an increase over the same month in 1935, of more than 21,000 units, as the record last year ago was 80,189 new car sales.

Sales of new trucks included in the total unit sales figure, were 17,516. Used car sales during the month were 148,163.

Mr. Holler cited these figures as added proof of the fact that American buying power is on a decided upswing and that a general increase in the potential market for new cars exists.

A Review by Thomas W. Martin, President, Alabama Power Company

TEN YEARS AGO the annual use of electricity by the average American consumer was only 391 kilowatt hours. The average use in the United States in November, 1936, was 1,133 kilowatt hours.

Ten years ago 374 miles of rural electric lines served Alaska farms. Today there are 7,000 miles of such lines and 1,000 additional miles will be built during 1937. The number of miles of rural lines has increased each year of the decade—due to this company's long interest in rural electrification.

Ten years ago our taxes amounted to approximately $837,000 for the year, or about $15 per customer. For 1936 they will be about $2,600,000 or about $23 per

"LARGE END UP" RULE SAVES HATCHING EGGS

Hatching eggs to be hauled or shipped to the hatchery should be packed snugly into the case with the large end up, says Berley Winton, in charge of the poultry office of the Bureau of Animal Industry, as hatching eggs are less likely to be broken when in this position than if they are packed with

ooo

Saul M. Goldstein

Historians evaluate the degree of civilization of any particular period which they happen to be discussing on the basis of the culture of the people as evidenced by their remains. We still praise highly the days of ancient Greece and Rome because of the beautiful art of that time which survives to this day; the philosophies evolved in the schools of Aristotle, Plato and Socrates guide the people of the twentieth century; and the tales which have come down to us through the medium of Homer's poetry still thrill us today, thousands of years after the creative genius which gave them life ceased to breathe.

All of us, although in varying degrees, delight in seeing beautiful statuary and pictures, in reading beautiful poems and stories, and in hearing beautiful music. Tastes may vary, and "one man's meat is another man's poison," but the basic principle is there: we not only receive pleasure from our physical senses, but even—and often to a far greater degree, from our mental faculties.

Take it all together, add it up, and you can reach but one sum: another argument to raise the Free Public Library in Clanton. If you see people starving for meat and drink, you immediately dig down into your larder or your pocketbook, unless you have a heart of stone; but we can all sit by quietly and see an entire county—Chilton County—starved into a mental and intellectual slow death from a lack of good reading matter without thinking any more about it.

There is a distinct difference between reading and reading, if my point is clear. Child or adult, the average human being—and that includes you and me—will generally take the easiest way. Mothers who will spend months and years training their children to eat "right," because they know it is good for them will pay no attention to what those same children or even they themselves are reading. Why? The only reason I can advance is that it never occurs to them that reading the wrong things, or not reading at all, might be harmful to them in future years.

A Free Public Library—and by Free, I mean free of cost to the reading public, except perhaps for small fines incurred for delays in returning books or damage to them—would serve in a big way to correct that. Such a library, with a competent librarian, could provide sufficient and proper reading matter, selective at its source, to be both entertaining and instructive.

Get A Bargain And Help Someone Win A New Dodge Car

The Chilton County News big Prize Subscription Contest is now on its last lap. The contestants are working hard selling subscriptions at the small price of only $1.00 per year. It is a splendid opportunity to renew your subscription, become one of the News subscribers and receive a real bargain for 52 weeks for only one dollar. And, too, you will be helping some lady win a new 1937 Dodge two-door sedan which is being offered by the News to the one having the largest number of votes when the campaign ends.

FARMERS ARE PLANTING BETTER SOYBEAN SEED

Montgomery, Ala.—Alabama farmers are planting much better soybean seed than they were five years ago, reports R. J. Goode, commissioner of agriculture.

When seed testing work was started in Alabama more than five years ago in about 30 per cent of the soybeans bought in the state were misbranded. Last year only one of the 180 samples tested by the department was misbranded.

Please do not mistake me. I am not arguing for a library which would be equipped with old books from private homes which are no longer suited for anything better than the junk pile. It has long been a custom in numbers of places for homes to donate generously of their book stores—that is, of those books which were popular fiction twenty to fifty years ago, or of text books which have long gone out of date. To start a library with such a collection of books is like building a home on a swampy foundation. Clanton's first Free Public Library should start off with brand-new books, chosen with care by a competent Library Board, possibly assisted by the chief librarian of some large city library, such as may be found in Montgomery or in Birmingham. It should have light fiction, classical works, prose, poetry, encyclopedias. It can start small but it should aim high.

I believe that the city administration would be glad to furnish space for such a venture—at least at the beginning. Popular subscription, in co-operation with such an institution as the Carnegie Foundation, could furnish the books and the Maintenance and Operation Fund.

Anyway, that's what I think.

CONSTRUCTION UNDER F. H. A. SHOWS LARGE INCREASE

According to information just released from the office of Robert Jemison, Jr., State Director Federal Housing Administration, more than 700 new homes have been built in Alabama, under the Federal housing Administration plan. These homes have been constructed in 92 different towns in the State.

The volume of business done in Alabama, under Title II of the National Housing Act, for the year 1935 showed an increase of 31 per cent over that of 1934. During the year 1935 a total of 1256 applications for an amount of $3,513,074 were filed while in 1934 the amount was $4,629,464. Of the total amount of applications filed during the year 1935, $1,808,790 were for the construction of new homes. This being approximately 40 per cent of the total.

The percentage of new construction applications filed in 1935 showed an increase of 75 per cent over that of 1934. Title II of the Act has to do with the insuring of mortgages and to aid in construction of new homes, the acquisition of homes already in existence and the refinancing of mortgages.

Loans have been made in 139 different towns in the State, by 108 banks and other financial institutions. Under the terms of the National Housing Act no funds are furnished by the Government, but they are furnished by financial institutions, and the loans are insured by the Federal Housing Administration.

Title I of the Act has to do with the making of loans for the purpose of altering, repairing and modernizing homes and business property. Loans of this character have been made in every County in the State, and the volume has reached 11,000 for an amount of $3,500,000.

AMERICAN LEGION CON. POSTPONED, SUNDAY FEB. 14

The American Legion Post Commanders' and Adjutants' Conference, scheduled to be held in Montgomery on January 10th, has been postponed until Sunday, February 14th.

Department Commander Taylor Boyd authorized the dates of the Conference to be changed in order to have National Commander Harry W. Colmery of Topeka, Kansas, as the guest speaker.

The National Commander is spending the week of February 13-19 in the Southern Departments. All Alabama Legionnaires are invited to attend the Conference on the 14th of February, to meet and hear the man who is leading the American Legion in 1937.

Alabama's eight production credit associations loaned farmers of the state over $2,500,000 in 1935. The amount of loans by associations follows: Auburn, $237,000; Anniston, $168,000; Bay Minette, $146,000; Demopolis, $430,000; Huntsville, $348,000; Montgomery, $850,000; Ozark, $178,000; and Russellville, $186,000.

FAIRVIEW

The Fairview 4-H Club met Thursday afternoon, December 17, 1935, at 2 P.M. The meeting was called to order by the president, Paul Popwell. The secretary called the roll and read the minutes of the last meeting. The pledge of the club was repeated by all the members present.

"Save the Soil and the Saplings," was the subject of the program discussed by the following: Aleec Culp, Lois Durbin, Sarah Williams, Jackson Chandley, Paul Popwell, Olivia Gilliland and Edwin Culp.

After the program was given Mr. E. N. Ivey, our 4-H Club director, gave a short discussion about the care that should be given to young saplings.

As there was no other business the meeting adjourned.

Reporter, Lois Durbin.

Brief Farm News

Eighteen farm leaders of Alabama Experiment Station Extension Service are scheduled to attend the program of the 38th annual convention of the Association of Agricultural Workers in Nashville, Tenn., Jan. 15-16, to discuss various agricultural subjects and problems.

The Farm Credit Administration in New Orleans is holding a series of farm meetings in every Alabama county during the latter part of the year and the first of February meetings farm credit officials plan how loans are being made to assist them in their operations.

Practical New Year's Resolution

Let me say that I am interested in any Church or other institution just to keep it alive. Unless it performs a real service, it—like the fig tree—should die. There are so many good ways in which to use our time—and of time we have but a very limited amount—that we can do only a fraction of what we would like to do. Furthermore, I do not attend church primarily to be entertained or even "inspired." An eloquent preacher, an enticing choir, or a beautiful auditorium are all the good; but they are not essential to me. Certainly no radio or magazine can take the place of any church with a consecrated minister, priest or rabbi. Why, then, do I go to church?

"I perhaps go to church for selfish reasons. I enjoy my church as I enjoy my daily walk. I never listened to any priest or preacher from whom I could not learn something. I even enjoy a plain service of worship from the Prayer Book without any sermon. Yes, I sometimes attend a Quaker meeting with only silence. But to get good from church going one must make it a habit. It is the systematic daily walks that do us good—not the occasional walk. Church going is like advertising in one way. We must keep constantly and incessantly at it to make it pay! Then we can be guaranteed good dividends. In fact, were I a preacher, I would offer to refund in full the annual subscription to the church of anyone who, after attending 75 per cent of the Sundays, feel that he has not got his money's worth.

"There is another reason why I go to some church service every Sunday. This is to encourage my children and grandchildren to acquire the habit of church going. We oldsters may check out before real trouble comes to our nation. But let me tell you that the younger generation will need to have something more permanent than real estate, bank accounts, insurance, or even democracy. Unless they have a sane spiritual foundation, they are licked. We can do for them far more by setting them an example of church going than by bequeathing them land, securities, or any other property. Moreover, I am just talking hard-boiled common sense. Go to Sunday School with them. Take an active interest in the Young People's work of your church. It's the biggest thing you can do for your family.

"Finally, I feel that it should lengthen your life to attend some church service regularly! What I say this, my business friends laugh at me; while my ministerial friends call me worldly minded for giving a material reason why people should acquire the church-going habit." However, from many years' study of church attendance statistics, I am convinced that this habit tends to prolong the lives of regular churchgoers. But do not take my word for it. Study the experience tables of our own denomination. Yes, friends, make a New Year's resolution to acquire the church-going habit."

ROGER W. BABSON

"P. S. One thing more: Use your influence to have your children and grandchildren attend a small college of high standing, one to which your church denomination contributes. Avoid big colleges, especially those 'popular' colleges which have thrown religion out the window."—From Babson's Reports, Babson Park, Mass.

Major Projects—Women's Work Foods

Special menus planning for balanced foods has been given in addition to a study being made of foods values. The various types of foods were classified under the groups and orders in which they come. Then the club women plan special menus from these foods. These were given prior to the leadership school as a foundation for the study of the best methods of cooking. Fourteen clubs with two hundred and sixtyone present attended these demonstrations.

Leadership School
The leadership school was held at the Baptist Church on Sunday, Jan. 10, giving a balanced breakfast, dinner and supper was prepared. The Home Agent was assisted by Mrs. Margaret Dutto of the Alabama Power Company, who cooperated by furnishing the power and equipment, also the groceries for the demonstration. Twenty-eight leaders attended this meeting in spite of the downpour of rain.

Foods—4-H Club Work

Thirteen demonstrations have been given to five hundred and twenty-two club girls. The study of foods values and the classification of foods have been given the girls. The girls held Christmas programs in connection with their December meeting. The Baker giving the winning play which was a health play and the Thomas Jr. giving the winning Christmas play and program. Special foods charts and bulletins were studied and discussed. A special program for the holidays for the 4-H club girls to hold in their homes and communities was given.
Home work was given them to be carried out by the Agent asking them to plan menus after they had studied the classified foods, to list and name the special ways foods and the various methods they could be used and to plan the menus for their homes for a week, using the various ideas they had learned from their 4-H Club lesson. The work done at home will be handed in and credit will be given them towards securing their certificate in the Spring. All the girls seem interested in getting the certificate and it is believed that a large percentage will be entitled to the certificate. Each girl was asked to cook and serve one outstanding dinner during the holidays.

Minor Projects—Handicraft

Special handicraft ideas and patterns were distributed during December and as a result a survey was made among the ladies who do first class handiwork.
At present twenty club ladies entered the handicraft club which is now under way in Chilton County. Each lady is to make special samples of articles which will be placed for the public to take orders from which pen money can be made by the ladies at home. The articles made being ties, handkerchiefs, infants clothing, bags, sweaters and novelies. A sample of these articles will be sent to Miss Dorothy Dean, Auburn, Ala., who plans to send them to the Exhibit in Nashville in February. It is hoped that a sort of roadside market can be built up in Chilton County by the club ladies, as this seems to be an appointed place, being centrally located near Montgomery, Selma and Birmingham.

During the month of December thirteen (13) method demonstrations have been given with an attendance of five hundred and twenty-two (522) present.
Fourteen method demonstrations have been given to adults with two hundred and sixty-one present. These demonstrations have been given on foods.
Twenty conferences have been held with fiftythree present. Each of the clubs in addition to demonstrations have given Christmas programs. Having either Christmas tree or Christmas boxes which held the Christmas gifts

NEW BATTERY PLAN IS CALLED "A SENSATION"

Goodrich Kathandoe Types Guaranteed
As Long As Purchaser Drives
His Passenger Automobile

A battery guaranteed as long as the owner owns the passenger car in which it is installed. No more need ever be spent on repair or replacement of the battery, even though the car be driven by the owner many years, or for hundreds of thousands of miles. In case of failure, a new battery is given the purchaser.

That is the sensational battery offer
now available to motorists of Clanton.
according to Geo. C. Polk, of Polk Bros. Motor Co., located at 206 So.
St., and representatives of the B. F.
Goodrich Company here.

"This guarantee is made possible by the new construction used in Goodrich
Kathandoe Electro-Pak and Goodrich Kathandoe Ford-Terraplane batteries," says Mr. Polk. "In addition, the Electro-Pak is the only battery in the world having both the Kathandoe construction and the power-saving top cover which protects against acid spray, dirt and corrosion.

"Kathandoe construction has been a feature of batteries in naval dreadnaughts, cruisers, submarines and airplanes, crack railroad trains and giant power plants, and has been adopted only this year for general automotive use. It gives automotive batteries a new kind of steady, dependable performance and a longer life than heretofore considered possible.

"To make this possible, flexible, porous mats made of finely spun glass are placed against both surfaces of the positive plates and prevent the lead particles upon which the electrolyte acts from dropping away during normal wear and vibration. We consider it the most far-reaching development ever made in the battery field."

Editor-In-Chief Of I. N. S. Lists Ten Best Stories Of 1936; King-Mrs. Simpson Leads

These ten best stories of 1936 were listed by the I. N. S. Editor, Larry Farr, and published in the International News Service, 25-26th Avenue, New York, N. Y.

All heads in King Edward as a result of his romance with Mrs. Simpson. The story of the abdication of President Roosevelt.

The Spanish revolution.

The impetus of general economic recovery, wage raises, dividends, etc. affecting the AAA, TVA, Guffey Coal Act.

Hitler's renunciation of international treaties, re-militarization of Rhineland, Hitler's conquest of Ethiopia.

Payment of soldier's bonus.

Spain's civil war.

Hautmann execution.

As for the probable big stories of the forthcoming year, the consensus points to two stories in particular—the struggle between fascism and communism in Europe, and the test of the New Deal in its experiments in solving economic and social problems.

Other situations which appear on the news horizon for 1937 are: the situation arising from adjustments with labor and whether the differences will lead to strikes; the Russo-German-Jap situation, and the scheduled coronation of England's new king.

Seymour Berkson, managing editor of Universal News Service, listed the following as the ten best stories of 1936:

King Edward's romance and abdication.

Re-election of Roosevelt.

Electroaction of Hauptmann.

Spain's civil war.

Final conquest of Ethiopia by Italy.

General business improvement, bonuses, dividends, pay increases, etc.

Death of King George V.

Pan American Peace Conference.

Schemeling knocks out Louis.

Payment of the soldier's bonus.

The appointment of H. J. McDargh as Southeastern Regional Manager has just been announced by W. M. Kinney, General Manager of the Portland Cement Association. Mr. McDargh, who will make his headquarters at Atlanta, has been district engineer at Indianapolis since 1934. Prior to that time he was assistant to C. D. Franks, Manager, Midwestern Offices located in Chicago.

McDargh's appointment fills the vacancy made by the resignation of H. R. Albion.

McDargh is an experienced engineer and is an alumnus of Rose Polytechnic Institute. During the past year he has been president of the Indianapolis Construction League.

Forty-eight cows in the Alabama Cow Testing Association were listed as "quality cows" during November for producing over 800 pounds of milk or 40 pounds of butterfat during the month.

All Figured Out
Conversation overheard on Street:

"What would you do if a rich uncle left you a million dollars?"

"Me, I've got it all figured out. I'd put $5,000 in the bank and then go out and have a whale of a big time with the other five thousand."

Tales and Traditions from American Political History

FRANK E. HAGEN
ELMO SCOTT WATSON

NAMING A PARTY

IRONICALLY enough, the names of the two principal political parties once were combined as Democratic Republicans, a group of which the standard bearer was Thomas Jefferson, referred to perhaps often than any other leader, when Democrats trace their political origin.

Under Jackson the party name was shortened to Democrat, which it continues to bear.

Republican emerged as a separate party as early as 1854, although its first nominating convention was held two years later. Up at Ripon, Wis., in a corner of the campus of Ripon college, stands the Ripon Congregational church, scene of the first G. O. P. meeting.

The Ripon meeting had been called by Major Alvan E. Bovay, a Whig lawyer, who generally receives credit for suggesting the name of the party.

He had passed on his idea to Horace Greeley who later advocated the name Republican at a convention in Jackson, Mich. Although Ripon had a voting list that hardly exceeded 100 in those days of exclusively male suffrage, more than half of them attended Bovay's first gathering. The impulse which brought them together was the conviction that the slavery question was coming rapidly to a head and that those who opposed must unite in a new group, regardless of geographical lines.

Northern states naturally proved the most fertile ground for spreading the new doctrine. Before the party's first national convention, which was held in Philadelphia on June 17, 1854—a firm "toehold" had been secured by senatorial representation at Washington.

History fails to record what part, if any, Major Bovay played in the Philadelphia meeting. The delegates were unanimously in favor of nominating John C. Fremont and he was selected on the first ballot.

Another Republican attended, however. He was the gangling Illinois rail-splitter, Abe Lincoln, and some of his colleagues had the temerity to advance his name as a candidate for vice-president. "Honest Abe" lost the nomination but four years later he was to carry the party to victory.

can be secured.

Contestants: Do not gamble with time the next two days. Each moment is precious. To hesitate now for a few hours may cause you to lose the prize you most desire. It will be hard to forfeit the prize that has been your goal, just because you have failed to do your best the last important days.

Saturday Should Decide

Only two days left of the last vote period, and only one more week of the campaign. Interest in this race is running high and strong. Friends of contestants phoning and inquiring how their favorites are standing in the race.

To ease up now means that you are deliberately losing the big opportunity to gain the most votes while your more aggressive competitors will be working with all their might. January 16th is positively the last chance to turn in subscriptions and secure the "Second Period" votes on them, except for subscriptions contained in letters that are mailed. Contestants may mail any subscriptions collected after six o'clock, however, there cannot be any subscriptions mailed during the last week of the campaign unless they reach the News office before 8 P.M. Saturday.

There is a great difference in a major prize and a per cent of the week earnings. Contestants cannot afford to become discouraged now and see the efforts of these weary weeks go to waste and the big awards wrestled from your grasp by more enterprising competitors. All contestants have worked hard and well. Almost every trail in Chilton County has been covered several times for subscriptions. We only wish we could afford to give a new Dodge Sedan to each contestant.

Horton And Thd Digest
Not that we intend throwing pebbles nor even rocks, but, judging from the "guessing" that Weatherman Horton of Birmingham, has been doing on our weather, we are inclined to think he might be akin to the man who don't guess on elections for The Literary Digest. Anyway, we're mighty glad we don't have Mr. Horton's job right now. This weather business is a dangerous business to be guessed on now.

Maine And Vermont
Speaking of The Literary Digest, reminds us that we heard the other day that the states of Maine and Vermont had filed application to be re-admitted to the union. Conscious is a great power after all.

Competition Looms
Early now and then almost every business gets a little bothered about new competition coming into the field. Now we are worried. We have just seen a copy of the newspaper put out by our good friend Irvin Lande, called "The Jewish Journal". Frankly, the congratulations on this sheet. His ideas on journalism are excellent and we enjoyed the editorials in his recent issue. Irvin sells his paper for one cent per copy, and if you wish a cover for the issues, you may get one for ten cents. The paper is but put at Irvin's little shop at his home here. He is the eleven year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. M. Lande, of Clanton. Congratulations to you, Irvin.

Al And Mrs. Fine
We were in the capital city the other day and had the pleasure of seeing two of our good friends, Mr. and Mrs. Al Fine. They were here sometime ago to spend several days in Clanton. Al is business manager of the Happy Day Shows and making Montgomery their winter headquarters. Was mighty glad to see you again Al. Drop in when you are passing through our city.

The Senator Drops In
We were sitting in our sanctum Tuesday when we received a pleasant visit from our Senator, Earle Thomas. In discussing home building, fishing, and things we finally, and naturally, got around to the present session of the legislature. The Senator expressed some of the best ideas we have heard in several years regarding the proposed liquor legislation. There seems to be no doubt in his mind, nor the minds of other Senators, that some kind of liquor bill will be passed in this special session. That seems to be inevitable.

However, Senator Thomas seems to think that the Bill will have a referendum attached to it when it goes through. That means that the people of this county will have an opportunity to vote for or against the proposition. But, this time there is a definite program for the control of legalized alcoholic beverages with state-owned and operated stores. However, Senator Thomas stated, there is no doubt that we will have bootleg liquor right on. It is his idea that the only way to stop this is to make the punishment so strong, almost unbearable, that no one would want to bother with bootlegging. We have plenty of whiskey now in Alabama. Bars, whole-sale and what-not. The only difference would be, the state would be getting some revenue from its sale if the proposed Bill passes. No doubt Senator Thomas will vote for the Bill. If he does, he is doing what he believes is the only right and proper thing to do.

Not On Record
Who dropped in the meeting room of the Commissioners Court last Tuesday said thought we were viewing something that hadn't been seen in over twenty-five years—a Commissioner of this county composed of Democrats. But, we were mistaken, according to all those who attended it. Most of them stated there didn't seem to be much of a record when there were more Democratic commissioners than others in this county. Anyway, it was a pleasant sight.

On The Job
Our good friend J. E. Easterling was in the desk of the Treasurer's office Tuesday evening and appeared to be in a case just as if he had been there for years. We predict big things for J. E., and as this county's treasurer, he has made a step towards the people of the county should we need him in. We're wishing him the best of luck.

Thin Walnut
We have on our desk a freak of nature in the form of a well-developed thin walnut. It was brought in by our good friend Charlie Bell, who seems to have a mania for raising all kinds of oddish vegetables. The last time I thought was three corkscrew potatoes twisted around. We wouldn't be surprised if he didn't bring us some quintuple calves, or something next.

COMMISSIONERS WILL ASK FOR PUBLIC FOUNTS

Cooling System And Public Drinking Fountains To Be Asked For

At the meeting Tuesday of the Commissioners Court, the first meeting with two new Democratic Commissioners, a move was made to secure for the county some kind of system to give the public more drinking fountains in or around the courthouse, according to Judge J. Lee Smith.

In this issue of the News appears a Local Bill which will be introduced in this special session of the Legislature, giving the county the right to appropriate a sum of money to install and maintain some kind of water cooling system for the public at the (Continued to Back Page)

New Commissioners Go Into Action; Held First Session Tuesday

Old Members Of Court Clean House Last Monday

Tuesday morning early found the Commissioners Court in action considering problems and other things that usually come before such a body of men. But, the meeting Tuesday was somewhat different from those in the past.

Two new faces appeared in the circle of members of the county's governing body. New faces, yes, yet the two new members, J. Monroe Parrish and R. L. Ousley, appeared to be veterans at the job of considering financial and road questions of the county.

Judge J. Lee Smith, chairman of the court, stated that the present Commissioners started off with practically a clean slate as all old claims were ordered paid Monday before the two outgoing members relinquished their positions to the new members. They had a regular "house cleaning."

There was some discussion of the Court meeting at nine o'clock instead of ten. The Court is now composed of Judge Smith as chairman, John P. Bean, Howard R. Oden, J. Monroe Parrish and R. L. Ousley.

RECEIPTS OF POST OFFICE ON INCREASE

Postmaster Downs Cites Big Increase Done By Local Office

A general and noted increase in receipts of the Clanton post office was reported this week by Postmaster H. F. Downs. This increase which started back in 1933 has climbed up until now it shows something over a sixty per cent jump.

There was a decided decrease in receipts during 1931 and 1932, according to Mr. Downs, who cited figures to the News to show that the increase in 1934 over 1933 was most outstanding. These figures are for calendar years.

"When one considers the amount of stamps, money orders, etc. that must be sold by a post office to show an increase of several thousand dollars, then they get an idea of how much mail is handled here," Mr. Downs stated.

The number of boxes that are rented at the local post office has increased (Continued to Back Page)

We View With Alarm

A learned psychologist made himself ridiculous the other day by endeavoring to convince the general public that "Alice in Wonderland" is a subversive book, producing an evil influence upon the minds of children.

He rid himself of a mouthful of humorless verbiage such as "preponderant oral sadistic trends of cannibalistic character." There is the Queen of Hearts who wants to chop off everybody's head, the lobster gets cooked, the Jabberwock does have its head cut off, time is distorted, facts are confused he declares.

And thus he belabors a book that we all were taught to regard as a delightful example of the fantastic treated with such consummate art that it has always appealed alike to the unsophisticated mind of the child and the sense of humor of the intellectual adult.

As we recall just a few images from this delightfully amusing classic we cannot escape the conclusion that the learned gentleman was either in serious need of something to view with alarm or that in spite of all of his attainments he is woefully lacking in a sense of humor.

Strangely we have known a large number of young people who read "Alice in Wonderland" without exhibiting any honed instincts. In fact the majority of them have enjoyed this work in their early childhood and to have done pretty well with their later lives.

All of which leads us to the conclusion that men of great learning also frequently exhibit a remarkable capacity to make themselves ridiculous. Knowledge without humor is barren indeed.

Up To The People

As the devil's broth of European conflict continues to simmer, we encounter two widely diverse views. Some people believe that we can easily avoid entanglement by means of carefully drafted neutrality laws. Others feel that we will become involved in spite of every effort just as we did in 1917.

We cannot subscribe to either view. We question whether our nation will be saved by a few hastily drafted laws. We do believe that we can learn by past experience.

A man lured by the promise of easy profit insists upon exporting war materials to a belligerent nation. The shipment accompanied by American citizens is sent to Davy Jones's well known locker by an enemy. Immediately the injured profiteer raises the cry that national honor has been insulted. An incident is created. Must we answer such indignity with an appalling expenditure of men and wealth?

A group of citizens invest heavily where the promise of big returns lures them on in the face of probable loss. When the loss comes, they put the machinery of propaganda into motion. Civilization is at stake. The spirit of a holy crusade sweeps the nation.

We must learn to distinguish between the propaganda which arises and the truth which is often sadly obscured in time of national excitement. The course of our country in the event of another war depends largely upon the intelligence and mental stability of the American people. If we lose our heads over some incident, no neutrality legislation and no administration, regardless of its intentions, can keep us out of trouble.

When we recall the hysteria which swept the nation in 1917 we can realize that our position in the present crisis depends almost entirely upon the state of mind of the majority of the people.

Well most of us would welcome any change in our system if we were convinced it would also put more change in our pockets.

Progressive Alabama Editors

The Alabama Press Association has an intelligent and enterprising leadership. This is evidenced by the approach that the weekly editors have made to the question of the industrialization of Alabama and the part that editors should play in the program.

Gaston Bozeman, editor of The Evergreen Courier, the president, Cliff Walton, editor of The Lafayette Sun, the vice-president, Webb Stanley, business manager of The Greenville Advocate, a former president, Renzo Bryan, editor of The Elba Clipper, secretary of the association, and Hunter Golson, editor of The Wetumpka Herald, are taking the lead in putting the APA forward at this time as a useful public agency. In the industrial conference of the association held in Montgomery Friday these editors, along with a number of others, showed a fine grasp of the social and economic implications in the problem of how to increase Alabama's payrolls.

The Alabama Press Association, consisting largely of weekly papers, wanted to fix an objective for itself. It wanted to sponsor a worthy cause in behalf of all the people of the State. That is how it came to hit upon the idea of sponsoring industrial development in the State and of pledging itself to work for an enlightened, sympathetic public opinion regarding the subject.

The editors realize that in encouraging industrial development in this State, Alabamians are assuming a responsibility that is by no means light. They realize that industrialization raises certain characteristic social and political questions. They realize that issues between employees and employers inevitably arise. They know that public opinion with reference to these issues should be healthy and decent. Sometimes employees are right, sometimes employers are right. Neither side should control legislation, neither should control the policies of executives, neither side should control the press. Only the disinterested public should control.

Not only does every prospect indicate that Alabama is to become more deeply industrialized than it is, but in truth the State hasn't a chance to escape it. There isn't a chance that industrialists will overlook Alabama in the days ahead. It is written in the stars that industry shall hereafter expand and flourish in Alabama.

It is the function of the Alabama Press Association to create a friendly atmosphere in every community for employers and employees in industry. It is the duty of the Alabama Press Association to stand for just and wise laws, for an enlightened public health system, for a progressive, self-sustaining agriculture, for the best educational system that our means will afford—and finally for the freedom and dignity of the individual in all circumstances.—Montgomery Advertiser.

Good Merchandising

Inventory times is past. The majority of our local merchants are now through with that laborious task of taking stock and closing their books for the year that is past. Practically all of them have discovered that they are long on some items of merchandise. For the most capable of merchandisers cannot determine exactly what the public will demand.

Confronted by facts disclosed in his inventory the active, modern, live merchant decides to move his surplus items by offering attractive bargains. He knows that it does not pay to carry these items over to next season. He realizes that fashions change and that public taste is not constant. Furthermore he wants the money now tied up in slow sellers reinvested in up-to-date merchandise for which there will be an active demand in the future.

When you see these January sale advertisements, therefore, you may know that the merchants of this community are on their toes, that they are following what experience tells is the best policy.

Merchants who are now clearing their shelves of merchandise carried over from the past seasons are usually the merchants who can give you the best of merchandise and service throughout the year. They are the ones who know the importance of turnover who appreciate the need of carrying up-to-date goods, who understand one of the most effective of all forces in modern business, namely advertising.

History may not repeat itself accurately, but it stutters and exaggerates. British might have had a lot more to complain about in American newspapers. Just suppose they had given as much space to the war debt as to the king's abdication.

MORAL ECHOES.

D. W. Haske

In the early days of American life of young men went far into the interior and built for himself a small log cabin. Shortly after retiring one night he heard the howl and the bark of a large wolf at his door. At first he was very much frightened, but he soon grew accustomed to the sound of the wolf, and one night he flung the door wide open in the face of the howling animal and killed him with a shot from his rifle. At once he set himself to the task of taking the skin from the body of the wolf. In a few days he had made himself a warm fur coat out of the skin of the animal that had molested him in the night hours. The very thing that had made him afraid was now mastered and was making him warm and comfortable in his humble abode. If my life and in your life we are often frightened by the wolf howling at our very door. The enemy to our peace and happiness bark in the night hours, and we are afraid. When will we learn to be courageous, fling wide the door of our hearts and slay the foe that makes us afraid. Out of the pelt of a mastered enemy we can make for ourselves a coat that will bring us comfort and happiness.

It might be of interest for you to know that the Regal Chrysanthemum is only a humble garden Astor with a college education. You have observed that any flower left to grow and bloom beneath the tangle of grass and weeds and the briars of the world and produce a dwarfed product. The Chrysanthemum is the product of cultivation. You tell me that you do not attend church and that you have but little use for church services. You are leaving your soul to grow under the weeds and the briars of the world and your soul is coming to the dwarfed state you approach the end of life. The church is none other than God's flower garden where he cultivates the souls of men. We do not say that men can not be saved out of the church, but we do say that the souls of men never grow to much beauty beyond the cultivation power of God's church. A Christian is none other than a common sinner cultivated and educated in the garden of God. Hear me, you need the church if you are going to grow a soul.

Tradition tells us that Zachæus would leave his home early every morning and go with a large earthen vessel upon his shoulder to the old Sycamore tree where he first saw Jesus. Morning after morning for many years he would empty a vessel of water on the roots of the old tree. His wife became anxious to know why he went at sun up to the Sycamore tree and poured out the water on its roots. To her question Zachæus replied, "Because that is the tree that lifted me up to see Him whom my soul loveth." As you look over the years gone by do you not recall that something lifted you up to see the Lord? Was it not the Christian church? Then why not water it with your presence and interest. Blessed is that man who continually remembers Zion as Zachæus remembered the Sycamore tree.

A preacher out West this had much courage when asked to conduct a big church funeral for a man who never attended church while he was living. Said he in the beginning of his remarks, "My friends, this is the first time in many a year that this corpse has been within our church door and I am here to tell you that he would not have been here today if he had not been brought here in a box. He is a corpse now but so far as he is concerned, he has been a corpse in his church for a long time." Suppose that a preacher should be asked to take the oath of a witness before he conducts a funeral "I will tell the truth the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help me God." To such a faithful member of the church from the church is so sweet and fine. It seems to me that any one who wants a church funeral should live a church life.

One day I came to a friend of mine who was blind. He was standing at the street crossing, tapping his cane on the pavement and waiting to cross. I touched him on the arm and said, "Come David, I will companion you across the street and guide you safely through the traffic." He accepted my offer and soon we were on the other side. We may not be blind in a physical sense, but we are blind when it comes to being able to see God's Tomorrow. In our anxious moments it is Jesus who comes to us and says, "Come my child, I will companion you across the streets and troubles of life and I will guide you safely to the other shore." How blessed it is to walk with one who knows and who can see when there are troubles and dangers on every side.

Whitley Hotel Sends Goodwill Man Here

Among many out-of-town visitors to Clanton Monday was Aubrey Maura, a representative of The Whitley Hotel, of Montgomery. Mr. Maura spent some time in the city visiting in various places of businesses and meeting citizens on a very effective goodwill visit for the hotel.

The Whitley is one of the most popular hotels in the capital city and is often referred to as the "convention hotel" of Montgomery, catering to meetings of all kinds. Connected with the hotel is one of the most attractive and efficient coffee shops and dining rooms in Montgomery, under personal supervision of an experienced steward. Floyd Goodaby is manager of The Whitley and is known over the entire state for his congeniality and ability to see that his guests are well taken care of at all times.

Deep Dog Queen

HERE is an action picture of the famous Sulu, the pointer who's been everything before her at National Field Trials of 1936 at Grand Junction, Tenn. Sulu, the queen of them all!

Thousands of bird dogs range the fields... but there's only one Sulu. To this glorious creature Nature gave her greatest gift, a perfect balance of the vital elements; speed, scent, endurance, instinct and intelligence. Another pointer may be just as good to look at, but Sulu has that vital spark—everything in perfect balance. So Sulu is the queen; the other is just a dog.

Just as Nature favored Sulu, she favored Natural Chilean Nitrate of Soda. Just as Sulu has many elements in Nature's balance, so has this nitrogen fertilizer. Nature aged and blended into Natural Chilean, more than thirty "impurities", or vital elements that your crops need to grow and to produce their best. These vital elements are in addition to Natural Chilean's quick-acting nitrogen. That's why Natural Chilean is so good for your land and your crops.

Ford Radio Program Presents Merry Medley

A sparkling new variety program, "Watch the Fun Go By," presenting a merry medley of orchestra, vocalists and fun makers headed by Al Pearce and his Gang, made its radio debut for Ford Dealers of America at 9:00 P.M. Tuesday night, January 5, over the CBS coast-to-coast network, according to Clanton Motors. Ford dealers in Clanton.

Pearce and his gang hit the air for Ford after making their way to the top on the Pacific Coast and then crashing out of the west two months ago to a top sustaining spot on the CBS network. His career on the Coast and his brilliant performances since 1935 have been on sustaining programs for CBS cause his friends to predict that he will shortly become one of the top radio programs on the air.

Pearce's programs for Ford will be patterned after those which led him to the top on the Coast. The popular buffoons who made his programs such hilarious successes will be back in full cry. Al himself will be in there trying to keep the gang in some sort of order.

Arlene Harris, the human chatter, will demonstrate what happens when short circuit occurs in a lady with a sound. Lord Bilegwater, Andy Anderson, Morey Amsterdam, Mabel Todd, and the "Three Chicks" will all be back. Of course, there will be El, Hector Smith and Elmer Horn—all of them Pearce himself in other incarnations.

The gang will be aided and abetted by Larry Marsh's orchestra. Mr. Marsh himself, believe it or not, once conducted the Shanghai Symphony Orchestra. (Editors Note: There is a Shanghai Symphony Orchestra.) He was also chief conductor of all Winthrop Ames' revivals of the Gilbert and Sullivan operettas.

Pearce's record on the Coast gives some idea of the wide radio appeal his sponsored show is likely to have over the national network. For eight years, he presented a variety program five afternoons a week. His program was, by far, the most popular on the Coast, establishing audience records which still stand as all-time highs.

He has made personal stage appearances in almost every city west of the Rockies. And in San Francisco and Los Angeles, his drawing power has never been equalled in any theater. Pearce has been trying to reverse the "low-key" slogan and come east for the past three years, but commitments prevented.

Pearce always has incorporated into his programs a warm human touch. For years he has been singing and acting in child welfare, has devoted a great deal of time in support of orphan children, both on the air and in personal appearances. He raised thousands of dollars for them directly by sale of photos of himself and his gang. Each year for the past five he has conducted toy drives for crippled children, collecting and distributing more than a half million toys in that time.

Two years ago for their benevolence he gave a two-hour program in Multnomah Stadium in Portland, Ore. Saturday morning, long before his appearance at 9 A.M., every one of 32,000 seats was filled with parents of their children, hilariously waiting for the gangs' antics.

Last year 10-year-old Shirley Peknay, of Brooklyn, went to the Roosevelt Birthday Ball in braces which she wore on a leg semi-paralyzed as the result of infantile paralysis. This year Shirley, after an operation made possible by funds raised through the Roosevelt Birthday Celebrations for aid of infantile paralysis sufferers, is essaying her first dance steps with the assistance of her father, Ray, noted as the author of the new waltz, "The President's Waltz." Murray has originally composed a new waltz, the Washington, which is being introduced at the New York celebration in honor of President Roosevelt.

Actual trade experience and technical related subjects are being taught to ten of Chilton County High School students, through the junior apprenticeship program under the supervision of B. E. Evans, vocational counselor and coordinator.

A survey of the vocational needs and vocational training possibilities of Clanton was made before school opened last September. When school began the Senior High and Senior Vocational students were given opportunities in this community and given an opportunity to file an application for vocational training in the fall. These applications were reviewed and these applicants were placed in these applications. These boys and three girls had a high scholastic standing in their academic work were given a chance to take the vocational course. These boys and girls selected a place with their own choice of a place. These students were provided for these students by some of the leading business establishments of Clanton.

Prepare Land Now For Setting Kudzu

Auburn, Ala.—Farmers who are planning to plant kudzu for erosion this year should make plans now for breaking the land several weeks before planting is to be done, according to R. V. Bailey, regional agronomist of the Soil Conservation Service and J. C. Lowery, agronomist of the Alabama Extension Service.

If time does not permit the breaking of the entire area, a strip at least 5 feet wide along each row should be thoroughly broken before planting and the strip between rows should be brooded by work and also a pair of crocheted ladies gloves. Mrs. Cecil Peal, Calera, Ala., of the Minkoka community mailed in a most attractive basket made of corn shucks, she also sent hot pad mats to match.

Diversion Viewed As "Pure Dishonesty"

Diversion of gasoline taxes and road funds to purposes other than highway financing is "downright dishonesty," Governor Harold G. Hoffman of New Jersey said in a message to the Grange of that state.

"When we tax a group of citizens for a particular purpose and then spend that money for some other project without giving that group the full benefit of their tax money," said the governor, "we are skating on thin ice."

Motorists still are paying more than $220,000,000 annually in "temporary" gasoline sales taxes imposed by federal and state governments during the depression years as emergency measures, according to L. E. Diefenderfer, Secretary of the Chilton County Petroleum Industries Committee.

"These 'temporary' levies," Mr. Diefenderfer stated, "amounting in cost to about one-third of the 'regular' sales taxes levied upon motor fuel, in most cases were imposed for only one year. Extended time and again, they now constitute what probably is the biggest and most expensive 'tax hangover' paid by the consumers of any generally-used commodity."

"Chief among them," he said, "and by far the more expensive, is the duplicating federal tax which is estimated

ENTERPRISE CLUB MEETS

The Enterprise Home Demonstration Club met Wednesday afternoon, January 6 at the home of Mrs. C. L. Wilkins. The weather was rough but there were several members present. The club is growing nicely. New members are enrolled at most every meeting.

Our lesson at this meeting was on balanced diet. Miss Grace made a very interesting talk on this subject. This is something that all wives should be interested in for their families' sake.

Mrs. Wilkins and some of the other ladies prepared a balanced dinner which was served to all present. This was a very nice and wholesome meal and everyone seemed to enjoy it.

At the next meeting, February 3, we will have balanced breakfast. All of you try to be present.

We are sorry to lose our former president, Mrs. Aubrey Neeley. We hope she will visit us sometimes. Mrs. J. C. Boockholdt was elected new president.

EMPLOYERS AND WORKERS URGED TO CO-OPERATE

GENERAL UNREST SEETHING JUST BELOW SURFACE, REPORT

Commissioner Of Labor Sees Trouble In 1937 For Industry; Strikes, Lockouts, Are Predicted Unless They Are Stopped

Montgomery, Alabama, January 5th.—Predicting that 1937 would bring more labor disturbances to Alabama than any year in the State's history unless disorders are avoided by "common sense" methods, Robert R. Moore, State Commissioner of Labor, today issued an appeal to industry and labor to exert every possible effort to promote industrial peace in the State during the coming year.

"It appears that 1937 will bring more lockouts, strikes and general industrial disorder to Alabama than any period in recent State history," he declared, "unless employers and workers use common sense in settling their differences."

"A general unrest is seething just below the surface in industry over the nation. Working men are exerting more effort than ever before to obtain their share of returning prosperity through shorter working hours and increased wages."

"Organization of workers has reached an all-time high, with unions spending millions to add to their numbers and to lay by 'war' chests," he said.

He pointed out that 40,000 automobile workers already are striking, with paralysis of the vast automobile industry in prospect unless differences are soon settled. That wide disorders are occurring along the nation's seacoasts in the maritime strike.

"In such a state of affairs," he said, "one must expect to spread like a disease. It is possible that effect is liable to start similar strikes in totally unrelated industries."

He said that the labor union in Alabama will reflect in Alabama's industrial areas unless preventative action is taken, and pointed out that the first "sit-down" strike in the State already has occurred in the Birmingham area, following the example set by similar types of resistance in other areas.

"The situation is acute," he emphasized, "and the only hope of preventing Alabama from contracting the national industrial disease is for both sides, workers and employers alike, to lend every effort they are capable of toward peaceful settlement of differences that may arise."

"We found during 1936 that every strike and lockout in the State was settled around a conference table in the end," he said. "All the losses to thousands of workers in wages and to employers in lost profits could have been prevented, had employees kept on working or employers kept plants running while differences were arbitrated."

"I hope that we will be able to profit from that costly 1936 experience and use ordinary horse sense conferences instead of violence during the coming year to settle disputes."

"But it is going to take unusual effort," he pointed out, "The general disturbance over the nation is spreading swiftly and we must take immediate warning if we are to continue our swift progress to returning prosperity."

"It is our one aim and desire this year to make Alabama the one State more free from labor strife than any other spot in the nation. It can be done, but only with the most wholehearted cooperation on the part of both labor and industry."

Alabama Power President Announces $3,700,000 Improvement Program

1,000 Miles Of New Rural Line, To Serve 4,500 Additional Customers, Included

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—(Special)—Following a meeting of the Board of Directors of Alabama Power Company, Thomas W. Martin, president, issued the following statement:

"Alabama Power Company budgets for 1937 indicate anticipated expenditures of more than $3,700,000 for additions and betterments. This construction budget of $3,700,000 could easily be increased to $7,000,000 or $8,000,000 if the threat of subsidized government competition of the TVA were removed. This threat has made it impossible for the company to raise needed capital in the open market," Mr. Martin said. "Because of this difficulty, we are being forced to trim our expenditures to the bone and spend on new construction and expansion of facilities only what is actually necessary to maintain a high efficiency of service."

It was pointed out by Mr. Martin that the Northern subsidiaries of Commonwealth and Southern had been able to make substantial savings in interest through refunding operations. "If the government competitive threat was removed we could do as well as other companies in the system and save about $1,500,000 a year in interest charges," he added. "This saving could be passed on to customers, thereby lowering electric rates materially."

"In the interest of public service, security holders and employees of the private utilities, the T. V. A. problem should be settled at an early date," Mr. Martin declared. He expressed the belief that the Southeastern power pool, which has received emphasis from President Roosevelt, could be worked out for mutual benefit. "Our company will join with other utilities in co-operating with the government in perfecting such an arrangement," Mr. Martin declared.

Of the total amount, approximately 21 million dollars will be spent for the extension and improvement of the distribution systems of the Company throughout the State. Included in this item are 1,000 miles of new rural line, to serve approximately 4,500 additional customers. It is estimated that 6,850 new rural customers will be added to existing and new lines during 1937. It is expected that the upward trend in the use of electric energy so evident in 1936 will continue. In order to assure satisfactory service to all present and prospective customers of the Company, it is necessary continually to improve and enlarge the system to take care of demands for electric service.

During 1937, the Company estimates that there will be added to its lines and placed in operation 4,350 electric ranges, 3,000 electric water heaters, 12,000 electric refrigerators and 150 air-conditioning systems.

The Company expects to spend approximately $700,000 during 1937 to make additions and extensions to its street-lighting systems, to meet the requests of municipalities for additional service under the new promotional street lighting rates.

Although no new generating plants are proposed for 1937, a number of important improvements will be made to facilities throughout the system in line with the Company's policy of meeting the power needs of its customers and being prepared at all times to render adequate and continuous service.

Alabama men and women will be employed almost exclusively in the program of the Company. Local electricians throughout the State will find employment in wiring homes and places of business, and local dealers will sell much of the wiring material, fixtures, and appliances required by customers.

Commenting upon the greater domestic use of electricity, Mr. Martin pointed out that the average consumption per urban domestic customer of Alabama Power Company during 1936 was 1149 kilowatt-hours. The average rate for urban domestic consumption for the month of December was 2.67 per kilowatt-hour. This is less than half the average rate of ten years ago and marks the progress which has been made as a result of the Company's continuous policy of selling electricity at prices which make it possible for customers to make complete use of the service, including a liberal use of the heavy appliances.

LABOR BACKS 'POLIO' FUND

New York, N.Y.—(Special)—Organized labor is throwing its full weight into the fight against infantile paralysis and the drive to make the President's Birthday Ball on January 30 even more successful than those of previous years, President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, said today.

INCREASED TAXES NOT NEEDED TO GET FEDERAL HIGHWAY AID

No increase in gasoline sales tax rates of in motor registration fees is necessary in any state to obtain funds to match federal highway allocations, it is shown by studies of the American Petroleum Industries Committee. Fear has been expressed in several states that increased taxation of gasoline and automobiles might be necessary to obtain federal highway aid.

Unless a state diverts part of its automotive taxes to other than highway uses, and by reason of such diversion lacks funds to match federal aid, the state is eligible to receive its full allocation, it was explained. The Hayden-Cartwright Act provides that "if the proceeds of all special taxes on motor-vehicle transportation are applied to highway purposes, all, or such portion, of each apportionment as the state is unable to match shall be available for expenditure in such state in accordance with said Federal Highway Act without being matched by the state with state funds."

If a state is now diverting highway revenues to other purposes, receipt of the full amount of federal road aid funds can be assured by stopping such diversion at the earliest practicable date rather than by enacting new and increased revenue measures. Of $828,424,000 in gasoline and automotive taxes collected by the state last year, $146,459,711 was diverted to purposes other than highway financing.

HIGHWAY PATROL MAKES FINE RECORD FOR 1936

LOCAL PATROL POPULARITY IS SHOWING GAIN

Total Of 272 Arrests Are Made During Past Year
By Waites, Henley

The Alabama Highway Patrol, under the direction of Chief Walter K. McAdory, is rapidly gaining in popularity and effectiveness over the state, according to recent reports of activities during the past year.

Through Chilton County, where Patrolmen Wallace Waites and Earl Henley are stationed, there were 272 arrests made during 1936. These arrests were given as follows: for driving motor vehicles while intoxicated, 17; public drunkenness, 22; reckless driving, 62; speeding, 29; improper lights, 3; improper tags, 7.

No drivers license, 69; violating 1932 Carrier Act, 19; no clearance lights, 8; over width, 1; over length, 1; over height, 2; improper brakes, 11; "hogging" the road, 3; running over stop signs, 3; no flares nor flags, 6; carrying concealed pistol, 2.

In many cases these two patrolmen were lenient and gave first offenders warning and instructions regarding the law or laws they had violated without making out tickets. Waites and Henley have been most efficient in tracking down stolen automobiles, locating hit-and-run drivers, clearing wreckage from the highways and aiding motorists in distress.

Verbal reports from motorists from out of the state and those residing here, have given Waites and Henley excellent reputations as officers of the law and highway patrolmen. There is no way of telling how many lives have been saved through the efforts of the highway patrol on the roads of Alabama and each month brings some statement from a motorist thanking the patrol for its efficient services.

From January 1st, 1937 and up to Tuesday, Patrolmen Waites and Henley report six arrests of persons driving a motor vehicle on the highway while intoxicated; one for public drunkenness, two for reckless driving, one for speeding, one for improper lights, etc.

While the State is now employing a large number of patrolmen, they are adding new ones as rapidly as funds will permit. The entire personnel of the patrol from executives to patrolmen is supported entirely from funds derived from sales of drivers licenses, and fines following arrests. The people of Alabama should feel proud of its highway patrol. It is serving a long felt need.

Isabella Club Has Monthly Meeting

Balanced Meal Project

The Isabella Home Demonstration Club held its January meeting in the Home Economics Department with Mrs. E. S. Jones presiding.

After singing a few peppy songs business matters were discussed. The meeting was then turned over to Miss Callan and Mrs. Fred Oden, who cooked and served a well balanced meal, which in this instance was a supper.

In our opinion, you women who are not attending these club meetings are missing some very informational 'get togethers.' Let's all meet with Miss Grace next month and learn how to plan and serve an ideal dinner.

Let's see if we can interest our men folks in these meetings to such an extent that they will provide us with ways to attend. Remember the old saying, "The way to a mans heart is through his stomach."

The next meeting will be in the Home Economics department the third Friday in February, with Mrs. Fred Oden in charge. Let's be one hundred per cent in attendance.

British Possession To Honor President

Bermuda Planning Elaborate Party January 30

New York, N.Y.—(Special)—The British on sea-girt Bermuda will make a bow in the direction of Washington and celebrate President Roosevelt's birthday at a party like those of their American cousins on the mainland, January 30.

Under the distinguished patronage of His Excellency the Governor, Sir Reginald J. T. Hildyard and Lady Hildyard, Britons and their American visitors will attend a ball in the President's honor and for the benefit of sufferers from infantile paralysis. Lady Hildyard has consented to act as honorary chairman of the ball.

Bermuda is the only country outside the United States where non-Americans join in the celebration of the President's birthday and this year will be the first time such an event has been held. Elaborate plans for a ball last year under the chairmanship of Lady Astley Cubitt, wife of the former governor, had to be cancelled because of the mourning for King George V.

The ball will be held at the Hotel Bermudiana which will be lavishly decorated with the red, white and blue and the joined insignia of Great Britain and the United States.

Lady Best, wife of the Admiral of the British fleet on West Indies Station, and United States Consul Harold Williamson will be honorary vice-

GULF STATION MAKES CHANGE IN OWNERSHIP

J. L. Wilson Purchases Well Known Service Station Here Recently

J. L. WILSON

A change in the ownership of the Gulf Service Station, of Clanton, was announced here Saturday when Hon. J. L. Wilson assumed management of this well known station.

The Gulf Service Station, dispensing the well known Good Gulf products, is located at the intersection of the Selma and Birmingham highways in the heart of the city. The station recently underwent a most extensive remodeling program and is now rated as one of the most modern between Birmingham and Montgomery.

Mr. Wilson is widely known over the county. He has served as justice of the peace in the county for a number of years and was recently re-elected to that office in Beat 4 by a large majority. Under his management and the cooperation of his able assistants, the station is bound to become one of the most popular in this section.

Grady Taylor Is Now With Big Milling Co.

In a recent issue of the Birmingham News there appeared a large advertisement of the Mountain City Milling Co., Birmingham branch. In this advertisement appeared a photograph of Clanton's own Grady Taylor, who holds the responsible position as sales supervisor for this large milling concern.

Mr. Taylor, a native Alabamian, is widely known over this county, having been in business in Clanton for him self for sometime where he made many friends.

He has recently opened a large branch warehouse and sales office in Birmingham. They sell cakes, crackers, flour, feeds, meal and grits and operate a large fleet of automobiles and sales forces.

Memorial to America's First Cheese Factory Unveiled

In the costume of 1850, this old fashioned dairy maid helped to dedicate the memorial to the first cheese factory in America, at Rome, New York.

DAIRYMEN from all parts of the United States gathered in Rome, New York, this past week, when a memorial on the site of America's first cheese factory was unveiled.

A pageant in the costume of 1850, a parade of ox-carts, and a colorful ceremony preceded the dedication of the bronze and stone memorial commemorating the birth of the cheese factory system in the United States. The nation's first cheese factory was built in Rome, in 1851, by Jesse Williams, a dairy farmer of that community, son of a Revolutionary War hero.

The ceremonies at Rome served to inaugurate National Cheese Week for the nation, November 8 to 14. It was from the small beginnings of the cheese factory in Rome that the entire cheese factory system in this country grew.

The bronze tablet and replica of the old cheese factory were presented to the city of Rome by George L. Mooney, secretary of the National Cheese Institute.

BUSINESS AND AGRICULTURE UNITE TO AVERT CRISIS IN FOOD FIELD

Vigorous Campaign of Newspaper Ads Moves Surplus Farm Products Without Price War

New York—A striking story of how private business rallied to the support of agriculture on five different occasions in the food business is re-told for the first time by "Editor and Publisher," a trade paper in the journalistic field.

According to the magazine, a vigorous campaign of newspaper advertising which stimulated public buying each time relieved the situation so promptly that most of the public was never aware of the existence of a crisis.

"Approximately a year ago," said the magazine, "the National Association of Food Chains resolved to cooperate with the producers of foods in the effective marketing of excess seasonal production and surpluses. Early in 1936, the Canners League of California was faced with a ruinous surplus of canned peaches—so great as to make it probable that the '36 crop of peaches would bring only a fraction of the cost of production."

In April and May, the 22,000 stores of the Association and 12,000 others, cooperating, put on a series of four California Canned Peach events, used between 2,500,000 and 3,000,000 lines of advertising in America's newspapers to make the public more "peach conscious," disposed of 5,126,000 cases in five months with a resultant carry-over less than the previous year and a price to growers of canned peaches of 20 per cent, the same as in 1935."

Serious Meat Situation

The next situation of great seriousness developed in the meat industry, amid the magazine. In June three great associations representing 5,500,000 cattlemen requested assistance. The June slaughter of beef cattle was the highest on record. Imports had reached a menacing volume. There were unprecedented shipments from drought areas and the heat threatened to reduce consumption. Again the Association's stores and those of the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company operating 16,650 meat departments got busy, staging a Domestic Beef Campaign in August to relieve the pressure.

"Forty-four companies," said the magazine, "advertised in 8,000 newspapers with a combined circulation of 25,000,000 in 48 states at an estimated cost of $2,000,000. As a result, the value of the cattle dressed under government inspection in July and August totaled $107,752,000 more than in 1935. The government purchased only 5,000 cattle as a result of the drought of 1936 instead of 2,500,000 as in 1934. The farmers received nearly a million dollars a day more for their livestock in 1936 than in 1935."

In August the story relates, the 25,000,000 California dried fruit industry asked for aid, having lost their foreign markets. There was more than a car's average pack to dispose of and again the same technique of newspaper advertising to stimulate public demand was employed. By November 21, forty-five companies reported sales of 12,110,237 pounds, or nearly twice as many as in 1935."

More Turkeys Sold

On November 14, the National Association of Food Chains announced that 16 poultry associations had written and agreed for help in disposing of 20,000,000 turkeys, an increase of 30 per cent over the previous year. There also were 52,000,000 pounds more of fowl in cold storage than in 1935. Since 86 per cent of all farms raise poultry, this was a problem of truly national scope. By a campaign of heavy newspaper advertising beginning before Thanksgiving and continuing through Christmas this winter cash crop was said to have been moved with satisfaction to the farmers.

The final service has just begun although plans for it were laid in 1936. This time to move approximately 67,000 car loads of grapefruit from Florida, Texas, California and Arizona. The present crop is approximately 10,000 cars more than the 1936 crop and heavy advertising has just commenced. Merchandisers are confident again of distributing this surplus throughout the general public without the farmer suffering the low prices that heretofore have resulted from unwisely surpluses.

According to Editor and Publisher, the benefits of this cooperation between agriculture and business have been felt not only by approximately half the population living on farms but by canners and packers employing 10,000 people; shippers, wholesale food establishments to the number of 50,000 and retailers numbering 350,000.

IN MEMORY

On January 8, 1937, the death angel visited the home of Hugh Sanders of the Fairview community and bore away his beautiful spirit of a loving father. He was sick only two weeks before his death. All that loving hands could do was done, but God in love and wisdom saw fit to release him from his sufferings.

Those who knew him longer loved him best. He is forever from us gone, but we will never forget his smiling and pleasant face.

He leaves to mourn his loss four sons, two daughters as follows: Charles Sanders of Sylacauga, Walter Sanders of Sylacauga, Hugh and Otis Sanders of Fairview community; Mrs. Claude Mims of Sardis community. Mrs. Houston Coggins of Enterprise community and twelve grand children.

Palbearers were: John Earl Hosey, Louis Williams, Jodie Wilson, Clifton Devaughn.

He was laid to rest at Shiloh Sunday morning at eleven o'clock with the Rev. Joe Gibson officiating with Spigner Funeral Home in charge.

Ford Changes Policy Of Making Prices

Two weeks ago on December 3, the Ford Motor Company adopted the policy of eliminating all "F.O.B." and "factory list" prices from the Ford Motor Company and Lincoln Motor Company advertising effective throughout the United States.

This new method of quoting prices will not change in any way delivered prices to the dealer or public.

Any prices stated in factory advertising will be the delivered prices at Dearborn, Michigan, without taxes.

"Our Influences"

By Mrs. Lucile Nummy

Influence is the power one person has over another. It is said that we are a part of everything we come in contact with. This statement is very true.

If a stone is dropped into the ocean waves will go on the other side. So it is with our influences. They travel many times farther than we go, affecting others in various ways.

A good, useful person's influences continue to live after they are dead and gone. Many people are influenced by great writers long after the writers have gone.

Everyone has influence for good or bad. If this be true let's try to influence others to do right and make this world a better place in which to live.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank our dear friends who took willing hands toward the illness and death of our dear father and grandfather. We can never finish thanking you good people for what you did for us. We also thank Dr. Masin for what he did. We wish to thank the Speigener Funeral Home and also thank the Rev. Joe Gibson for his good services. May God bless each and every one of you in our prayer.—The Sanders Family

Road Supervisor Warns Against Heavy Hauling Which Is Destroying Roads; Cites Law

Section 27, Chilton County Road Laws states as follows: "No person shall run or operate any vehicle, either motor driven or horse drawn, carrying a load of more than 800 pounds on or along any public road, in Chilton County, upon which a rain of twenty (20) minutes or more shall have fallen until the expiration of the twenty-four hours after such rain shall have ceased to fall during the period of the year from December 1st, the first day of May. Provided that the hauling of lumber, logs, timber, cord wood, cross-ties, of minerals along the public roads is absolutely prohibited. Provided this section does not apply to automobile trucks or other vehicles used exclusively for transferring children to and from school."

Violation of this law is subject to a fine of $100.00 as provided in Section 2 of An Act (No. 505) by the Legislature of Alabama, approved September 22, 1915, providing rules, regulations and laws governing "Boards of Revenue, Courts of County Commissioners or other like governing bodies of the several counties, as follows: "That it shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to violate any rule, regulation or law which may be adopted or promulgated by the Court of County Commissioners, Board of Revenue or like governing body of any County, under the authority conferred by this act, relating to the use, control, care, operation or maintenance of any such public road, bridge or ferry, and any person, firm or corporation violating the same shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined not more than One Hundred Dollars, ($100.00) and may also be sentenced to hard labor for the county for not more than thirty days, either or both, and each violation thereof shall constitute a separate offense."

In many sections of the county our roads have become impassable due to their destructive use by heavy trucks loaded with logs, timber, cross-ties, wood, and iron ore during the past few weeks of rainy weather. In some places these trucks have destroyed one road and have shifted to another route in order to continue their hauling, completely blocking such roads as an inlet or outlet to that particular area. The office of the Road Supervisor is constantly called upon by the Rural Mail-men and school bus operators about this condition, a condition almost impossible of repair during this rainy weather. So, the Road Supervisor, having no other recourse, is forced to invoke the law against such practices of heavy hauling, and all are warned that effective now, all public roads are placed under patrol throughout the County so that we may keep the roads open for the Mail Carriers and Bus Drivers transferring children to and from school. The supervisor asks the cooperation of all the citizens of Chilton County in his effort on the matter.

—Thomas J. Arledge, Supervisor.

MAZER'S HAS NOVEL SHARE-THE-PROFIT IDEA AWARDS

One of the most novel and surest ideas on the share-the-profit plan ever presented in Clanton is now being conducted by Mazer's Department Store.

Saul Goldstein, manager of the store, stated that this idea is no lottery nor chance, but simply a means whereby their customers will receive, without any additional cost or effort, some valuable award by trading at Mazer's. A card is given each customer when a purchase is made. When the card is completely punched out by purchase, there is a given amount hidden under a flap in the card. Whatever this amount is, then the customer receives it in trade. Mr. Goldstein requests customers to investigate this novel plan.

Nation Gathers Forces To Stage Biggest Birthday Party In World

Leaders In All Walks of Life Busy With Plans For Paralysis Fund

New York.—(Special)—Prosperity having come around the corner and the American public being better informed than ever before concerning the national fight against infantile paralysis, Col.onel Henry L. Doherty, for the fourth year chairman of the national committee for the President's Birthday Ball, expects Americans will celebrate Mr. Roosevelt's fifty-fifth birthday with unexampled enthusiasm on January 30.

Early response to the committee's proposals, he said today, was such as indicate millions of Americans would hold more and bigger parties this year than ever before. Preliminary estimates were for more than five thousand balls scattered over the entire country in great cities and tiny hamlets all the way from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from the Canadian to the Mexican borders.

The proceeds on the basis of collections in previous years were expected to exceed a million dollars. More than 300,000 victims of poliomyelitis in the United States continue to need the assistance of their fellow citizens in rehabilitating themselves as useful members of the community. I point out. This year seventy cents of every dollar will be used for the benefit of sufferers in the locality where the money is collected. The remainder will be turned over to the President for the Warm Springs Foundation to enable the institution to continue its national leadership in the battle of mankind against the mysterious and often fatal malady.

Leaders in every field of national activity have rallied to the national committee in efforts to make the all-American birthday party a success. Science, art, labor, politics and society are all prepared to lend their support to the committee. The press, the radio, the movies and other agencies of propaganda, as in former years, have generously offered their space and time. Among the national leaders who were prompt to accept membership on the national committee were: Ambassadors Joseph V. Davies, Charles G. Dawes, Edsel B. Ford, Walter S. Gifford, William Green, Patrick Cardinal Hayes, William Randolph Hearst, Bishop William T. Manning and General John J. Pershing.

Mr. Ford wired: "I shall be very glad to join with the others on the national committee for the President's Birthday Ball."

Mr. Hearst: "I will be very happy to serve and appreciate very much your kind invitation." Cardinal Hayes was "pleased to send to lend my name," and other acceptances were in similar vein. Several local chairmen, when they were asked to serve this year, completely satisfied headquarters with cheerful single word, "Sure," they said or "Okay."

With the customary presidential inaugural ball in Washington eliminating this year, the National capital will do itself in celebration of the birthday of the chief executive. As has been the custom for the past three years, President Roosevelt is expected to broadcast a message to the celebration throughout the nation on his fifty-fifth birthday.

Endorsing the 1937 effort against poliomyelitis, the President wrote: "My own views are that the national fight against infantile paralysis cannot cease. It must go on. I am sure that the Birthday celebrations in this country can be even of increased value to the nation-wide fight against infantile paralysis which is being conducted."

TREASURY REPORT

News Subscription Campaign Big Success

ASSING FOOTPRINTS
Of The Times
— Billy Smith

...in a way, we are glad that the campaign is over. And, we are glad that the contestants feel the same way. However, we can say that the campaign was mighty successful, with the tremendous increase in the number of subscribers to the News. We take this opportunity to thank our personal and sincere thanks to the contestants who worked so hard to win these prizes. Saturday night when the prizes were awarded, we wished it possible for us to give each one a new automobile or a large cash award. Each winner was most faithful.

Turnips
You have seen those two turnips on display at the News Office. We believe everyone else has seen them. They are really beauties and were raised by one of the best gardeners of Clanton. In fact, the turnips of the Purple Top variety are the largest we have ever seen. It is just that the seeds were purchased from the Chilton County exchange in Clanton.

Montgomery
We are going to spend a couple of days in the capital city of the state. We look in on our lawmakers who are in session now. We haven't been there any during this session—our last session of the legislature and we believe it is high time we were going down there and bringing this to a close.

No Encore?
We have noticed on many occasions in the past years that the people of Clanton and vicinity either just don't know how to give someone an encore, or just lack that something that goes into the appreciation of a person on a stage. Whether we think it good or bad, we always did like to see an audience give an actor, singer, speaker or dancer a glad hand. It makes him feel better and more at ease. And too, it is a little encouragement. I'm afraid that Clanton might have a bad reputation in some people's minds for that lack of encore, and that we might miss out on the show or speech that was intended to be given. Let's try it sometime.

The Birthday Ball
Tonight we can be found, up until ten o'clock, at the new Wadesonian Theatre seeing the picture "The Great Ziegfeld." After that time we can be found at the city hall dancing the light fantastic at the Birthday Ball for the President.

Main Check, Please
Saturday night we received a special invitation to witness a basketball game at Mitchell Dam. We had to decline to attend the closing of the subscription for the Birthday Ball for the President. We were invited to the chicken dinner at the Mt. Pleasant school and today that it will be impossible for us to attend that due to an important meeting in Montgomery. Please send us a check on these two items we missed, will you fellows?

Men Gone
I pause to think of the death of our friend, H. B. Oliver, of Verbena. One of the county's well-known and prominent figures. We regret his death as he has often passed on to us some really advice and we pause to meditate on the thought that many of our best and prominent citizens are passing on. We hope that the younger generation is properly training to take the places of these citizens. Then we wonder—where are the men to lead us?

Mrs. Lowe also was awarded a beautiful Elgin wrist watch and $50.00 and $100.00 additional prizes for extra-ordinary work during periods of the campaign.

Congratulations To The President

"The nation has spoken. Every American will accept the verdict, and work for the common cause for the good of the country. That is the spirit of democracy."

So ran the telegram dispatched by Governor Landon to President Roosevelt when it became apparent that the voters had rallied in unprecedented numbers in support of the Administration. And that telegram represents something more than good sportsmanship—it marks an attitude that should be held by all of the people in every walk of life.

The Democratic victory was not a party victory. No mere party victory could be so overwhelming or so completely break down sectional lines of partisan sympathy.

The victory was a different thing—it was a personal victory for Mr. Roosevelt. No man in a century has so captivated the imagination and emotions of the people, and none has received so great an expression of public confidence.

A Republican newspaper said the morning following the election that "the President today is the most popular figure our national life has known since Washington." It is impossible to gainsay that. The most popular of presidents, and those whose Administrations stand out mountainously in our history—Jefferson, Lincoln, Cleveland—were never so popular as Mr. Roosevelt. The past records have all been shattered.

The time for partisanship has passed. And the time for cooperation has come. This does not mean that the President should be followed blindly in every course—that would be unjust to Mr. Roosevelt himself as well as to the country. It does mean that all should work together in the common cause, as Governor Landon said, deliberating differences and adjusting varying points of view to the end that the great ideal of democratic government be served to the ultimate of all our capabilities.

Congratulations to the President! Few men in the world's history have been so signally honored by a great people—an honor which carries with it the gravest responsibilities. Every good citizen will hope sincerely that Mr. Roosevelt's second term as Chief Executive of the foremost nation on earth will be successful, and that his will be a high place in the history of our time.—From Industrial News Review.

The Press Survives

If all the utterances of the prophets of doom could be compiled into a single volume they would provide some delightfully amusing reading. The extreme pessimist, thank God, is usually wrong. The dreadful things he sees ahead rarely happen. The hopeless outlook he presents is usually tinged by his own jaundiced disposition.

We recall particularly right now the forecast uttered several years ago by a representative of metropolitan journalism. A dismal future he predicted for newspapers large and small. The radio, he believed, would soon supplant news print and printers ink as the medium to convey knowledge and information to the general public. That was almost fifteen years ago.

What he did not visualize was the fact that people are not likely to lose their interest in the printed word. They hear speeches and news comments on the radio but this merely whets their interest for the more detailed and more accurate reports which follow in the press.

It is further to be realized that the printed word alone leaves an accurate record of what has been reported. It can be considered at leisure. It offers no opportunity for a brilliant orator or an excited announcer to convey a distortion in interpretation.

The press, we hold, has lost none of its appeal and influence with changing times. True it may be unable to tell people how to vote. In the heat of a partisan contest over candidates and issues people are disposed

American Neutrality

Europe is having another war scare. That's not new. We have been talking and wondering about the future since Mussolini's intentions in Italy were first announced and Hitler assumed power in Germany and proceeded to scrap the Versailles treaty.

But dangerous as the situation is, we doubt if war will break within the next few months. There is that inconvenient matter of American war debts and the fact that the great powers are not yet quite ready for war. Until armaments have reached that point of perfection at which military leaders desire to abandon theory and try actual practice, diplomatic situations will continue to arise but war will not come. At least that's our guess.

However, in the face of what seems inevitable every American citizen may well give thought and consideration to our American policies. Ninety-nine per cent of the American people desire to avoid another European entanglement. Nobody we know wants to send American troops to foreign soil again.

But without effective neutrality legislation and a complete understanding of what it means, we will inevitably become involved. It is, therefore, up to the next Congress to give the subject careful and detailed study and enact legislation which will help our administration to avoid another war.

The absurdity of war as an instrument for the adjustment of international difficulties is best shown by the condition of Europe today.

It May Be Legitimate, But . . .

House to house peddling may be a legitimate business. But we have our doubts. Too many strange situations have been brought to our attention to make us feel friendly to this type of selling.

A strange figure calls at your home with samples of alleged oriental rugs under his arm. He speaks with a peculiar accent. He asks for just a moment to show what he has. With an air of mystery he implies that there are reasons why these remarkable values can be offered. He makes some careful observations while he displays his wares. He may be merely an advance agent for a band of thieves.

A young man calls who announces that he is working his way through college. He wants only a small deposit in advance, the merchandise he offers will be shipped direct from the factory. Frequently that shipment never arrives.

Another demonstrates the unusual utility of some cooking utensils. The order is delivered, but when you make a comparison with the values your local merchant offers you find that you have paid well for everything you got.

He may be followed by the man who informs you that his firm sells so cheap because it spends nothing for advertising. This is probably one of the most absurd of all arguments that have survived the years, for compare the peddlers' commissions of 40 and 50 per cent with the advertising appropriations of two and three per cent, and one can answer that the cheap price is due only to the poor quality.

The house to house selling scheme persists because people do not like to admit when they have been stung. They usually forget their losses, protect their pride and leave the field open to racketeers.

Our advice to the citizens of Chilton County is to consider carefully every proposition offered by one of these house to house peddlers. Don't let them into your home until you are convinced that they are honest. Don't buy their wares until you have an opportunity to compare what they offer with what local merchants have to sell.

If you have your doubts, notify the police. They are kept busy trying to catch up with fast talking slickers who are well primed with fancy yarns to answer every legitimate question you may ask.

We've noticed anyway that it's the brain workers who insist that brain work is really harder than physical labor.

to do their own thinking.

But by presenting the facts without fear or favor the press can still exert a profound influence upon the course of public affairs. So long as it adheres to the principles of ethical and honest journalism and keeps abreast of the currents of change in this changing world its place is assured.

We predict that it will go on for years to come and provide its critics with many opportunities to predict its early demise.

MORAL ECHOES

D. W. Haskew

I went into a shop and observed that the floor was quivering and the walls were vibrating and I said to the manager, "Man, what on earth is the matter with your shop?" His reply was, "The flywheel of the gasoline engine was off center and it seemed that it was going to shake the house to pieces." I agreed with him. That flywheel reminded me of the definition of an Ex-Centric person. You have referred to a person as being eccentric. The thing that you meant to say about that person was that he was off balance. He was off the center of right living and judging. There is but one center of human life and that is in Christ Jesus. An eccentric person is one who is off the center and his lack of balance causes him to make unsteady and unsafe every part of living. When we are on the center with Christ our lives will catch the Rhythm, the harmony of the Divine life and there is no danger of shaking the social structure to pieces.

We were riding along on a street car and all at once the car slowed down and stopped dead still on the track. The operator of the car stepped to the ground and seeing the trouble, he adjusted the connection by placing the arm of the car on the trolley line. The trouble was that the connection was broken with the current and when that was re-established the car was ready to move. It is not hard to understand why some folks have come to a standstill on the way to heaven. There are certain powers that will pull us heavenward, but we can disconnect ourselves from those powers. When you no longer pray, when you no longer work for Christ, when you no longer attend church, you have broken the connection and you cease to move toward God. It is high time that many of you looked your life over and located the trouble why you are standing still on the track of life. The connection has been broken. Better link yourself up with God, with your fellowman and with your church and move on.

Here is a good story for you to think about. A certain pastor was discouraged and he announced that on the following Sunday that he was going to preach the funeral of his dead church. The funeral service was well advertised and the next Sunday the auditorium was crowded with the membership of the church. They wanted to know what the preacher was going to say and do. At the appointed hour a hearse drove up to the front of the church and six men carried a casket down the aisle and placed it before the altar. During the sermon the pastor grew very eloquent as he described the good work of the church while it was yet alive. When the funeral oration was over the pastor announced that the church would be opened and that all of the membership of the church would be invited to come down and view the remains. He had placed a clear mirror about half way down the casket and as the membership crowded near to see each one saw himself in the mirror, gasped and silently went back to his seat. That is what I call, "Rubbing It In" but that sermon did good. The next Sunday there were signs of a glorious resurrection.

When you are watching a ball game see if you are not confronted with a sight like this. A batter standing in the circle waiting for his time at the plate swinging three bats around in his hands. He walks toward the plate still swinging those bats and on reaching position he flings two of them aside and steps into position, ready for the ball. Why does he do this? The answer is clear to the eye. He is discarding the one left seems so light that he places in his strike. In like manner he can almost double the power that I sometimes think that God gives to us heavy burdens to carry just before we must face an important hour, that we may have more strength to be put into the testing hour. Do not become impatient when your load is heavy, it may be that God is preparing you for a home run.

On the river bank there was much slime and mud. As boys we wanted to fish at that point, but our father said, "Boys, you must not go near that point, the river bank is mighty slick there and you might slide into deep water."

A church member came to me with the story of a man who had been over-powered by the wiles and wicked ways of a woman. He became involved in a sticky situation. The person asked me this question, "Doctor, don't you think that a man can be tempted above his ability to resist?" Thinking of what my father had said relative to the slick bank of the river I repeated his warning, "The river bank is that place is mighty slick and no man should allow himself to go fishing there." Any man, any woman, who has half sense, will be able to know where the banks of life are mighty slick. A fool takes a risk in it. The best method to adopt relative to the improper relations of life is to stay away from the place where the banks of the river are mighty slick.

Don't Be In A Hurry

By E. R. Maurer

Don't be in a hurry to stop or start your automobile. By observing this rule you not only save a lot of wear on the car, but you will save a lot of wear and tear on your own nerves.

When a car is accelerated too rapidly, it is obvious that an extra strain is put on the engine and all the other working parts. Modern motor cars are built to accelerate so fast anyway that it is absolutely no sense in trying to rush them still more. Take time to get the gears properly so that you can have proper momentum when going into the next higher speed. In addition to putting the extra strain on the working parts, too rapid acceleration is wasteful of gasoline.

One of our desire to beat the other fellow away from the lights. Some motorists seem to take it as a personal affront if somebody gets away faster than they do. They waste fuel by accelerating the engine while standing at a light and then when the green light comes, they "give her the gun" before they even get rolling. Some fellows just waste a good third of their gasoline just by this practice. For the sake of fuel to make these sudden starts to acquire high momentum in the few feet of travel.

The sudden deceleration is injurious to the braking mechanism and to the engine. The modern hydraulic brake is very quick and positive in its action. It is a wonderful thing to be able to bring a car to a stop as suddenly as is now possible, but that doesn't mean we should be doing it all the time. Those who stop take something out of the car and if persisted it will greatly shorten its life. It is much better to drive in such a manner that most stops are made by cutting off the power and letting the car coast, with light application of the brake. This is especially true when approaching traffic lights. One usually can change and there are about a dozen sudden stops.

Of course, when the brakes are applied all at once, the car is going to some sliding and that is what wears the tires faster than anything else. A front tire would last almost indefinitely if it weren't for skidding and sliding. The front tire does nothing to roll anyway; it contributes nothing to the tractive effort of the car. The wheels do the "kicking."

As an example of how much more mileage we can get out of our tires, by careful driving, I recall the case of a driver I met years ago. At that time, there was considerable good if it gave him 2,000 to 3,000 miles, but this motorist had a set of tires on which he had driven 20,000 miles, then a phenomenal figure. I asked him how he was able to do it and he replied, "By just saving my time and not starting or stopping fast."

Speaking of tire preservation, don't overlook the necessity of having your wheels properly aligned. If the front wheels are a little out of alignment, it will be a slide equivalent to a number of feet in each mile of driving. And anybody can appreciate how it does to a tire casing to be rubbed sideways.

Don't neglect, either, to keep tires properly inflated to prevent the sides from overworking. A tire takes a lot of beating and it needs air to offer some resistance to the wallows, as a man would want some breath in his lungs if he were going to be punched in the chest or stomach.

Hints to Gardeners

Selecting Garden Flowers

One of the easiest flowers to grow, those advised for the novice gardener without much experience, are the nasturtium, alyssum and California poppy.

If you are interested in getting a brilliant color in your garden with a minimum of effort, try growing zinnia and zinnia. They require a bit of care early in the season, but once established they grow abundantly and hardly alyssum, and nothing provides a brilliant color. Portulaca is excellent for colorful edging, and cosmos for backgrounds.

For rock garden growth try some of the following: African daisy, yarrow, linaria, lobelia, phlox, statice, verbena and Virginia stock, mosses, the annuals, and hardly alyssum, columbine, English daisy, geranium and Iceland poppy, of the perennials.

For a window box, petunia, nemesia, lobelia, ageratum, pansy, phlox and verbena are excellent.

Quick blooming flowers are the nasturtium, Virginia stock, zinnia, daisy, bachelor's button and verbena.

Even though you may have experienced trouble with wilt or rust, the plants may grow auster, and snapdragons. There are rust-resistant strains of snapdragon and wilt-resistant strains of aster.

Some of certain flowers will germinate more readily if the seed coat is nicked. Care must be taken to nick only the coat, for injury to the interior portion of the seed will destroy it. Canola fly, all types of nasturtium, geranium and snapdragons, lupin and moon peas are some of the seeds that are thus treated. Overnight soaking in warm water will also aid in the germination of these seeds.

PROPER PLOWING KEEPS TERRACES IN GOOD SHAPE

Auburn, Ala.—Terraces, like farm machinery and automobiles, require good care to make them give the best service. Proper plowing and a little work with slip scrape or shovel after every heavy rain are essential for keeping terraces in good shape, according to the Alabama Extension Service and Soil Conservation Service.

Terraces should be plowed out at least twice a year to keep the channel open. With proper plowing and a little work done by hand after heavy rains, terraces remain effective for many years.

To plow the terrace start on the upper side and throw a furrow to the top of the ridge, the engineers point out. Then step off the distance from the top of the terrace ridge to the bottom of the ditch. Then measure an equal distance above the terrace ditch and plow a second furrow, throwing the furrow up the slope or toward the top of the hill. Continue by plowing this land out, so the dead furrow will be in the terrace channel.

When the rest of the field is plowed, the terrace interval may be taken as one land and plowed by throwing furrows to the top of the terrace ridge from the lower side and to the edge of the plowed strip above the terrace channel.

While plowing it is a good idea to watch for low places or breaks in the terraces. These should be built up with slip scrape or shovel.

TAKING A WALK

A CHECKUP on election day in November, 1936, doubtless will disclose that some of the more prominent members of both major political parties have "gone fishing."

Going fishing is the politician's milder and more modern method of showing dissatisfaction with his party's candidate and refusing to appear at the polls where he is entitled to vote. It is his way of "taking a walk," a topic stirred to live discussion by public remarks of Alfred E. Smith of New York, prior to the national conventions.

Taking a walk would be no new experience of the Democratic party but history records that Alexander Hamilton, powerful Federalist of the country's earliest days, was the first important stroller and that his action ultimately resulted in the destruction of his party.

Hamilton, a dominant political personality, was a bitter opponent of John Adams, second president, having tried to block his election as vice-president although both were Federalists.

The feud continued when John Adams became President. Hamilton secretly obtaining and holding control of the Adams cabinet. Adams, not by nature gifted in that sort of intrigue, nevertheless fought back with considerable success.

Hamilton was not the man to take any rebuffs sitting down. When John Adams sought re-election in the campaign of 1800 Hamilton "took a walk" by publication of a letter designed to show "irrefragable proof" of Adams' unfitness for the job.

Hamilton succeeded too completely in his efforts. Adams failed of re-election but the Federalist party went down with him. While the ding-dong "walkout" battle was in progress during the Adams presidency, Thomas Jefferson, whose name is referred to so frequently by Democratic orators, took advantage of the duelling.

Jefferson was earnestly and efficiently making his plea for the "plain people" and in the election he smashed the Federalists so completely they never again figured conspicuously in a national election.

Announce Goodrich Batteries For 1936

Kathode Type Guaranteed As Long As Purchaser Drives Car In Which It Is Installed

Geo. C. Polk, Sales Manager of the Polk Bros. Motor Co., located at 206 So. 6th St., representative of The B.F. Goodrich Company here, has just recently announced the new 1936-37 line of Goodrich batteries.

This year the Goodrich line, according to Mr. Polk, is featured by the most sensational development in automotive battery history. This is the incorporation of the new Kathode construction in the famous Electro-Pak as well as the Ford-Terrapack battery and a guarantee to each purchaser of these Goodrich Kathode batteries that he will never have to spend a cent for battery repairs or replacement as long as he owns the car in which it is installed.

"This guarantee is the most amazing in automotive battery history," declares Mr. Polk. "It means that even should a purchaser drive the car in which the battery is installed for 10 or 15 years or longer, or hundreds of thousands or a million miles he is protected against any payment for battery maintenance other than recharging. If his battery should happen to fail, another will be installed free."

"The Kathode principle, adopted only this year for automotive batteries, makes this possible. Flexible, porous mats made of finely spun glass are placed against both surfaces of the positive plates, and hold against the plate the smallest of the lead particles which ordinarily drop away during normal wear. This Kathode construction has been used for years in specially made batteries for warships, cruisers, submarines, crack railroad trains and large power plants."

"In addition to the Kathode construction, this new type battery has the patented Goodrich Electro-Pak power-saving top, the only battery in the world to have both these features."

"The Goodrich battery line also includes the Super Electro-Pak and other high quality batteries in every price range—a battery for every purse and purpose," says Mr. Polk.

Farmers Studying Fertilizer Needs

While the period for planting cotton is still a few months away, many farmers are reported to be already giving the matter of fertilizers for this crop serious consideration, and planning to determine their requirements before the rush of planting preparations.

Many farmers say that too often they delay a decision on the kind and amount of fertilizer per acre to use, and the result has been that in many instances not enough consideration was given to whether they were getting the mixture that would produce the most cotton per acre. In many cases the price per ton was the determining factor and oftentimes it has been found that the lower analysis fertilizer were more expensive in the end than the well balanced, higher grade, they say.

Experiments conducted throughout the state indicate that on the average, cotton needs about 36 pounds of nitrogen, 48 pounds of phosphate, and 24 pounds of potash per acre. This is equivalent to 600 pounds per acre of a mixture which would analyze six per cent nitrogen, eight per cent phosphorus, and four per cent potash.

Since many farmers do not use as much as 600 pounds per acre, the potash content should be increased when a smaller quantity is applied, it has been pointed out. For instance, if 400 pounds per acre is used it will take a mixture analyzing six per cent potash to supply 24 pounds of potash, or if an application of only 300 pounds per acre is made it will take a mixture containing eight per cent potash to get the desired amount.

A practice which is growing in popularity, according to reports, is to apply muriate of potash in the form of a side dresser, either alone or in combination with nitrogen. Experiments and demonstrations have shown that this method has given excellent results.

Current fertilizer quotations show that the cost of using mixtures with double the average potash content at the average rate per acre would be only approximately the value of three pounds of lint cotton.

WANTS AAA PROGRAMS TO REMAIN NATIONAL

Auburn, Ala.—Secretary Wallace believes that the provision requiring that administration of the Agricultural Conservation program be transferred to the States by Jan. 1, 1938, should be postponed or repealed.

People interested in the present and future success of the AAA program "believe that both national and local welfare call for its continued administration as a federal program with farmers, farm leaders and state college representatives, participating directly in planning and operation," he says.

BRIEF FARM NEWS

Alabama has 44 United States Certified and Approved Fulfillment Tested hatcheries, reports R. J. Goode, state commissioner of agriculture, in advising farmers that they may obtain a list of these hatcheries by writing R. B. Jones, state poultry specialist, Montgomery, or John E. Ivey, extension poultryman, Auburn.

More general-purpose tractors and other farm machinery were sold during the past year than any year since 1930. Indications are that even more farm machinery will be sold this year. Employment of more men in factories and other lines of industry is leaving fewer workers available in farm labor. Reports indicate a shortage of farm labor in some sections of Alabama.

Farmers probably will have to pay somewhat higher prices for fertilizers this year than last, reports the Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

In 1916 Alabama farmers produced 38,570 bushels of corn, compared with 41,160,000 bushels in 1936.

Because of an unusually sharp decline in the prices of eggs a federal egg purchasing program has been inaugurated to remove surplus eggs from the market and to distribute them through relief channels. The egg purchases are being made by the Commodities Purchase Section of the AAA.

ARE YOU ONE OF THE "LITTLE GIRLS" of 30 YEARS AGO?

YES? Then perhaps you remember Grandmother wishing that someone would invent a cook stove that was clean and fast, and economical—one that would cook appetizing meals even when she was away, so she could be more regular in her attendance at church on Sunday, and at meetings of the Sewing Circle, or the Ladies' Aid Society during the week. And the cook stove she wished for would be so safe that she could visit a neighbor without worrying about you in the kitchen alone with the stove.

MANY GRANDMOTHERS LIVED TO SEE THAT WISH COME TRUE

IT WAS the grandmothers who bought the first crude Electric Ranges. Their daughters bought the improved models of a later day.

TODAY it is their granddaughters who can enjoy even more than Grandmother wished for—an ALL-ELECTRIC KITCHEN, with its health-promoting electric refrigerator; an electric range safer than any other cooking device—automatic, so that cooking goes on unattended (giving more time to do the things you like to do!)—economical, because with electricity so cheap in Alabama it is almost as cheap to cook electrically as any other way.

SO IS IT ANY WONDER?

So is it any wonder that the "Little Girls of 30 Years Ago" are today teaching their daughters, the Little Girls of Today, to want electric kitchens when they grow up?

Electric kitchen equipment—ranges, refrigerators, water heaters, dishwashers—can be bought at terms remarkably reasonable at furniture, department, hardware and electrical stores, or

National Farm Loan Association Holds Meeting At Courthouse Here Recently

The annual stockholders' meeting of the Chilton County National Farm Loan Association was held Wednesday, January 20, 1937, in the court house, Clanton, and was attended by 110 association members and guests. The meeting was presided over by J. D. Broadhead, vice-president, and the annual report of the secretary-treasurer was read to the stockholders. Election of the directors who will serve for the year 1937 was held and those elected were J. N. Dennis, T. C. McSwain, G. F. Massey, J. D. Broadhead and W. J. Easterling. The new board of directors met January 23, and elected officers as follows: J. N. Dennis, president; J. D. Broadhead, vice-president; D. W. Waite, secretary and treasurer.

The principal address of the stockholders' meeting was made by Mr. W. L. Pack, Representative of The Federal Land Bank of New Orleans, who spoke on the "History, Purpose, Progress, of the Federal Farm Credit System."

Mr. Pack discussed the conditions which surrounded farm credit prior to the establishment of the Federal Land Bank in 1917 and outlined the steps which were taken to bring to agriculture an adequate supply of low cost credit. He outlined the development of the present cooperative credit system and described the functions of a National Farm Loan Association, about which he said: "It is a cooperative credit corporation chartered under the Farm Credit Administration Act. It is formed by ten or more farmers who have associated themselves together and obtained a charter in order to become a part of the farm credit system and share in its benefits. In so doing, they of course assume a share of the responsibility in the system. The association assists its members in obtaining loans from the Federal Land Bank, endorses the loans, handles the collections when authorized to do so by the bank and otherwise services the loans. Each member is required to own stock in the association equal to 5 per cent of his loan and, as is true in any co-operative organization, the stock is also subject to the other obligations of the association."

"The present interest rate on new loans," Mr. Pack said, "made through national farm loan associations is 4 per cent per annum." He also said: "Some of the reasons why the farmer has been able to obtain funds at such reasonable rates are: (1) The bonds of the Federal Land Bank are secured by the pledge of an equal amount of farm mortgages taken in accordance with the terms of the Act. (2) Each borrower is personally liable for the repayment of his loan. (3) Each loan is endorsed by the national farm loan association through which it was made. (4) Each loan is made on the basis of an appraisal by an experienced Land Bank appraiser. (5) The twelve Federal Land Banks are jointly liable for the payment of the bonds, and (6) the bonds and the income derived therefrom are exempt from all forms of taxation except estate and gift taxes. There has been enough experience already to justify the conclusion that the system is fundamentally good and sound."

Commenting upon land sales by the Federal Land Bank, Mr. Pack said that "exceptionally good progress was also made last year in the sale of bank-owned farms. During the year 1936, year before last, 3,048 farms were sold. That was an all time record of which we felt proud. But proud as we may have felt of our 1936 record, we are happy to report that farms sold in 1936 exceeded our most optimistic expectations and a new record has been established. During 1936 we sold 3,742 farms which represents an increase over the previous year of nearly 23 per cent and is the largest volume of sales made in any one year since the beginning of the Federal Land Bank."

An address of interest and importance to the stockholders on "Director's Responsibility" was made by Mr. J. N. Dennis, who is a member of the Chilton County National Farm Loan Association.

Another visitor from the Federal Land Bank was Mr. Z. T. Gallion.

THE ORIGIN OF "RUCKERIZE"
AMONG the political factions of a century ago it frequently was the practice to pack or "ruckerize" a convention with delegates favorable to their candidates.

Of course it isn't done today, what with committees on credentials and all, but let's have a peek at the Democratic convention of 1835 and see how the expression to "ruckerize" originated.

Doughty old Andrew Jackson was determined, despite, spreading opposition in his own party, to pass on the presidential mantle to Martin Van Buren of New York. He first sought to calm the Democratic opponents of Van Buren and allay their fears of the Jackson autocracy. Next he issued a call for a party convention to be held in Baltimore in May, 1835, eighteen months before the election. It was the first of the so-called "snap" conventions and its advantages are obvious.

More than 400 of the 622 delegates who attended, history records, were from four states over which Jackson exercised absolute control. No one was permitted to make a speech and there was no platform adopted. Speeches, it was explained by the chairman who presided, might provoke angry discussion and prevent the harmony it sought.

With none but the Jackson lieutenants permitted to talk, the nomination of Van Buren became a simple matter. In fact, he was named on a single ballot.

The embarrassing part to Jackson before the vote was cast was that no delegates were in attendance from Alabama, Illinois, South Carolina or Tennessee, the latter, as everyone knows, being his home state.

So when Tennessee was found to be absent because of the split in the party inimical to Van Buren, Jackson's lieutenants went into the streets of Baltimore and looked around. They seized the first Tennesseean they encountered, brought him into the convention and had him cast 15 votes in behalf of Tennessee.

This man's name happens to have been Edward Rucker and for years afterward "to ruckerize" meant, properly enough, the packing of a convention.

TOP HOGS WORTH FOUR CENTS MORE THAN PIGS

Auburn, Ala.—Instead of selling pigs which weigh from 60 to 110 pounds for four cents per pound cheaper than top hogs weighing 180 to 240 pounds, Alabama farmers should think seriously about feeding out pigs and marketing them later in the spring, advises F. W. Burns, extension livestock specialist.

To assist farmers in making maximum profits feeding pigs, Mr. Burns makes the following suggestions:

1. Select thrifty, well bred pigs as they make more rapid and economical gains.
2. It will generally pay to give these pigs the worm treatment before starting on feed.
3. Put the pigs on feed gradually, taking about a week to get them on full feed. If a self-feeder is used the pigs will balance their own ration. If hand feeding is practiced and ear corn is used, it will pay to feed from 1-2 to 1 pound of supplement daily per pig.
4. If possible let the pigs have access to a field of rye or oats, as this feed will reduce feed costs and give the rate of gain. If green feed is not available it will pay to feed some well-cured leafy hay, such as soybean or peanut, daily in a rack.
5. It is essential to give the pigs equal parts by weight of charcoal, slaked lime and salt during the feeding period.

SHILOH CLUB

The Shiloh Home Demonstration Club met Friday afternoon, January 22 at the home of Mrs. Morris Keen. There were several members present, and we enrolled some new members. We had some visitors with us at this meeting and invite them back.

Our lesson for this meeting was on balanced diet. Miss Grace gave a very interesting talk on this subject.

While Mesdames L. C. Keen, Morris Keen and other members of the club prepared a balanced dinner. Some sang songs and played several interesting games, after which the dinner was served to all present, this was a very nice and wholesome meal and everyone enjoyed it very much.

At our next meeting, Friday, February 26, we will have a balanced supper and breakfast. All are asked to try to be present. The club agreed to meet at the home of Mrs. W. F. Dobbs.

"DILAPIDATED" derives from "lapis," the Latin word for stone. One explanation of its derivation is that in Roman and pre-Roman times stoning to death was a frequent form of punishment. To us it seems a barbarous practice, but undoubtedly when an unfortunate victim was stoned to death, he was completely "dilapidated."

The use of the expression "old adage" is what grammarians describe as "tautology." "Adage" by itself means an old and long accepted saying. The "old" is, therefore, unnecessary and hence tautological. "Turbulent mob" is another example of the same thing, for the word "mob" itself means a turbulent

ORATORICAL CONTEST IS GROWING IN INTEREST

Entrants From Chilton County Schools To Be Selected

Interest in this county is already strong in the oratorical contest for 1937, the basic subject for which is "Jefferson and Hamilton."

Isabella High, Maplesville, Mr. Curtis Mathis, principal, Mrs. Howard Bookholdt, contest director.

School eliminations throughout the state for the purpose of selecting each school's representative for outside competitions are to be held within the dates of March 29 and April 10, inclusive. State Finals will be held at Birmingham April 23rd. The winner of first place at the state finals will be state champion and will receive a cash prize of $100; second prize $50; third prize $25; and the six remaining state finalists will each receive $10. Railroad fare and hotel bill for each visiting state finalist and chaperon will be paid by the sponsors of the contest.

The contest is open to all Alabama High schools, public or private, accredited or unaccredited, junior senior and grammar and consolidated schools doing some junior high school work. Any bona fide high school pupil under 19, February 1, 1937, is eligible to participate. Enrollment must be by the school principal.

Contestants in past years are high in their praise of this contest as a means of overcoming self-consciousness, timidity, learning about government and citizenship, how to "think on one's feet" and because of other benefits to be derived.

The contest is sponsored by The Birmingham News and Age-Herald and is directed by Artemus Calloway, a staff member of those newspapers.

NATURE"

SULU Sulu, deep liver-and-white pointer bitch, owned by A. G. C. Sage, New York. Had by Clyde Montana.

HERE is an action picture of the famous Sulu, the pointer who swept everything before her at National Field Trials of 1936 at Grand Junction, Tenn. Sulu, the queen of them all!

Thousands of bird dogs range the fields... but there's only one Sulu. To this glorious creature Nature gave her greatest gift, a perfect balance of the vital elements: speed, scent, endurance, instinct and intelligence. Another pointer may be just as good to look at, but Sulu has that vital spark—everything in perfect balance.

So Sulu is the queen; the other is just a dog.

Just as Nature favored Sulu, she favored Natural Chilean Nitrate of Soda. Just as Sulu has many elements in Nature's balance, so has this nitrogen fertilizer. Nature aged and blended into Natural Chilean, more than thirty "impurities," or vital elements that your crops need to grow and to produce their best.

These vital elements are in addition to Natural Chilean's quick-acting nitrogen. That's why Natural Chilean is so good for your land and your crops.

THE RURAL PRESS

The Southwest Georgian, of Fort Gaines, is a country weekly and as such naturally responds sympathetically to the appeal of two recent editorials in the Macon Telegraph, Chief Bill Anderson's paper. There is a wistful note in the comment of The Georgian upon the articles from The Telegraph. Says Editor Neil O. Davis, who formerly piloted his trade in Alabama:

Seldom is it that anyone comes to the defense of the weekly newspaper press or offers suggestions which might be of benefit to the publishers of country papers. Therefore, it was with a great deal of appreciation and interest that we read in the Sunday Macon Telegraph an editorial pointing out the worth of the country weekly as an advertising medium, and another in the Monday issue of The Telegraph describing the financial difficulties which dog the small publisher because he "works for nothing."

Various weeklies over the State have featured editorials which told of the small amount of appreciation most publishers receive in return for their service to the small communities.

Editors have pleaded for increased advertising and job printing in an effort to realize enough revenue with which to render still better service to their respective towns. Readers have, in most instances, shrugged their shoulders and thought the editorials were inspired by publishers with selfish motives. However, the editorials printed below will receive more attention and earnest thought. Coming as they do from the pen of one of the South's outstanding newspaper editorial writers, these discussions of the problems of the rural press are not biased—they are the reflection of honest thinking upon questions which Major Anderson knows are continually before the small newspaper publisher, questions which must be answered if the weekly press is to forge ahead and render those services which all small towns expect of their newspapers.

The first article by The Telegraph which commends itself to the Fort Gaines paper, is as follows:

With the coming of new modes of travel, merchants in small communities are asking, "How can we keep our citizens from going to trade in larger towns and cities?"

To intelligently answer the question, it is necessary to learn why those customers are tempted to trade elsewhere. The answer is simple. Advertised goods and attractive bargains offer the lure. No customer leaves his or her home to buy things that are not advertised. The price must appeal and the goods themselves must be temptingly described. Advertised goods always draw more and more business. Ask any traveling salesman, and he will tell you it is impossible to sell to merchants any but nationally advertised brands. No salesman has genius enough to stock on a merchant's shelves goods that are not well known to the public; and if he should do so in a few instances, the buyer will find himself stuck. The goods won't move. Advertising is the only known method to create increased human desires. Unless these desires are stimulated merchants stagnate.

The small-town merchant has been notoriously disinclined to advertise. He took it for granted that people in his community would find him and ask for what they wanted. Occasionally one of these merchants did venture to use advertising space in his county newspaper and if he understood how to prepare his ads and to create desire, he made his fortune. Many communities have seen this happen. Even when a necessity as flour is now competitive, one brand advertiser against another. A good advertiser who studies his business can drive into the public mind the idea that his is the only brand that a housewife can afford to use; and he can do it without ever referring to any other flour.

Even corn meal has the same chance. Milling has become a science. The mill that can clean every deleterious particle out of the wheat or corn has an appeal to every customer who can be made to understand what clean, sound food means to health.

If advertising can pay a meal dealer or a flour merchant, it is certain to sell more of life's luxuries. What better medium for these messages can be provided than the county paper? Is not, then, the county paper the hope of the small-town merchant? The daily papers are going to farmers and small-town readers as never before. They are laden with stories of tempting bargains. Will the small-town merchant let them have the business? There is but one defense. It is to stock goods that are worth advertising and then tell about them in the county paper.

In a second editorial The Telegraph returns to the economic problems of publishing in the rural field. Says Chief Bill:

A few years ago the Georgia Press Association decided to lift its members up out of the red, so efforts were made to stabilize subscription, advertising and job office rates.

The financial improvement was so great among the country newspapers that some of them began to assume the airs of city papers, adding features, enlarging size, improving typography, and raising the standard of news and editorial matter, until now they find they are giving far more than they are being paid for. So a movement has been started in some quarters for another general agreement on a new revision of rates. It is believed the task will be more uniformly observed than in the previous instance, since so many printers and publishers have seen the previous beneficial effects. Some of the editors of today say they are not making enough money to pay for the service they are rendering, and they must do something about it.

A few of them are trying to buy white paper, pay postage, buy ink, earn on their investment, get a living and pay for help on 2 cents a week for the paper, when 2 cents a week will not pay for the white paper. Few of them get over 4 cents a week.

They say they realize that advertisers should not be expected to pay high enough rates to cover losses on subscribers; and they think the time has come for dailies and weeklies to get enough to cover the cost of issuing and distributing.

Job work, it is claimed, has also been done at a loss by many, either because printers are so anxious for a little cash money they take a job as an unemployed person does—hoping to avert starvation; or else the average man does not know how to figure.

Some safe guides have been published and sold to show printers how to determine printing costs, but in desperate competition the printer believes that even if he does business at a loss, volume might keep him going.

It is just as agonizing to a publisher to do business at a loss as to any other business man.

Why should he live on the brink of torment when a little cooperation with his competitor will put him in a safe place?

No institution is more characteristic of the native American scene than the weekly paper. It is even more characteristic of the scene than the city daily, vital as the daily is in its relationship to the American people. The rural paper discharges a high responsibility in its community. It performs its duties to the best of its ability. More than which no other can do. It is loyal to the community in all weathers, notwithstanding that most of the time it is systematically imposed upon by space-buyers, subscribers, politicians and other climbers. The rural press has never been paid adequately for the services it performs. We think it should resolve to charge more.

Flag Blue and Red Birthday Ball Hues

Colors Will Be Featured In Costumes Of Smart New York
New York, N. Y., Jan. 27.—(Special)—Smart feminine New York is preparing to deck itself in the national colors, Flag blue, Flag red and white to dance at the Roosevelt Birthday Party Ball at the Waldorf Astoria, January 30, one of the most elaborate of the more than 600 celebrations to be held throughout the country to raise funds for the fight against infantile paralysis.

Chosen from a silk flag by Mrs. James Roosevelt, mother of the President, with the assistance of New York debutantes who will take part in the Birthday Ball pageant at the Waldorf, the colors have been selected by many of Manhattan's best dressed women for their gowns.

New York designers also have seized upon the colors as offering interesting possibilities for late winter models which will make their first appearance at the Birthday parties.

Among a number of advance models introduced at a showing here this week was one of white silk flaille, with a cluster of Flag blue chiffon flowing across the left shoulder. Another of Flag red silk crepe had its wide circular skirt bound with narrow grosgrain ribbon in Flag blue.

A number of society girls and young matrons whose clothes make fashion headlines are planning to introduce the official Birthday Ball colors into evening ensembles by use of flower corsages and flower hair ornaments in the chosen hues.

Our last meeting was rained out so the demonstrators gave our demonstration on January 8.

There were fifteen present. The president, Mrs. H.M. Kelley, had charge of the meeting. After the roll call and reading of the minutes, the community demonstrators gave a demonstration on serving a dinner. The club decided to put on a play and work will be begun to get one up. A number of members enjoyed a nice dinner which was prepared by the demonstrators, Mrs. Adams, Mrs. Hudson and Mrs. Freeman. They served baked chicken, beans, creamed potatoes, tomato soup, salad, baked apples and pound cake.

At our next meeting we will serve breakfast and supper. This meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Alice Ladd. One new member was added to our club.

At the close of meeting we all received our club pledge.

Gardening Hints

How about the garden? Let's get it ready for spring. The cabbage and onions should be out. The hot-bed should be made and the seeds should be planted. Asparagus beds should be made and the new vegetables selected. The garden seeds should be listed and ordered taking care to select the best improved varieties.

Don't forget the greens. Spinach may be grown as a spring, fall or winter crop. It is also resistant to diseases and will stand more cold and heat than any other green. The best gardeners do different plantings about every 4 weeks, to have fresh greens, tomatoes, corn, greens, peas, okra, Irish potatoes, etc.

Irish potatoes require well prepared soil and heavy application of fertilizer. 1000 to 1500 pounds per acre should be applied in the drill and mixed with soil before potatoes are planted. Only certified or disease-free seed should be used and it is not best

Saul M. Goldstein

Last April I drove from Henderson, Ky., to Louisville to attend the annual meeting of the Kentucky Education Association. We drove along Highway 6 which winds its way close to the Ohio river. The river had been thru its annual stages of ice-jam, freezing, and flood, and was subsiding. As we drove along, we had to watch the road carefully. The flood had been the worst in eighteen years, and in many spots as much as two-thirds of the road was still under water. In many places the dirt road-bed under the concrete highway had been washed away, and the traveling was dangerous. At Louisville, we heard a lot about high water, and the citizens were boasting of the fact that although Pittsburgh's "Golden Triangle" had suffered much from flooding, Louisville had gone scot-free.

This year, the flood is a little early; and Louisville has not fared so well. Radio announcements tell hourly the story of rising water, collapsing houses, sickness, plague and death. Boats are being commandeered for rescue work—boats in this modern city of 330,000 souls, with trolley cars, automobiles, radios and all. Neighboring towns out of the danger zone are volunteering to help refugees from the big city.

Florida has its hurricanes, the Middle West its dust storms, Chilton County has tasted of tornadoes, and river valleys live in danger of floods. With all our precaution and safeguards of modern civilization we are never quite sure of what the next hour may bring. Some of us, perhaps many of us, have been a little hard of hearing when the Red Cross came to call. With our very lives dependent on the mercy of the elements, and with such an organization as the Red Cross standing ever ready and willing to lend aid to the needy, we ought, all of us, without waiting for an appeal, give to this worthy group what we can, that our more unfortunate neighbors may not suffer in their hour of need.

The Chilton County High School Senior Class production of "This Is The Life" was a very creditable one indeed. It is really remarkable what the younger generation can and will do if only given half an opportunity to express itself. Although not likely to deserve a Broadway showing, the students deserve high commendation for their excellent interpretations of their parts. That those in the leading roles were good needs no repetition from me; but orchids are really due to the very convincing portrayal of Senor Olvera.

All in all, the production was deserving of a much larger audience than made its appearance in the auditorium. Dramatic art is scarce enough in the smaller communities of these United States without our overlooking what little there is. If you saw "This Is The Life," you should make your friends sorry they didn't; and if you didn't, you should make up your mind right now not to miss the next production if it is at all in your power to attend.

All the talk and ballyhoo that all the Fourth of July and pre-election speeches can spread notwithstanding, the fact still remains that America will never be a land of equal opportunity for all so long as one child gets nine months of schooling a year while another, merely because he happens to reside in a different part of the country, gets only five or seven months education during the year. The time is rapidly approaching when many schools in this country, and perhaps many in this state, will close for the year after having furnished their charges with twenty weeks of formal schooling.

If you have a child of school age who is not getting the education which equal opportunity for all entitled him to, then it is your business to find out why, and then to do something about it. That education is paid for with the money you pay out in taxes, and it is your place to see that you get your money's worth. No man would pay $2,000 for a $750 automobile without raising a big squawk; but American citizens in many places are paying taxes for their children's education and getting a return hardly equivalent.

If you raise a big enough squawk about it, you'll get your full money's worth. Anyway, that's what I think.

Petroleum Industry Boosts Sales Through Newspaper Advertising

A statement issued today by J. P. Lawrence, Chairman of the Publicity Committee of the Chilton County Petroleum Industries Committee, discloses that newspaper advertising occupies a position in promotion of sales of gasoline by the gasoline products, according to a survey made by the bureau of advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

During the first half of 1936, he states approximately $5,380,000 was spent in daily newspapers by the gasoline industry. During that period sales of gasoline increased an average of almost 10 per cent the country over, with those companies carrying on aggressive newspaper advertising getting a substantial share of the increased business.

The expenditures of the oil companies during the six-months period represented an investment in newspaper space of about 25c per passenger car registered.

Confidence in newspaper advertising by the oil companies is reflected in the fact that they spend more money in newspapers than in any other media.

In 1936, the advertising budget of the oil industry was budgeted as follows:

Newspapers	$10,849,500
Outdoor	6,632,000
Chain Radio	3,568,000
Spot Radio	384,480
Magazines	2,704,780

Amazing monthly expenditures of the oil companies in newspaper advertising, the report pointed out that gasoline consumption in the first quarter of 1936 stood at 43.4 per cent of the six-months consumption, while newspaper advertising was 22.2 per cent.

During the second quarter, gasoline consumption was 56.6 per cent newspaper advertising 72.8 per cent.

Deformation of registration dates by more than half the states, increased use of enclosed vehicles, and the improvement of gasoline and oil are stimulating greater use of automobiles during the winter months, the report said, adding that the shifting of the automobiles' show dates from January to November is also resulting in increased winter driving.

"The gasoline industry," said the report, "is one of America's giants. Like the motor business, it invests more of its consumer advertising budget in newspapers than in any other medium."

The minute you step aboard, you have a feeling that this is home. There's something of "home" in the cheerful atmosphere—in the roomy, inviting seats—the softly shaded lights.

There's something of "home" in the tempting way the food is prepared—the quiet, courteous way it is served.

There's something of "home" in the way the covers are turned back and the pillows plumped up... and even in the porter's quiet query, "What time do you want to be called?"

But it's "like home" in many more ways than these: Because, just as in your own home, we must see that the coal bin is full, the worn furniture replaced. We must employ help, shop for food, buy new dishes—and pay taxes. Yes, about 7% of our revenues goes for taxes to help support your government, your cities, your schools, your highways.

So you see, we're just home-folks like you... sharing your problems and pleasures, contributing to your community. We hope you will think of us that way.

ALABAMA EDITORS STRIVE FOR GREATER INDUSTRIES

ADVANTAGES OFFERED BY THE STATE ARE GIVEN IMPETUS

Northern Industries Seeking New Locations And Alabama Is Receiving Favorable Comment, It Was Pointed Out

Montgomery, Ala.—(Special to The News).—Alabama editors, who attended the mid-winter convention in Montgomery, are back in their offices determined to carry out the most ambitious program ever outlined at a state press session.

A committee of ten has been organized to carry out the work of setting up machinery and plans for carrying out the purposes of a resolution presented by the executive and program committee and unanimously adopted by the association after two hours of discussion Friday afternoon.

Briefly, the resolution provides that the Alabama Press Association undertake the tasks of: (1) lifting Alabama from the cellar division of states in per capita wealth (it ranks 40th among states); (2) placing Alabama in a place comparable with the state's natural resources and possibilities; (3) presenting of Alabama's resources to the outside world; (4) encouraging the location of new industries of all kinds in every part of the state; (5) fostering the adoption of legislation favorable to the location of new industries and (6) seeking the elimination of any unfair or discriminatory taxes which might handicap the state in its bid for new industries.

Discussion of the resolution and its final passage consumed the entire session Friday afternoon after the editor of the Montgomery Advertiser, Cliff E. Walton of Lafayette and H. H. Golson of Wetumpka. Many other editors expressed their views after the resolution had been presented by F. W. Stanley of Greenville. He was followed by Grover Hall, editor of The Montgomery Advertiser.

The Saturday morning session was largely taken up with the discussion of a circulation audit for weekly papers led by Emmet Brooks of Brewton, and the convention passed a motion by Editor Brooks for the appointment of a committee to assist in details of the plan. Presentation and adoption of several resolutions; acceptance of an invitation from the Birmingham Chamber of Commerce and the City of Birmingham to hold the mid-winter convention in Birmingham; and election of officers completed the business of the final session.

CULL HENS NOW, SAYS COUNTY AGENT FANT

Dear Folks:

The price of eggs has dropped and price of hens is fair. I believe it would be wise to cull out your low producing hens and sell them. Most every farmer keeps some poultry and most of you are feeding some cull hens.

If you will follow the following suggestions you will find culling to be a simple operation: (1) Cull hens that are molting. (2) If the hen's comb is pale, shrunken and scaly, sell it. (3) Pullets that have yellow legs and beak feed it will take to get them to producing. (4) If the vent is yellow and puckered, the hen is not laying. (5) If breast and pelvic bones are close together the hen is not laying.

For your information there will be a poultry car next week at the following places:

Clanton—Thursday, Jan. 28, all day. Jemison—Friday, Jan. 29, all day. There will be a truck at Maplesville, Wednesday, January 27, from 8:30 A. M. to 3 P. M. It is my information that the following prices will be paid:

Heavy hens—14c per lb.; Leghorn hens—12c per lb.; Fryers—13c per lb.; Stags—10c per lb.; Roosters—8c per lb.; Turkey (hens)—15c per lb.; Turkeys (young toms)—13c per lb.; Turkeys (old toms)—10c per lb.; Geese and ducks—8c per lb.; Guinea—25c each.

This is an opportunity to sell some cull hens and other chickens, save feed, and realize some money with which to purchase other things. Clean up your poultry house, spray with old crank case oil, and put clean litter on the floor. It is easier to prevent mites getting into the house, than it is to get them out after the house is infested.

A little Sodium Fluoride dusted on the setting hen will help control lice and prevent the death of lots of baby chicks. Do this before the eggs hatch. Paint the roost poles with tobacco sulphate about an hour before hens go to roost to control lice.

Let's cull our flocks and give this car a full load. Every chicken moved in this car will help our local market by not over supplying it.

Yours very truly,
J. W. FANT, County Agent.

Number of Duck Hunters Decrease

Montgomery, Ala., Jan. 27.—Duck hunters, if the sale of ducks stamps is any indication, were not as numerous in Alabama this past season as they were the year before.

A report of the Biological Survey to the State Conservation Department, covering sales of migratory bird hunting stamps for the fiscal years of 1935 and 1936, showed that only 1,403 duck stamps were sold in the State this past year as compared with 2,581 during 1935.

An early season survey by the Conservation Department disclosed ducks to be rather abundant along the Gulf coast but cross winds kept the inlets shallow and the hunters, who did venture out, had difficulty in the mud flats.

Weather and tide conditions improved considerably toward the end of the waterfowl season and it is possible that a greater demand developed for the stamps.

Duck hunting at its best, however, furnishes little competition for bird hunts, dove shoots, deer drives and turkey hunts in Alabama. Even with the scarcity of wild waterfowl in recent years, this State has had more than enough to supply the demand.

The answer seems to lie in the abundance of the other game species and the more popular sport they offer.

For 21 years Walter D. Pell, 70, has hauled the mail in a wheelbarrow between the postoffice and the Fall River trolley cars at New Bedford, Mass.

When arrested for stealing tobacco and cigars, Thomas Barrett of Chicago pleaded that he did it for his starving children.

Joseph Van Cura of Berwyn, Ill., his uncle in Czechoslovakia, and a cousin in India each has a double row of upper molars. All were born on the 19th of September, though in different years.

Charles Becker, 75, Philadelphia, has saved and kept a record of everything he has found for the last 59 years. His collection now numbers 1,627 items and includes $225 in money.

If Help Is Needed Firms Are Asked To Consult WPA

Montgomery, Ala., Jan. 27.—Persons and firms in need of help today were urged by A. P. Morgan, Jr., acting administrator, to make full use of the Works Progress Administration receiver of the unemployed, which includes labor of various skills.

While only a few farm families, and relatively few highly skilled persons remain on the rolls, a considerable quantity of common labor and employees of the "white collar" group are readily available, he said.

The method of obtaining labor from the Works Progress Administration is through use of the facilities of the State and National Reemployment Offices, where not only relief labor, but unemployed persons who have never been on relief, are registered and awaiting a call to work. The Reemployment offices are units of the U. S. Department of Labor.

Any qualified employment office who through the Reemployment office who does not accept the job offered him will be immediately discharged by the WPA if the wages offered are in line with those paid in that county for the type of work, Mr. Morgan said.

The Reemployment Services have representatives in almost all of the counties and a complete record of each unemployed person is available for the prospective employer. Assignment of the unemployed is a responsibility of the Reemployment Service.

E. L. Gaylor of Saugus, Mass., claims the world's record for holding his breath. In a recent laboratory experiment at Wesleyan University, he held it for 14 minutes and 2 seconds.

LABOR IN BIG RUSH FOR BIRTHDAY BALL

SCOUTERS' ROUND TABLE HELD MONDAY EVENING

On Monday evening at 7:00 o'clock an important meeting was held in the office of J. Mell Martin for the purpose of discussing the further promotion of Scouting activities in the Clanton area. The Clanton area includes all of Chilton County, however at this time only Clanton and Thorsby have active troops. In this meeting some plans were discussed with reference to the promotion of troops in at least two other centers.

Scouting is by no means a new adventure as a means of developing boyhood. This organization was incorporated on February 8, 1910 under the laws of the District of Columbia. It was chartered by the National Congress on June 15, 1916. The development of this organization has been nothing less than phenomenal. Wherever you go in the United States—whether in Maine or Texas, Washington, D.C., or Florida—you find scouts anywhere. In city, town or open country Scout troops dot every corner of the nation, and span in their uniforms and honored because of their services. Approximately 50 per cent of the male students in our colleges today have seen actual scouting service. Statistics reveal that this group excels in scholarship and in attaining success after leaving college.

In addition to the above brief facts which apply to the United States it is gratifying to know that this organization is to be found in seventy-three civilized countries. Scouting is possibly the greatest brotherhood of boys and men that can be found in the civilized world.

As the anniversary of this great organization is observed during the second week of February every good citizen should consider it a patriotic duty to become familiar with the ideas and facts which make this the greatest organization in this country.

Those attending the conference on Monday evening included C. G. Lackey, Regional Scouting executive; Rev. Lawrence Stanley, Scoutmaster of Thorsby troop; Leroy Peterson, patrol leader of First Patrol, Thorsby Troop; J. Mell Martin, Scout committeeman; Reese Mullins, Scoutmaster Clanton Troop; Ed Mullins, assistant scoutmaster, Clanton Troop; James Carl Martin and Paul Cowan of the Clanton Troop; J. B. Atkinson, chairman of the Kiwanis Committee on Scouting and Luther E. Little, Chairman Area Committee.

All Branches Unite In Polio Drive

New York, N.Y., Jan. 27.—Organized labor wherever its school of thought and whatever immediate problems it faces as better times again come to the United States, is joining this year with customary energy in the American battle against infantile paralysis. Colonel Harry L. Doherty, for the fourth time chairman of the National Committee for the President's Birthday Ball, said today.

Colonel Doherty announced reports at national headquarters showed unprecedented activity on the part of hundreds of local labor organizations working under the chairmanship of William Green, President of the American Federation of Labor, in an effort to make the national birthday party even more successful than it has been during the past three years.

Organized by Chairman Green, Secretary Mathew Wolf, Executive Secretary Gilbert E. Hyatt and Chester Wright, director of publicity, the union of steel, railways, coal, paper, the restaurant and hotel workers, the typographical men, in short, all its branches, is putting a weight into the job of setting the many Americans as possible community dances on January 30, to contribute toward the war chest for the protection of young people.

John L. Lewis, head of the Committee for Industrial Organization, is a member of Colonel Doherty's national committee. The feeling is general, reports from national headquarters show, that division of receipts from the birthday party, seventy per cent for the relief of sufferers from infantile paralysis, thirty per cent to the President's birthday party for the National fight, particularly strong appeal throughout the country.

Attend President's Birthday Ball Thursday Night At City Hall

Propose New Set-Up On Absentee Ballots

Low Will Affect This County And Cut Down Number Of Absentee Ballots; Will No Doubt Pass Soon

Bill has been introduced in the present session of the Legislature of Alabama which will materially affect absentee voters of Chilton County, according to Representative C. B. Cox and Senator Earle Thomas, who are doing some excellent work among the state's lawmakers.

The bill, if passed and enacted into law, will cut down the number of absentee ballots in this county by a large number. The original bill was amended and the substitute introduced last week and will be of vital interest here. Following is a copy of the substitute bill which is expected to pass and become law:

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF ALABAMA:
Section 1. All qualified voters of the State of Alabama who desire to cast an absentee ballot in any primary, general or special election shall apply in writing to the Probate Judge of the County in which they are qualified to vote for an absentee ballot. This application shall be made in person by the voter not less than five (5) and not more than seventeen (17) days preceding the election in which the voter desires to vote and shall be accompanied by an affidavit made before the Probate Judge to the effect that the voter desires to cast an absentee ballot and will be unable to be in the County where the voter is qualified to vote on the day such election is held. Upon the filing of said application and affidavit, the Probate Judge shall ascertain whether or not the applicant is a qualified elector and if so, shall forthwith issue an absentee ballot which shall be marked in ink by the voter immediately upon delivery thereof to him or her and in the presence of the Probate Judge and Chairman of the Board of Registrars and of no other person and without leaving the ballot in the hands of the voter. The ballot so marked shall be placed in a sealed envelope and delivered by the voter to the Chairman of the Board of Registrars in a ballot box to be furnished him or her for that purpose by the authority charged with the responsibility of furnishing ballot boxes for the election. The ballot box shall be locked and sealed with the seal of the Probate Judge, the Sheriff and the Clerk of the Circuit Court of the County in such manner as to prevent its being opened, but the opening in said box through which the ballots are deposited shall not be removed therefrom until the election is opened. The Chairman of the Board of Registrars of said County shall be the custodian of said box until the day of the election, when he shall deliver the same at 12:00 noon to the officers holding the election who are in charge of the absentee voters' box. The box in the custody of the Chairman of the Board of Registrars shall be kept in a vault or safe and delivered by him to the Probate Judge, the Clerk of the Circuit Court and the Sheriff of the County, and shall be opened at 12:00 noon and the contents of said box counted, tabulated and certified and the returns made by the News for the election of the absentee box of said County. The voter receiving an absentee ballot shall, himself, immediately upon receipt from the Probate Judge, the Clerk of the Circuit Court and the Sheriff, deposit same in ink as provided, deposit same in ink as provided, deposit same in ink as provided.

A full attendance of all members is expected tonight, according to J. Mel Martin, secretary and several guests, including many business men of the city will be present. Last Thursday night, the club, with almost one hundred per cent attendance, heard a most interesting discussion on child labor between Homer Roberts, superintendent of the Alabama Mills here and Dr. Samuel J. ELECTRIC MAILING MACHINE TO BE INSTALLED BY NEWS

Automatic Machine Will Take Care Of Huge Increase In Circulation Following Large Subscription Campaign

A modern electric and automatic mailing machine will soon be placed in service at the Chilton County News to insure safe and prompt delivery of all subscribers' papers each week. The machine has already arrived and it is expected that it will be cut in operation within the next two weeks. This will be done just as soon as the News' subscription list can be thoroughly checked and corrected. This machine will print the name of each subscriber on the paper, instead of the small label which is now used and has been used by the News for many years. The use of this modern machine will eliminate any possibility of a paper being knocked from the paper carrier's delivery to the subscriber. In addition to these advantages this machine will enable the News office to keep a more correct record of all subscriptions and it will not send a paper to a subscriber whose subscription has expired. The subscription campaign of the News, which came to a close last Saturday, has added several hundred new subscribers, giving the News what is believed to be the largest circulation of any weekly newspaper in this section of Alabama.

$3000 IN BONDS PAID RECENTLY BY MAYOR JONES

Mayor Jones stated that he recently authorized the payment of $3,000 of school bonds, with interest, the interest being at six per cent. The total of the school bonds was eight thousand dollars and has now been cut down to five thousand, Mr. Jones stated.

This action on the part of the city will save the city treasurer fifteen dollars per month in interest payments on these bonds, it was stated. "We are going forward," Mayor Jones stated. "We owe less and have more now than we did when this administration took office over two years ago, when we started paying off the debts of the city. I realize that it has been the splendid cooperation of members of the city council and citizens of the city, that makes this progress possible."

Since Mayor Jones assumed office, $17,500 in bonds have been paid, saving the city a great deal in interest payments. The bonds paid recently amounting to three thousand dollars, are not due until 1948, city clerk Pipes stated.

Funeral from the dance went to children affected with infantile paralysis in this county and to the Springs Foundation. A neat affair was realized here.

CHILTON COUNTY EXCEEDS QUOTA OF RED CROSS FUNDS FOR NEEDY

Chairman J. Mel Martin Says People Of Chilton Generous In Contributions To Aid Flood Sufferers; Says "Sky Is Limit"

Citizens of Chilton County went down into their pockets during the past week and brought out over one thousand dollars toward the fund for the relief of persons in the flooded areas of the Ohio and Mississippi rivers, where the need is still great, according to J. Mel Martin, local disaster chairman, and Dr. C. O. Lawrence, county Red Cross chairman.

Mr. Martin stated that already, two large shipments of food, clothing and bedding have been made to the regional headquarters of the American Red Cross at Nashville.

While the Red Cross set this county's quota at six hundred dollars, this amount was far exceeded and indications are that it will be more than doubled, according to Mr. Martin, who with Dr. Lawrence and others are doing some excellent work in this matter.

More Is Needed
"The sky is the limit," Mr. Martin stated when asked if more was needed. "The need for food, warm clothing and bedding is most urgent in the section in Kentucky. Although the weather there is clearing, it is cold up there and the thousands of families were driven from their homes without sufficient clothing or bedding," Mr. Martin continued.

Let Clanton Speak
While it is understood that this county is doing well in this emergency, the amount of money turned in was in somewhat large contributions. The citizens of the county at large have not responded as well as could be expected, according to a check-up made by the News this week.

The Danger Season

Motorists, take warning. This is the time of year when accidents on the streets involving children are most likely to occur. A slippery street where brakes are of little effect—child, thoughtless and happy coasting down a hill—the possibilities we leave to your imagination.

Anything can happen, and the recollection of the mangled form of a child under your wheels will harass your memory for years even though you may be within your rights, even though you incur no criminal or civil liability.

An icy road or sidewalk is too much of a temptation to slide of coast for any child to control. An icy street is a difficult place to bring your car into immediate control. These are things to keep constantly in mind right now.

Most of the motorists of this section appreciate this hazard, and endeavor at all times to keep their cars under control. But a few, alas, seem to feel that every street is a speedway. They drive at times as though they were alone in the entire community. These drivers should be watched. They should also be warned, and if they persist in their own reckless ways, sterner measures should be applied.

For the life of a child is too great a price to pay, regardless of what good reasons there may be to hurry.

A Different Problem

Labor disturbances today present us with our most serious problem. With sit-down strikers, alleged lock-outs, controversies over collective bargaining, and conflict between rival labor unions the public is somewhat bewildered by the present turn of events.

Many of us would like to sympathize with labor. We recognize its right to square deal. But where shall we stand when there is conflict between the American Federation of Labor and the Committee for Industrial Organization. On whose side shall we throw our sympathy when one group of workers goes out on strike and wages pitched battle with police officers and another pledges its loyalty to the company in parades and demonstrations?

When one large group of workers demands their right to return to work while another fights for the right to bargain collectively, we have a difficult situation. It is not easy to take sides if you desire to be fair. It is not merely a clear cut conflict between capital and labor. At times it seems more like a conflict between one branch of labor and another.

And the public, unfortunately, stands to lose heavily. Every farmer in Chilton County has an interest in industrial employment. He knows from difficult experience in recent years that the prices of what he produces depends in a large measure upon the condition of the pocket book of the American industrial worker. Any every citizen in this county knows too from the past experience that his success is measured to a considerable extent by the prices received by local farmers.

So we are all affected by present labor unrest though we may be miles from the center of excitement and difficulty.

If these conflicts between branches and groups of labor continue and the public welfare is seriously damaged as a result, we predict that the time may come when people will turn against organized labor. This loss of public sympathy and support will be serious to labor.

Our humble suggestion would be that labor seek to clarify the issues, patch up the rifts now existing between the two major groups, and even give some consideration to the will of the millions of unorganized workers, whose rights and welfare must also be taken into account.

Our Unity of Interests

An acquaintance was telling about a trip into a wilderness area of Canada. "Oh, yes," he replied answering an inquiry, "they can raise crops up there. They can grow almost any of the ordinary crops except corn. But there are no markets. The country is not well enough settled, that's why there is practically no agricultural development."

It was just a casual remark, but it served well to emphasize the importance of a community like Clanton to the surrounding agricultural area. Good markets, how important they are in the development of an area. Good soil, a fair climate, ample rainfall—these surely are important, but without markets there can be little agricultural prosperity.

That's one of the things that Clanton offers to the farmers of this territory. But it is only one. There are many other benefits that the farmers of this territory derive from our community.

There is that highly important matter of education. Our high school is open to students from the surrounding rural area. More than that the course of study is especially planned for their benefit and rightly so.

Our various business houses exist largely to serve the farmers of this area. After a short drive over fine roads he can secure here almost anything he needs from repair parts for his implements to groceries or clothing for his family.

We offer entertainment too. It may be a regular movie show or it may be some community event planned especially for his benefit, but whatever it is he may look to this community for some of the most enjoyable hours of his life.

For these reasons we believe that the farmers of this territory are as definitely interested in the progress of Clanton as the citizens who live within the survey lines that mark its limits. The progress which we achieve reacts to their benefit. The value of a farm is partially determined by its proximity to a live town.

What we say about the interest of the farmers in the progress of Clanton works the other way too. Certainly we realize full well the vital importance of agriculture to our community. It is shown by the many ways in which we endeavor to serve the best interests of agriculture here.

Consider it as you will, it is almost obvious that our entire community is a unit, bound together by common interests and common aspirations. When we realize this and work together to attain our common objectives we will be taking a major step in the direction of community progress.

Only A Few

We have observed that most of the community enterprises which are projected with success here in Chilton County are handled by a small group of enthusiastic, public spirited, loyal workers. A large proportion of our citizens prefer to remain on the side-lines. Many of them offer only words of carping criticism.

They are quick to detect mistakes made by those who try to do something. They are slow to offer a helping hand. They have no understanding of the real meaning of co-operation.

And yet notable things are accomplished. Year after year new enterprises are started in Chilton County, and many of these efforts meet with success. If it were not for this small group of community minded citizens upon whom one can depend, we wonder what progress would be made in Chilton County.

All we can offer these loyal, public spirited citizens at the present time is a word of encouragement and an acknowledgement of the important part they play in the life of the community. They must derive their satisfaction from the knowledge that they belong to the class of people who keep the wheels of this world turning.

We regret that there are not more people who recognize this and who might be made to catch the vision of what this community would be if all would work together in harmony toward the goal of civic progress.

Whenever you say there ought to be a law against that, just look it up. You'll probably find that there is.

Judging from actions it would seem that many a man's family tree was a slippery elm.

Some people are always waiting for something to turn up. Some are always turning up something while waiting. This marks the difference between the dreamer and the doer.

MORAL ECHOES.

D. W. Haslow

We sat in the stateroom of an airliner with fourteen other people. The pilot touched the buttons and the engines went into action. He pulled the levers and the ship dashed off on its run. For the air. We were out for a new thrill—the thrill of the air. Soon we were leaving the ground and the earth seemed to float away. It was surprisingly strange to look afar and see the things that were hid to us before going into the air. My attention was directed toward the pilot more than to the beauties of the land and water. I watched him closely as he directed the ship on its upward flight. It did not take me long to learn that the pilot knew his job and then I could trust him. Many years ago I entered the ship of my Christ. He said that He would lift me above the world and give to me the thrill of holy living. He touched my heart with His finger and turned on the power of His spirit and soon I was on the run for God's highway. For weeks after my conversion I watched the pilot of my soul with close attention, but it did not take me long to know that he knew his business and I could trust him. It is grand to go into the air and travel above the world and travel with Him above the world and into heavenly places.

When we were on the straight line of travel in the air the beautiful homes below appeared to be boxes sitting on the ground. The clay road stretching away into the distance seemed to be lines of blood flowing from the wounds of a hurt world. Automobiles on those roads seemed to be flies about the wheels of the flood. Far away to the north there was a sea of clouds that spread out like a sheet of slate. We were now so high that nothing of a worldly nature intercepted our vision. We could see as far in all directions as the vision of the eye would go. Did you know that when a Christian is traveling far above the world that to him his vision goes out afar and while he can see the world in all of its turmoil and bloodshed, yet there is to him vision of God and eternal life. It is grand to travel where the things of this world look insignificant and where we do not have the things of the world to intercept our vision outward and upward. How many of you are traveling in the highways of this world, wallowing in the crimson tide of a sinful life? Rise above the world.

We suffered no feeling of fear on our trip into the air until we looked down as the plane traveled over the landing field. It must have been a thousand feet below. We knew that in another minute the ship would be landing there. When the pilot turned the nose of the ship toward the ground it seemed that the earth leaped into the air to meet us. It was the going down that upset our feelings and made us to think that we were being turned upside side out like a sock. It was rather a consoling thump when we felt the wheels of the plane touch the ground. Did you know that people have a peculiar feeling when they are going down in a moral spiritual sense? Would that this awful feeling of a certain ruin would cause those of our race who are headed toward certain ruin to change their downward course and again take the air toward life and safety.

The pilot needed just one more in his ship to complete the load. I looked in and many voices chimed in. "Oh Doctor, please get in here with us and take the trip. If you are with us, we know you will pray and we will get back safely. We will feel so much better if you are along." It is a fact that folks feel better when a good man or woman is with them in the hour of danger. Somehow we feel that God will take care of those who love Him in a special way. After the ship had landed here is what two young ladies said as they met their friends: "We knew we would get back all right for the Doctor went with us."

All of my life I have said that I would never take a trip on an aeroplane. Three minutes before sailing in to the air I affirmed that belief in no uncertain tones. Without notice my decision was changed and I was in waiting to sail away. That leads me to say that we never know ourselves. Many of you are doing today the things that you have said that you would never do. That leads me to say that we never know what folks will do. We have placed our word on the decision of other folks only to find them doing the thing that we were sure that they would never do. O, well, they tell me that wise men change their minds, but that folks never.

HISTORY REPEATS ITSELF

IF EVER there was a case of "history repeats itself" in American politics it was illustrated in the careers of Henry Clay and James G. Blaine.

Separated by half a century, those careers were almost exact duplicates of near achievement and ultimate disaster. There were other resemblances also.

Both men were magnetic in personality, eloquent in speech and idolized by their followers. Both were master politicians and dominated the councils of their parties but both fell victims to a political enemy whose fateful vengeance followed them all through their days of striving for the presidency. Andrew Jackson was Clay's Nemesis; Rocco Conkling was Blaine's.

Early in his career Blaine recognized his similarity to Clay. When Grover Cleveland, then comparatively unknown, was nominated by the Democrats in 1884, Blaine had a premonition of defeat. "I am the Henry Clay of the Republican party," he declared to a friend. "Clay was defeated in two conventions when he could have been elected, and he was nominated for President when his competitor was elected. That competitor (Polk) was one who had not been publicly discussed as a presidential candidate before the meeting of the Baltimore convention in 1844. I was defeated in two conventions when I could have been elected. I am nominated now with a competitor alike obscure with the competitor of Clay."

Then he shook his head and murmured sadly, "1844—1884!"

His premonition of defeat was a true one. Cleveland, the unknown, beat him in 1884 just as Polk, the unknown, beat Clay in 1844.

So among all the "also-rans" of American political history Henry Clay of Kentucky and James G. Blaine of Maine come down to us as the "really epic figures that stand out as tragic personifications of forlorn hopes."

'Pick Industries,' Advises Mangum

"Industry, which has always migrated in the United States, has started toward the southwest. Its coming to come to Alabama whether we go after it or not. But we should try to get the best of it."

This was the point made by Robert H. Mangum, past grand chancellor of the Knights of Pythias, in a public relations council for Alabama Power Co. speaking before members of the Knights of Pythias Luncheon Club at the Redmont Hotel.

Mr. Mangum said that Alabama today facing the greatest migration of industry in the history of the state. And this industry will come to our special factory sites or special nurseries or "pick industries."

BLACKBERRY BUSHES WILL CHECK EROSION

Auburn, Ala.—Blackberry and elderberry bushes grow around the farm on areas where erosion is not a particular problem can be transplanted at this season to areas where they will be of real value in erosion control, advises the Alabama Extension Service and Soil Conservation Service. Terrace outlets, gullied and galled areas are especially desirable sites for such plantings.

Other shrubs like privet, which with blackberry and elderberry are valuable for wildlife food and cover, can also be transplanted to these areas to advantage. Popular cuttings, and in moist places willow cuttings, will aid in erosion control if set out at this time.

AAA PROGRAM IS BEING CARRIED OUT AS PLANNED

IS NOT BEING ABANDONED AS BEING RUMOR'D

Well-Rounded Program Is Hoped For Says Secretary Wallace

(Special to The News)—Secretary Wallace by telephone from Chicago authorized the following statement: "The AAA soil conservation program for 1937, to which I gave my approval a few weeks ago, is being carried out as planned. It is not being 'abandoned' as some reports have implied. The aim of the program is and has been to provide for abundant production up to the point of avoiding soil waste. The program, by encouraging crops which are not only soil-conserving but drought resistant, has been devised to give consumers and farmers maximum protection in event of another drought. If farmers participate in the 1937 AAA conservation program as wholeheartedly as in 1936, a season of normal weather would provide ample supplies of all products for consumers and refill the bins and granaries which are now empty on account of the 1936 drought. Except for such diversion of food and

City, County, State And Private Securities All Share In Upturn

By Irving Beiman, in The Birmingham Post

Definitely improved business conditions in Birmingham and Alabama are reflected in the values of city, county and state bonds, which are now at pre-depression levels, a survey showed today.

Birmingham bond brokers added that free securities here are selling higher than before the depression.

Particularly indicative of the excellent credit standing of the Jefferson County government was the financing sale last week of $260,000 of road warrants by the County Commission. The feed crops as is necessary for soil conservation. I believe it is in the interests of consumers, farmers and the general public that farmers produce abundantly of these crops this year. When the bins and granaries are full, storage in the soil instead of in the bin should be planned for.

"It is my definite hope that a well-rounded, workable program providing for the ever normal granary, which will function with justice both with respect to the farmer and consumer in years of good and bad weather alike, can be perfected this year."

warrants carried three per cent interest, the lowest rate at which the county has ever sold bonds or warrants.

Woodward Bonds Soar
"This was unquestionably due to the good credit standing of the county, good business management at the Courthouse, as well as prevailing low interest rates," a Birmingham bond broker said. "The county has operated within its income over a long period. This record is a great help in marketing bonds."

Woodward Iron Co. bonds have skyrocketed to an all-time high mark. In the last 90 days they have advanced from 82 to 124, in anticipation of the company's reorganization plan. Federal Judge David J. Davis will take action on the plan at a final hearing in Federal Court Friday.

He is expected to approve the proposal, under which the company's fixed interest charges on bonds will be lowered and interest in arrears will be paid, partly in cash and partly by issuance of new second mortgage bonds.

Birmingham Water Works Co. bonds have risen from a low of 75 at the depth of the depression in 1933 to 101.

City Bonds Up, Too
Improved rental collections and real estate values are reflected in the higher values of stocks of mortgage companies and building and loan associations in the Birmingham district. These stocks, however, are not at pre-depression levels.

4-H Club News

The Fairview 4-H Club met Tuesday, January 26, 1937, at 2 P.M. The meeting was called to order by the president. The club pledge was given by the whole club. Poultry was the subject of the program and those who took part were as follows:

Clean chicks—James Hossey.
Time to hatch chicks—Sarah Williams.

Clean brooding—Alee Culp.
Ventilation—Audrey Williams.
Brooders—Lois Durbin.

In the utilities, the $5 preferred stock of the Alabama Power Co. is quoted at $75 as against $28 in 1933.

Demand Increases
Stocks and bonds of local utilities, however, have not risen nearly as much as they have in sections where the utilities are more remote from the Tennessee Valley Authority area brokers assert.

As a whole, demand for local securities is better today than at any time in the last six years, brokers declare, and there is no question that salability of local stocks and bonds is as good today as before the depression.

Temperature—Jackson Chandler.

Clean feed and water—Edwin Culp.
A general discussion followed these subjects after which the meeting closed.—Reporter, Lois Durbin.

The Maplesville 4-H Club boys met January 27 at 10:15 o'clock. The president called the meeting to order and the secretary called the roll. Only a few members were absent. Our main topic was Poultry. The members gave pairs discussing how a brooder house should be built to raise chicks successfully and the proper rations for the chicks. Mr. Ivey also made a talk. He told of some of the experiments that were being carried out at Auburn. Mr. Ivey gave the members their project record books and explained how to keep them. There being no more business the meeting adjourned.—Reporter, Lewis Gandy.

The Thorsby 4-H Club met at the Thorsby Junior High School Thursday morning, January 2. A very interesting program was given on "Producing Profitable Pullets" which was given by several members of the club. After the program all the club asking questions after which the meeting adjourned until next month. We want to make the best better in Thorsby.—Reporter, Clayton Martin.

EMBLEMS

IF YOU live in a state where they still allow party emblems on the ballot, take a look at them as you mark yours. That eagle soaring above the clouds at the top of the Republican column should remind you of Gen. John C. Fremont, who was the first Republican candidate for President back in 1856. It may be reminiscent of the eagles which he saw when he was "The Pathfinder" in the West or it may mean that the Republicans have been in power so long during the last 80 years that they figure they have a better right than any other party to claim the national bird.

That lordly crowing rooster at the head of the Democratic column should remind you of Joseph Chapman of Indiana whose habit of crowing over Democratic victories a century ago resulted in this symbol for his party.

That rising sun, with its beams glinting over an ocean, as though foretelling the day when there will be "Water, water everywhere, but not a drop to drink" tells you that below it are the names of the candidates on the Prohibition ticket. Those hands clasped against a background of the earth tell of the Socialists' dream of greater equality for mankind all over the earth. That stout bare arm with the hammer in hand speaks for the Labor party and that sickle and hammer remind you that the Communists would have us follow the example of Soviet Russia.

There was once a time when a Bull Moose snorted defiance at the top of one column on the ballot. That was when Theodore Roosevelt was seeking a third term under the Progressive banner but since 1912 the Bull Moose has been an extinct political animal.

Of course, if you live in a state where they use voting machines the emblems may be slightly different.

The reason for these emblems on the ballot is a practical one, besides their symbolical significance. In the early days they were placed there to aid voters who had left their spectacles at home and who didn't want to vote for the wrong candidates by mistake. When the tides of immigration began pouring into the country millions of foreigners who were illiterate, even after naturalization, these emblems were helpful to them in their voting. As new parties arose the use of these symbols helped avoid confusion and even though many efforts have been made to do away with them, they are still in widespread use.

An Alabama Farm Boy Makes Good In The Little Cities

V. J. ELMORE

By Clyde Cruse, in "Alabama"

Down on a Coffee County farm a youth named Virgil Jackson Elmore used to pause in his father's potato field, lean on his hoe and dream of being a prosperous merchant someday. Taking eggs to the store to barter led him to center his ambition on operation of a small-town emporium. He grabbed his first chance to shake the soil from his boots, don a clerk's apron, begin a career on the other side of the trading.

That was in Elba before the War. Returning from France he stopped in Clanton, surveyed the state from that central point, decided it was a good place to begin making his dream come true. Starting a general store partnership in 1918, he ran it until 1925 before he saw he was getting nowhere, opened a small five-and-ten business as a sideline.

Its counters proved popular to people used to going to Montgomery for such merchandise. Growing rapidly, it soon took all of V. J. Elmore's time. He sold his other interests, worked hard for a cautious two years before taking his next big step. Then he started a second store in Jasper.

Since 1927 he has opened 22 more, used as high as 300 employees, boosted his volume to more than $1,000,000 a year. When he saw the Christmas rush last month he decided depression was over. Speeding his rate of expansion, he launched a general improvement program, spotted six new locations for stores to open by June 1. This week he announced leases have been signed in Albertville, Boaz, Greensboro, Oneonta and Opp. On these a newly-hired young architect will test his decorative powers.

The Clanton "capital" of bald, business-like V. J. Elmore's five-and-ten chain is but 20 miles from Alabama's geographical center at Montevallo. The links already cover the state, stretching from Athens on the north to Bay Minnette on the south, from Eufaula on the east to Demopolis on the west. "I'm a little-town bird," says V. J. Elmore, and therefore he shuns the huger marts of Montgomery, Mobile and Birmingham, feels that in sticking to agricultural towns of not more than 10,000 population he is rendering a public service.

"I saw the need of this type of business to hold trade in the smaller centers," he said. "Now I'm getting a kick out of it, not so much in making money as in helping to spread prosperity over the state."

Despite this Chamber of Commerce doctrine V. J. Elmore has joined no civic organization. He plays golf and fishes occasionally, but mostly his business is also his hobby. Whatever time he can spare from it he gives to the Methodist Church, his wife and two school-aged children.

CARD OF THANKS

We take this means of expressing our deep appreciation for the words and deeds of kindness shown us during our recent bereavement at the death of Mrs. J. J. Dennis, of Prattville.—Mrs. J. H. Vinson and family.

Two Way Deal

It is reported that one of our local merchants received a note the other day saying: "Please send two dozen eggs by bearer, and if good, I will send a check."

To which the grocer, questioning the risk, replied: "Please send check, and if good, I will send two dozen eggs."

We rate this well among the best stories which have come to our attention recently.

Lodger: "Madam, this morning when I took a bath I found only a nail brush in the bathroom. I can't wash my neck with a thing like that."

Landlady: "Well, you've a tongue in your head, haven't you?"

Lodger: "Yes, but do you think I'm a swan?"

Incognito

Visitor to Prisoner: "What's your name, my good man?"

Prisoner: "8462."

Visitor: "What is that your real name?"

Prisoner: "Naw, dat's me pen name."

1935, he incorporated with Mrs. Elmore and a certified public accountant Francis B. Latady of Birmingham, to gain help and funds for expansion. With C. P. Accountant Latady as director, the firm has just placed on sale 4,000 $100 shares of five-and-ten stock. Anybody with money to invest may "buy in."

Five-and-Ten Man Elmore is not a bit surprised by his success. He lays it to sound business sense which told him from the first he could not get by with inferior goods and steep prices, now tells him he can more than double his present volume in Alabama perhaps even cover the South.

Hints to Gardeners

by Harm Dreese
Vegetable Expert
Ferry Seed Institute

Good Start Important

THE value of a garden plant, vegetable or flower, depends greatly upon the start it gets; so give your seedlings ample care. Begin cultivation as soon as rows are visible, if soil is not wet. Work close to the small plants, cultivating shallower as they grow, to avoid injury to root growth.

Cultivate often, at least once a week. Three days' delay almost doubles the work.

Irrigating should not be necessary for the first week or ten days after seeds have sprouted. If ground is baked hard and sprouts do not appear, the surface may be disturbed slightly to help the sprouts through.

Seedlings may be irrigated in two ways: Mark a shallow trench about four inches from the row and run trench full of water, or, using a fine spray, apply water from directly above plants. Watering is most effective when it closely follows cultivation. The best time of day for irrigating is late afternoon or evening.

If the garden appears definitely backward it may be aided by a light application of fertilizer. Ask your dealer for advice as to the kind and amount of fertilizer to use.

The best time for fertilizer application, however, is before planting, not after. If it is too late this year, remember it next season.

Small plants should be thinned, as directed on packets, to allow proper development. Certain vegetables may be used as thinned. For instance, onions thinned may be used as green onions, and lettuce may be picked for immediate use, leaving smaller leaves to develop.

Forms For Making Returns

Forms for filing returns of income for 1936 have been sent to persons who filed returns last year. Failure to receive a form, however, does not relieve a taxpayer of his obligation to file his return and pay the tax on time, on or before March 15 if the return is made on the calendar year basis, as is the case with most individuals.

Forms may be obtained upon request, written or personal, from the offices of collectors of internal revenue and deputy collectors. Persons whose net income for 1936 was derived chiefly from salary or wages and was not in excess of $5,000 should make their returns on form 1040A. Persons whose net income was in excess of $5,000, or regardless of amount, was derived from a business, profession, rents or sale of property, are required to use a larger form, 1040. Failure to use the proper form presents difficulties to both the taxpayer and the Bureau of Internal Revenue. Therefore, it is emphasized that a taxpayer engaged in a business or profession from which he derived a net income of less than

The return must be filed with the collector of internal revenue for the district in which the taxpayer has his legal residence or principal place of business on or before midnight of March 15, 1937. The tax may be paid in full at the time of filing the return or in four equal installments, due on or before March 15, June 15, September 15, and December 15.

RESOLUTION POINTS OUT MANY COMMENDABLE POINTS OF PLAN

Citizens Of Alabama Called Upon To Cooperate With Roosevelt Memorial Association In Erection Of Child's Hospital In Colbert

Last week, the Senate of Alabama, now in session, adopted a resolution endorsing the plan of the Roosevelt Memorial Association to erect a huge crippled children's hospital in Colbert County. The resolution was introduced by Senator Will Walton, of Chambers County, and received a unanimous vote. Hon. Ralph

M. Saliba, head of the association, spent some time in Clanton Monday, conferring with Billy Smith, chairman of the movement in this county. Following is the resolution:

SENTIMENT GROWING FOR STATE COUNCIL SEEN BY PRESS BODY

WHEREAS, the Franklin Delano Roosevelt Memorial Association was organized and incorporated in this state for the purpose of promoting a memorial to our President, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, in the form of a hospital for crippled children, and, WHEREAS, the Association has selected the site of Old LaGrange College in Colbert County for the erection of said memorial hospital, and, WHEREAS, a number of public spirited citizens of Colbert County, Alabama, have donated approximately 400 acres of land to the Association without cost to it, this land formerly constituting the town of LaGrange, Alabama, and, WHEREAS, the States of Tennessee and Mississippi through the chief executives and leading citizens are co-operating with the State of Alabama to make this undertaking successful, and,

WHEREAS, the Alabama State Federation of Labor, the American Legion Department of Alabama have passed resolutions endorsing this worthy movement and urging their membership to support it morally and financially, and,

WHEREAS, the governors of Illinois, Tennessee, and Hugh White of Mississippi, have issued proclamations and statements urging the citizens of their respective states to support this undertaking, and,

WHEREAS, the members of the Alabama State Legislature respect and admire President Roosevelt for his unselfish and patriotic interest and efforts in behalf of crippled children, and, WHEREAS, the outbreak of Infantile Paralysis Epidemic in this section of the country emphasizes the importance of and necessity for additional facilities to take care of those children who have been left crippled and otherwise injured by this dread disease, and,

WHEREAS, we desire to do honor to that great humanitarian, who through the years manifested a peculiar interest in the rehabilitation of the victims of this terrible enemy of childhood, therefore be it

RESOLVED, that the members of the Alabama State Legislature assemble in special session in Montgomery, Alabama, this 29th day of January, 1937, that we do hereby endorse the movement sponsored by the Franklin Delano Roosevelt Memorial Association to erect a hospital for crippled children in the Tennessee Valley on the site of Old LaGrange College, Colbert County, Alabama, and to dedicate the same as a memorial to the Honorable Franklin Delano Roosevelt, it further

RESOLVED, that we do hereby call upon the citizens of Alabama to co-operate with the Franklin Delano Roosevelt Memorial Association in its campaign to raise funds for this worthy enterprise, be it further

RESOLVED, that copies of this resolution be sent to the President, the governor of Tennessee, the governor of Mississippi, and to the Roosevelt Memorial Association, Sheffield, Alabama.

SOME writers have a tendency to make too frequent use of the comma, but how important the comma can be is illustrated by a document discovered a few years ago in Spain, which seemed to show that Sir Walter Raleigh was not, as is generally supposed, the first to introduce tobacco to Europe.

The document was a will drawn in the year 1623, more than half a century before Sir Walter smoked his first pipe. The testator named as one of his heirs a man assembly described as "Antonio, tobacco merchant of Lisbon." Closer examination of the will, however, convinced scholars that the proper reading was "Antonio Tobasso, merchant of Lisbon." Thus the placing of a comma threatened to deprive Raleigh of his fame as the patron saint of tobacco.

As a means of helping motorists to get the best possible service from their cars during the winter months and to avoid the annoyances that so frequently are associated with cold weather operation, W. A. Hilman, service manager of the Chrysler Sales Division, Chrysler Corporation, has compiled the following list of "don'ts."

Don't fail to have the fuel system (gas tank, carburetor, fuel pump, and fuel line) drained and flushed out for winter operation. Otherwise water collects and freezes somewhere in the system and the supply of fuel is shut off. In order to make sure that the system is free of water, the gas tank should be drained and the fuel pipe detached at the carburetor and blown out.

Don't use summer lubricants for winter driving. The summer type of lubricant is too heavy. It causes hard shifting of gears, excessive drain on the starting system and the use of unnecessary gasoline in starting. There also is heavy wear and tear on the working parts before the heat generated in running the engine thins out the lubricant to proper consistency. Be sure to change to winter lubricants throughout at once if you haven't already done so.

Another important feature in connection with lubrication is to have the oil pan removed and the sludge cleaned from it in a car that has been run for a long time. Also have the oil pump screen cleaned. Otherwise this screen picks up water that may freeze in extreme weather and clog up the oil system completely, thus causing bearings to burn out.

Don't use anti-freeze compounds containing ingredients that attack the metal of radiator, water pump, hose connections, etc. These compounds also have a bad effect on the hot water heater if one is installed. Make sure that any compound you buy is free from these injurious substances, for they do incalculable harm in a short time.

Don't drive with tires that are improperly inflated. To drive with under-inflated tires causes rapid wear cuts, punctures, blow-outs, hard steering and an excessive use of gasoline.

Over-inflation causes hard riding and disrupts and strains the tire carcass. It causes fatigue of the carcass, too.

Consult the chart issued by tire manufacturers to get the correct pressure for the type of tire you are using. The pressure to be used depends on the structure of the tire and type of tread.

Whatever else you do, don't under any circumstances drive with smooth or "bald-headed" tires in any part of the country where there is freezing weather. Smooth tires are one of the principal causes of skidding on snowy or icy streets. It costs much less to retread a tire or to have an old one retreaded than it does to pay for the damage that may be inflicted by a skid.

Time Machine

It was Anthony's first ride in a railway train, and the succession of wonders reduced him to a state of hysterical astonishment. The train rounded a slight bend and with a shriek of its whistle, plunged into a tunnel. There were gasps of surprise from the corner where Anthony was kneeling. Suddenly the train rushed into broad daylight again, and a small engine hissed to a stop.

It's a wonder!" exclaimed the small boy.

WHY ELSE ARE THEY THERE?

THE main purpose of any large dam, in which is installed generating equipment in keeping with the size of the dam, is to generate electricity. Incidental results can be lessening the effects of floods.

No dam can completely eliminate floods, because if there's more than enough rain to fill the lake behind the dam, then the surplus water must run over the dam. But by releasing water from the lake during dry weather, and storing water during rainy weather, the devastation of floods can be lessened; and when they do occur, they come so gradually that persons in lowlands will not be suddenly trapped.

The chief purpose of any hydro-electric development is the generation of electricity. We have six large hydro-electric generating plants in Alabama—on the Coosa and Tallapoosa Rivers. We operate them so as to not only produce an abundance of cheap electricity, but also coordinate their operation in such manner that effects of floods on these rivers, and the Alabama River, which these rivers form, are less than they would be if the dams were not in place.

DRUID CITY'S PROGRESS REVIEWED BY PUBLISHER

Tuscaloosa Journalist Relates Interesting Facts In Community's Past And Present

By BRUCE SHELTON
Publisher, The Tuscaloosa News
From "Progressive Alabama"

Some 117 years ago engineers of the United States Government came to a newly established village on the South bank of the Warrior River at the Tuscaloosa Shoals and laid out, in almost checkerboard fashion, the site of the City of Tuscaloosa.

Long since have the borders of that checkerboard been extended in every direction except that naturally stopped by the river itself. There has been some change in the interior squares of the checkerboard, but in the main original Tuscaloosa remains as drawn up by the federal engineers. These embroideries of President James Madison are due thanks for the wide streets with which Tuscaloosa is blessed.

Today, Tuscaloosa, bearing the name of a famous Indian chieftain who once roamed this region, is one of the few cities in Alabama that can claim a full century of existence. Yet, with the color and culture of a bygone day dear to all Southerners, this community now combines a vibrant newness with the old. Handsome residences, once occupied by ante-bellum governors of Alabama, still stand and promise to remain for many years. By their side are new, built modern homes, typical of the most advanced construction in this new day.

It is to the future that Tuscaloosa now looks with a promise and an expectation seldom excelled. Well may we regard 1937 as a golden year abloom, with a $4,000,000 construction program under contract, with her State institutions maintaining steady progress, with her industrial activities consistently accelerated and her mercantile life already feeling the surge of trade that accompanies action in other phases.

But the prospects were not always thus. The old town of Tuscaloosa, tracing her history back to 1816 when adventureous folk from Tennessee trekked to this Indian-inhabited region, has passed through several distinct periods of progress and relapse.

First this community, situated at the headwaters of the navigable Warrior River, became a natural trading center for a large part of Alabama. Early in her history, (1826) came the State Capitol, transferred from Cahaba because of flood conditions there. With the capitol came the tempestuous political activity and prosperity that made Tuscaloosa the vortex of Alabama governmental affairs in those hectic times.

In 1831, through action of the legislature, a seat of learning was established on property which was then on the outskirts of Tuscaloosa. It became the great University of Alabama, which now has a student body exceeding the total enrollment represented in the first 50 years of the institution's history.

Tuscaloosa's prosperity founded upon political activity lasted but two decades, as the capitol was transferred to Montgomery in 1846 after a legislative struggle of major proportions. With its removal came inevitable decline in population and activity from which increased industrial enterprises were serving to draw the community when the Civil War broke out. Establishment of Bryce Hospital, central unit of the Alabama Insane Hospitals, came about in 1859 to lay the foundation for a great state institution.

The War Between the States brought its horrors to Tuscaloosa first-hand, providing a pitched battle between University Cadets and Union soldiers, with the subsequent burning of all but three buildings on the college campus. Only the president's mansion, now regarded as one of the South's prime examples of early architecture, a small sentry box and an observatory building escaped the torch during this invasion.

Reconstruction days passed with their bitter political and economic strife and their domestic miseries. Then the sky began to brighten and Tuscaloosa launched an upward march which has continued to this good day. It began in 1893 when the federal government placed three locks on the Tuscaloosa Shoals, making the Warrior River navigable beyond this point. Other locks came, sending the river and its tributaries into the rich coal and iron fields just northeast of Tuscaloosa.

Today the Warrior River has reached another distinct phase in its development, with contract let for a huge $3,500,000 lock and dam at this point, to supplant the three smaller locks. Tuscaloosa people appreciate of the purposeful labors extended by their veteran representative, Congressman William B. Oliver, have already designated the new structure as Oliver Dam. This big project, but the first step in a well-planned program to make the Warrior River an incalculable asset to the industry of the entire state. Already the river has added much to Tuscaloosa's industrial life, as on it are located the Central Coal, Iron and Foundry Company operations, Holston's expanding Gulf States Paper Corporation nearby, both within five miles of Tuscaloosa's downtown.

Tuscaloosa's growth as a center for state institutions has given her a character and a place in Alabama which are unique in civic development. Thousands of Alabama parents send their children to the University of Alabama each year. Other Alabama families, confronted with the difficult task of making life bearable for beloved ones ill of nervous diseases, send them to Bryce Hospital and the Parlow State School with the assurance that no institution of their kind in the country are better managed. Despite meagerly support from the state, the self-reliant and resourceful administration of these hospitals has found a way to meet their responsibility to the helpless citizens of Alabama.

One of the most amazing chapters of college growth in America has been written at the University of Alabama, where student enrollment has increased ten-fold since President George H. Denny, now retiring, took the helm in 1912. These advances in enrollment have been accompanied by high standards of scholarship, improvement of physical equipment and development of extra-curricular activities, all of which promise to be continued and expanded under the administration of Dr. Richard C. Foster, the new president. About the University's athletic progress, especially in football, there needs little to be said for the "Crimson Tide" is known to every American who follows college sport.

This community's institutional development received further impetus in 1932 when a U.S. Veterans Hospital was established on the eastern outskirts to give medical and surgical relief to Alabama's war-afflicted veterans. Allocations have already been made for an additional unit to this establishment in order to meet its growing list of patients.

Industrially, agriculturally and in a mercantile way Tuscaloosa has always been "The Capitol of West Alabama." Never has this title been better earned than today, with paved roads leading into Tuscaloosa from its county line on all four directions.

Rich timberlands which share West Alabama's rich territory have caused this area to be a center for the lumbering industry as well as a sportsman's paradise. Recent revival of construction in the South has been accompanied with enlivened activity by lumber mills and similar plants throughout the region. Tuscaloosa herself has several substantial lumber establishments and the community is known as the Druid City in recognition for the century-old water oaks, planted here by far-sighted residents in the 1830's.

Weaving her industrial and institutional growth into the general fabric of her civic structure, Tuscaloosa has retained much of the Old South. It has remained a community in which the cultural pursuits are carried on at a pace paralleled with her material and economic progress. She has fortified her early spiritual strength with a large number of churches which contribute much to her everyday life.

It is difficult to place one's finger on one definite factor to prove the well-rounded development of Tuscaloosa. Census statistics, recording the growth of population, give a certain index to her growth, although they do not include some 4,500 University students, hundreds of other persons connected with institutions here, or the several thousand who live on the immediate fringes of the city limits. Tuscaloosa, unlike many municipalities, has not extended her limits in recent years, despite her unprecedented residential increase.

Tuscaloosa is unique in that she remains the one large incorporated town in the county that is Alabama's second largest in area, with a range of 1,346 square miles. Northport, a town of 2,712 persons on the north bank of the Warrior River, is the only other municipality.

Since 1900 Tuscaloosa has grown approximately three-fold in population, as enumerated under the 1930 U.S. Census requirements. The figures for the intervening decades present an extraordinary comparison. They are:

Year	Population
1910	8,256

ALABAMA FARMERS BREAK RECORD GROWING LEGUMES

Auburn, Ala.—A total of 8,015,395 pounds of winter legume seed was planted in 63 counties in 1936, according to figures submitted by Alabama county agents.

"This is a new high mark in the use of winter legumes for soil-building and erosion control exceeding by more than 1,250,000 pounds the record of 1934 when 6,649,399 pounds were planted," says J. C. Lowery, extension agronomist.

"Had seed been available, plantings in Alabama would have exceeded 10,000,000 pounds. Several million pounds of seed requested by farmers were never delivered," he states.

Based on present prices, crops following the winter legumes will be increased in yields by more than $6,250,000. "Thus, the winter legume program promoted by the Alabama Extension Service and based on experiments of the Alabama Experiment Station becomes a $36,000,000 demonstration—having added at least that amount to the agricultural income of Alabama since its beginning some 15 years ago," Lowery comments.

Turned winter legumes increase the yields of the following corn by more than 20 bushels per acre. Such increases make it possible for farmers to produce 30 to 50 bushels of corn per acre and supply the corn needs of their farms. Legumes also are enabling many farmers to follow a live-at-home program who were never able to do so before adopting winter legumes in a soil building program. Furthermore winter legumes afford much valuable erosion control.

IRISH POTATO FACTS

PRESENTED BY WARE

Auburn, Ala.—Experiments show that Alabama farmers will profit by using one of two methods of fertilizing, spacing, and planting Irish potatoes.

1. With 16-inch spacing the potatoes should be fertilized with 1500 pounds of 410-7 per acre and planted with 1½-ounce seed pieces.

2. When planted on first-year new ground the potatoes should receive a side application of nitrate of soda in addition to the mixed fertilizer. The side application is not needed on any land except first-year new ground.

The two leading varieties of Irish potatoes for Alabama are the Triumph and Cobbler. Farmers growing spring and fall crops will find the Triumph the most desirable. Those growing only one crop per year may desire the Cobbler due to its winter characteristics, remaining dormant for a longer period.

The experimental facts about Irish potatoes were obtained from Prof. L. M. Ware, head of the horticulture and forestry department of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute. County agents and Prof. Ware will be glad to furnish farmers further details about how to make the greatest profits growing potatoes.

That's What I Think

Saul M. Goldstein

There is always a lot of grumbling about what a selfish, unfeeling bunch of hard eggs we humans are, and how even our religious philosophy of "love thy neighbor as thyself" is based on the selfish tenet that you must love yourself pretty much to love with; but every once in a while something happens to make us change our minds and think that there must be something pretty good in the genus homo after all.

When the flood began hitting human beings pretty hard up in Ohio and Kentucky, the Red Cross got to the job. A nation-wide campaign was started and quotas were assigned to each community. Chilton County was asked to raise six hundred dollars in cash. It is a remarkable tribute to the unselfishness of the people of Chilton County that before a public appeal was responded with voluntary, unsolicited contributions which totalled over one thousand dollars in cash, besides hundreds of dollars worth of food and clothing.

Don't misunderstand: we're not patting ourselves on the back. We're simply pointing out a fact to show that we don't always think of ourselves as being forthcoming eventually, and on newspaper reports, this signature will be the Red Cross got to the job. It will be a momentous decision to make. It took the people of the United States fourteen years to make such a decision; and it is hard to countenance the return of hard liquor when you see working men taking the money which should pay for food and clothing for their families and spending it on alcoholic mixtures.

BUT—and it is an important BUT—the way I see it, those working men have been getting those alcoholic mixtures without a great deal of difficulty right along during the twenty-two years. Illegal dispensers of the cup that cheers have been netting a rich profit off the thirsty without any taxation from the community and without any control over the quality and purity of their wares. A return of legal liquor dispensed by state stores would discourage the bootlegger, control the amount of whiskey sold to each individual, guarantee a quality which would not be harmful, and provide a source of revenue to the state as against the fortunes which have been spent in more or less successful attempts at enforcement of the prohibition law.

Getting down to brass tacks, it really isn't a matter of whether or not the people of Alabama counties shall drink; it is a question of whether the state shall benefit by their alcohol consumption while at the same time regulating it. Recent announcements in the newspapers indicate that liquor dealers of Florida and Alabama are ready to spend $100,000 to fight repeal. That must mean that they are already selling enough whiskey in this state at a profit to make it worth their while to invest that much to avoid taxation and to keep state liquor stores out of the business.

I'm not campaigning for repeal. I'm merely stating the facts as I see them, and you can draw your own conclusions when March 10 comes around and you have an opportunity to make a decision one way or another.

Kiwanis dinners are usually more less private affairs for members of Kiwanis with an occasional guest attending. This week, however, Kiwanis brings as a guest speaker on its program a man of state- and nation-wide reputation—a man whose thoughts and decisions affect the majority of the people in the State of Alabama. I am referring to President Martin of the Alabama Power Company. What Mr. Martin will have to say Thursday night will naturally interest more people than Kiwanis numbers in its membership; and so Kiwanis is lifting the gate of privacy from its dinner this week, and permitting those who are really interested in what he has to say to come and listen.

It is a commendable gesture. Kiwanis is a service organization and exists only for the purpose of serving the community of which it is a part. In bringing such a man as President Martin to Clanton, the local Kiwanis club is rendering a real service to Chilton County, and Chilton County folk will not be backward in showing their appreciation.

Anyway, that's what I think.

Chevrolet Plans Program To Give More Employment

In announcing the resumption of part time operation in Chevrolet plants not involved in the strike in Detroit, Flint, Saginaw, Bay City, Indianapolis and Muncie, M. E. Coyle, general manager of the Chevrolet Division, emphasized that the program is being undertaken to furnish some employment to 40,000 of its workers and thus keep them off relief. The company hopes to provide a minimum of two days employment per week for these 40,000 workers, he added.

"Due to the shortage of bodies, the majority of our assembly plants will of course be idle," said Mr. Coyle. "This means that, instead of flowing through the plants in accordance with the normal routine, the parts manufactured under this part-time operation plan must be stored until assembly is resumed."

"We hope to operate the manufacturing plant a minimum of two days a week. In those departments where it is possible to do so, additional days will be added to the schedule. Considerations of expense and inconvenience will be secondary to the one main issue, which is to relieve the present situation by providing as many hours of work to as many employees as we possibly can."

Steel Man Honored

GEORGE M. VERITY, founder and chairman of the board of The American Rolling Mill Company, of Middletown, Ohio, for whom the city of Middletown has just recently named a new three-mile parkway in recognition of his leadership in community activities and his pioneer work in promoting harmonious relations between management and employees in the steel industry. It was the second time within a year that the city had publicly honored the veteran steel man for the establishment of policies under which his company has operated for a third of a century without the loss of a pound of production or an hour of wages due to labor troubles. Last June 25,000 citizens, including workmen from the steel mills, employees of other industrial plants, and business and professional men, turned out to celebrate "Verity Day," and all the factories and business houses closed for the day.

When Mrs. J. C. Clastner of New York told her husband that she had spent the evening at the home of friends where he had himself been visiting, he started an investigation that resulted in a divorce.

Hints to Gardeners

by Gilbert Bentley
Flower Expert
Ferry Seed Institute

Soils Flowers Prefer

GARDENERS will have better success with their flowers if care is taken to plant them in the most suitable soil available, for certain flowers have rather peculiar preferences.

Even though you may have beds or plots of good, rich soil, there are some flowers that will not do as well in it as they might in poorer soil. The most satisfactory flowers for soil that is generally poor are nasturtium, love-lies-bleeding, Joseph's coat, celosia, alyssum, California poppy, calendula, love-in-a-mist and hollyhock.

Zinnia, petunia, portulaca, snapdragon, stock, heliotrope, marigold and salvia do best in a rich soil. Soil that is heavy and which contains clay is good for sweet peas, pansies, stocks, carnations, scabiosa, snapdragons and most of the popular perennials. In general, a heavy soil retains more moisture and is cooler than a light soil. Plants that like a heavy soil also like cool, moist weather.

Flowers that prefer a light soil include petunia, portulaca, celosia, hollyhock, love-in-a-mist, annual phlox, calliopsis, nicotiana and all the climbers. This type of soil is good for the varieties that like warmth and do not require much water.

For flower gardens that are partially shaded, calendula, balsam, mignonette, pansy, vinca and many of the perennials are advised.

The following, which require comparatively little moisture, can be grown well in gardens which dry out quickly: Carpet of Snow alyssum, African daisy, cosmos, petunia, portulaca, cocksfoot, sunflower, verbena and vinca. They will often thrive during droughts.

SAFETY THE WATCHWORD

"Those of us whose incomes are derived from our own earnings would have little chance of leaving what is even a modest estate were it not for the various forms of savings," says the Boston Traveler.

"The forms are several and good. Particularly useful is life insurance. "Safety life insurance companies rose out of the worst depression the world has ever known. Never could this brilliant performance have been possible were it not for the care exercised in the investments made by the great companies."

As the president of a large life insurance company recently said, the thought continuously in the mind of insurance officials is the certain fulfillment of the contract with the policyholder. Safety is the eternal watchword.

Poultry Car Brings Farmers Neat Sum

The management of the Chilton County Exchange, Inc., are this week extending thanks to the farmers of this section for the generous response given the poultry car which was in Clanton January 27, 28, and 29. They announce that there will be another car through here in three or four weeks and they will be in even better position to give service than the last one.

516 farmers sold 29,855.50 pounds of poultry receiving $3,985.50, as follows: 23,554 lbs heavy hens $3,997.56 3019 lbs light hens 332.09 771 lbs fliers 138.78 207 lbs stars 20.70 2553 lbs roosters 164.24 78 lbs turkey hens 11.70 107 lbs turkey (young toms) 13.91 69 lbs geese and ducks 5.52 4 guineas 1.00

This poultry goes to the big markets thereby taking surplus poultry off of local markets and will have a tendency to raise local prices. The farmers received approximately $1,194.32 more for this poultry than they would have received at the prices paid on local markets. The following classes of poultry were sold:

Hints to Gardeners

by Harm Drewes
Vegetable Expert
Ferry Seed Institute

Locate Crops Logically

THINGS to remember: If you have a choice of location for your garden, choose a place where there is plenty of sun, away from trees. Tree roots take nourishment from the ground and shade the garden from the sun.

Work the soil deeply, making the top three or four inches as fine and loose as possible.

If you have had little experience and wish to try vegetables which are easiest to grow, plant radishes, carrots, beets, Swiss chard and turnips. With a good-sized garden you might also try spinach, peas, beans and corn.

If your garden is small and you want to get the most satisfactory returns, try the following quick-growing vegetables: Radish, leaf lettuce, beets, carrots, peas and beans. You can replant most of these after space has been made for them by early harvest.

Try turning just a corner from the seed packet, and tap the seeds into the drill or furrow. For better germination, pour water into the drill or furrow just before sowing. Use enough water to moisten the soil but not enough to cause caking.

Do not plant seeds deeper than directed.

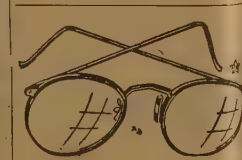

After planting, cover the seeds immediately, pressing the soil down firmly. This brings seed into contact with the soil particles and facilitates growth.

Classifying Motorists

Among the measures designed to reduce automobile accidents, a new Connecticut law will be watched with interest. It provides different insurance rates for various classes of motorists.

Those whose driving records indicate them to be especially competent and careful are granted a reduction from the regular insurance rates; the next class pay the standard insurance fee; those found to have been involved in minor accidents and slight violations of traffic rules must pay a premium of 10 per cent; those who have had serious accidents are penalized 25 per cent; while those who are shown to be at fault in highly serious and flagrantly avoidable accidents must pay an additional premium of 50 per cent for their insurance.

The new law has not been in effect long enough to enable one to judge of its results, but it seems to be based upon sound principles and may prove to be of some measurable benefit in reducing automobile accidents.

We Appreciate Them Now

In these days of rain, snow, sleet with icy and impassable highways or roads that at best are little more than narrow lanes through banks of snow, we may well appreciate the service of our local merchants.

What would you do fellow citizen of this entire territory, if the local merchants were not here and on the job to give you service and provide you with both necessities and luxuries? Suppose you could get no coal, no groceries, no needed clothing without a long motor trip when the highways are closed. Suppose for lack of patronage during the year the local merchants were compelled to leave. What then would be your problem and predicament in times like these?

This service item is of vital importance now, but you cannot have it if you extend your support and patronage to the merchants of Clanton only when it is convenient. They must have your support throughout the year to serve you with up-to-date merchandise, attractively low prices, and efficient modern service.

Think it over. Then we are confident you will decide to give them your support throughout the year.

An Important Birthday

As we have observed the working of the Boy Scout Movement in our own and other communities, we have been impressed with two things: How practical it is, and how powerful its grip on a boy. An editor has his attention called to most of the main forces operating, both good and bad. Yet the press dispatches carry more records of groups in conflict, at war, at variance than they carry of groups looking for chances to help other people.

In fact, the Boy Scout "Good Turn" spirit, which Dr. James E. West terms "The capacity to care about others" is the very essence of democracy. I have been both astonished and delighted to see energetic young men touched by this social spirit actually carrying the spirit of the Sermon on the Mount into everyday affairs and getting a kick out of it too! February is the birthday month of Scouting, and our hats are off to the Boy Scouts and their practical ideals of citizenship. If we could have one generation where everybody "cared" about everyone else, Democracy and Brotherhood would be very real. Our Scouts are pointing the way!

In their Jamboree which will be held in Washington, D.C. in June, 25,000 Scouts will make a pilgrimage and camp amid the shrines of our Democracy, finding fun, fellowship and deepened loyalty to Democracy. Not a bad idea for some of us older folk!

National Program Needed

"All boats summoned to the Corner of Blank and Blank streets. A varnish factory is on fire and eighteen people in the adjoining house must be evacuated."

"Boats are directed to proceed to Blank street where 130 women and children are marooned in box cars."

Medical supplies are needed at Blank street where it is feared an epidemic may break out among several hundred refugees.

And so radio announcers continued, from radio stations in the flooded area of the Ohio and Mississippi valleys—telling a graphic story of suffering, sickness, property loss, death and devastation. What citizen could hear those messages, all presented in a matter of fact way, without realizing the enormity of the great disaster which has swept over one of the finest regions in the fairest land on the face of the earth.

Who could hear those announcements without reaching way down to the bottom of his pocket for a little to help relieve the victims of the colossal disaster? Any appeal we may make here for help, it would seem, is quite unnecessary. All of us are well aware of the suffering and loss endured by these fellow citizens of ours. All of us are quite ready to help within the limits of our financial resources.

But after the flood, then what? Will it all be quickly forgotten by the people of the nation at large? While the enormous task of reconstruction proceeds will we all give the problem little heed? For problem it is, a problem that challenges the brains, resources and ability of the entire nation.

We don't propose to say what should be done to prevent future floods. We hear one man, yes many men, and many able speakers talk about denuded hillsides, about the absence of trees, and about the necessity of reforestation. What they say is probably all true. It directs attention to a long term program. But that will require twenty years or more. It offers small satisfaction to those who have endured two floods within two successive years.

It is for engineers to determine what should be done. Then it is up to the people of the entire nation to demand a unified program of flood control throughout the populous Ohio and Mississippi valleys.

As a business proposition we cannot as a nation afford the regular repetition of disasters of such magnitude.

Copy Cats

Only a few short months ago, the late Huey P. Long was winning notoriety, if not fame, with his "Every Man A King" idea. Before he died, he had promised every man an income of $5,000 a year.

Everybody, including Long, knew his share-the-wealth scheme was impractical. But Huey was a smart politician. He knew he could win followers by promising something they didn't have. As his audience grew he raised his ante.

Now it appears that he left a couple of disciples behind—President William Green of the American Federation of Labor and President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers.

In their fight for the control of labor, Green and Lewis have been bidding right and left. On Labor Day, Lewis pulled his bushy eyebrows together, puffed up like a volcano getting ready to erupt, and promised a $2,500-a-year income for all.

Green was a little surprised. But he pondered. And on Christmas day he upped Lewis $1,100, promising $3,600.

As the New York Times remarks, "it would be very desirable if each family could have a minimum income of $3,600 a year, but still more desirable, for that matter, if each family could have a minimum of $5,000, or even $10,000." But the way to achieve that income level is not, as Lewis and Green propose, to shorten the work week and raise wages arbitrarily, thus increasing the cost of living. It is instead, as The Times points out, "to improve labor skills, machine efficiency and industrial organization—in short, to increase both individual earning power and national production."

D. W. Haskew

At the cross road near my childhood church there stood an old sign board that pointed travelers in the right direction. On that board was printed the name of the town and a finger pointed in that direction. It stood there through summer and winter, in the cold and in the heat—and pointed travelers in the right direction. The boys of the community would use that hand as a target and many a rifle ball tore its way through the plank around that spot, but the form of the hand remained there and spoke its truth and pointed out the right direction. One night some mischievous boys dug up the post and reversed the truth for which it had stood for so many years. The hand was now pointing in the opposite direction that had been its message for many years and knowing that the sign board was telling an untruth, my brother and I dug it up again and set it right. A good life is none other than God's signboard, pointing men and women in the right direction. When we know the truth from observation, a man may do something wrong but we will know it. Set him right and help him to always point in the right direction.

One day I stood on the eighth story of the Dixie Sherman hotel and with a field glass I saw a proud ocean steamer as it rode down the bay and turned its bow toward the gulf. Thru the glasses that ship looked grand and beautiful. It seemed so near that I could almost reach out my hand and touch its deck. I watched it as it rode on and it became smaller and smaller. It went out into the gulf at the pass and now was just a speck in the distance. Then it was gone. I knew that the ship was just as beautiful and just as grand on the high seas as it was when it was in the water. I did not observe. In this world our loved ones are so sweet, so beautiful and so grand as they pass near our point of observation and we watch them as they travel on before us. We see them going great distances and soon they are gone. Blessed be God, when they have gone from our view they are just as sweet, just as beautiful, just as grand as when they were so close and so dear to us. They have gone out into God's eternity.

A mother told me that one night she stood by her little daughter as she dropped upon her knees and prayed, "Now I lay me down to sleep, I pray thee Lord my soul to keep, If I die before I wake, I pray the Lord my soul to take." The little child did not get up but clasped her hands a bit tighter and continued, "Dear God, make me big, Amen." That child had the right idea of life. The last of her petition should be the petition of old and young "Dear God, make me big." We should have a sincere desire to be big in our home life, big in our social life, big in our business life and big in our church life. Your body may be small, but there is no need for you to have a little soul.

Not long since I sat for an hour in the office of a prominent eye specialist and watched the people come and go. It seemed to me that the most common disease of the human race was none other than eye trouble. Something was wrong with the vision. At another time I sat in with a gathering of church folks and as I listened in on the proceedings I discovered another to what was taking place could hear the personal pronoun, "I" coming from every corner of the auditorium. It occurred to me that folks have other afflictions besides those that ail the body. In almost every gathering we can see the "I" go by with his prominent "Ego." "The big I and the little you" is one of the most damaging diseases of the human race.

It was an amusing sight that greeted us as we stood by the road and saw two boys going by on the back of the same mule. One of the boys sat in the saddle and faced the way the mule was going, while the other boy sat just back of the saddle and was facing the mule's tail. One was traveling with his vision looking the way he was going, the other was traveling with his vision looking back over the way he had traveled. Thought I, "That is just about the way of the human race—Half of us are forward looking, while half of us are backward looking." To be sure all of us are on the back of the old mule of time. We have witnessed men and women as they rode along to the middle of life with the face looking ahead and then we have seen them turn around in the saddle and look back for the rest of the journey of life. Too many of us live in the past, but we are not going there to live and why keep the vision in the past. We are riding old time into a new century every day and lets face the future.

Alabama's Liquor Laws Set Out In Simplified Form

Despite the fact that Alabama's Legislature has officially repealed the state's 21-year-old bone dry law, it will be many weeks before legal liquor actually flows in Alabama.

Under the modified state store system set up under the law, the Governor will call an election to be held March 10 in which each of the state's 67 counties will decide whether to be wet or dry.

The official vote will be tabulated by county canvassing boards, on the Thursday following the election. Then within 15 days, the state canvassing board will certify the official returns to the secretary of state, which cannot happen until near the end of March.

The Setup

Meanwhile, the statewide machinery to put the state into the wholesale liquor business must be set up. The Governor must name a three member state Liquor control board, whose appointment must be confirmed by a majority of the Senate.

Board members chosen must be qualified voters, have lived in the state for the past ten years, and must not have been indicted or convicted at any time of violating state or federal prohibition laws. Each will draw $10 per diem on days the board meets, but is limited to $1,200 per year plus actual expenses incurred.

The board must name a state liquor administrator, who must be over 35, a qualified voter and legal resident of the state for the past ten years. He will draw not over $5,000 a year.

The Location

Then the board must determine where state liquor stores shall be located, in which cities of wet counties. Stores must be set up, managers and employees hired, warehouses leased for liquor storage, trucks and other transportation facilities arranged, and a bookkeeping system set up.

The liquor law actually goes into effect the day the Governor issues a proclamation announcing the results of the vote of the local option referendum. The proclamation is expected March 27.

As soon after that as feasible, the state board will set up liquor stores in the wet counties. No state store can be located in a city of less than 4,500 population, except in county seats; and not more than one store can be located in a city of less than 25,000 population.

"Zoning Control"

In cities above 25,000, as many additional stores as desired by the state control board may be established. However, by passing local ordinances, towns and cities can limit the location of stores through "zoning" laws. In addition, no store can be located within one mile of a college unless it is within 400 feet of a courthouse except in Montgomery, Mobile and Birmingham.

No liquor store can be located in an unincorporated town except that in counties which have no incorporated town, the state store can be located in the county seat.

Once established, the stores will be operated by a manager appointed by the state board, who is a resident and qualified voter of the county in which the store is located. Stores can remain open from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. except on Sundays and election days.

Liquor stocks will be selected by the state board, but a customer may order any brand or quality of liquor he desires on a deposit of 50 per cent of the amount of the order, and the state store must obtain it for him. However, if the order is uncalled for within five days, the customer forfeits his deposit and the liquor is placed in stock.

No Limit

Although no limit is placed on the quantity each customer can purchase, only unbroken packages will be sold to be consumed off the premises. No sales will be made to anyone under 21 years old, or to anyone intoxicated or who is known to be a habitual drunkard. All sales will be cash.

The stores will handle only hard liquor and wines, with beer being sold anywhere in bottles and cans. Draft beer can only be sold in rural communities with a predominant foreign population. That feature was inserted in the bill to benefit certain communities in Baldwin county.

Stores can sell to residents of dry counties and they can legally possess any amount of liquor, wine or beer, despite the fact that the county itself will remain under the state prohibition laws.

Restaurants, hotels, and clubs can sell liquor at retail but only in unbroken packages, while tourists camps, road houses or night clubs are prohibited from handling liquor. Such private sellers must purchase all stock from state stores.

A restaurant under the bill is defined as a reputable place in a town of more than 4,500 population, with 1,000 square feet of space on one floor and a seating capacity of 50 persons. A club must have 150 members and be operated on a bona fide basis. A hotel in a town of from 4,500 population to 25,000 must have 20 rooms to sell whiskey; 25,000 and over, must have 50 rooms.

About Licenses

State licenses to sell intoxicants will run as follows: Hard liquor, hotels, restaurants and clubs in cities from 4,500 to 25,000 population $25; over 25,000, $100; plus city and county taxes. Distillers: a state tax of $15 for the privilege of selling liquor to state stores with a state tax of one-half of one cent per bottle on beer.

To manufacture wine and beer will require a state license of $1,000, except that vintners using more than 75 per cent Alabama grown fruit must pay only $25. A $250 license would be required to wholesale whiskey while retailers would pay the same licenses as levied on other businesses in the county. However, since the bill prohibits sales except in restaurants, clubs and hotels, retail liquor stores privately owned, would be barred.

Advertising

Advertising of whiskey would be restricted to newspapers, magazines and the radio, while wine and beer could be advertised on billboards in addition to the three other mediums.

Tax experts believe the whiskey bill will yield $2,500,000 annually when it goes into effect. Of the total revenue derived from it, 50 per cent would go to the general fund of the state treasury, and 10 per cent to the state public welfare department for relief and old age pensions. Of the remainder, 10 per cent would be split among the 67 counties, both wet and dry, on an equal basis to be used for general county expenses; 10 per cent would be divided on the same basis but earmarked for public welfare; and 20 per cent would go to the cities in which state stores are located.

War Pests and Diseases

Effective way to defeat certain flower diseases is, of course, to use disease-resistant strains such as the instant snapdragon and instant aster.
The only way to combat insect pests is to spray or dust plants with arsenic.
Early season pest is leaf beetle, a green insect whose presence is indicated by holes in the leaves. It is most often on alysium, sinningia and annual phlox.
Aster can be successfully controlled by using stomach poisons in the form of sprays containing arsenic or pyrethrum.
Snapdragon, aster, petunia and sinningia are the principal victims of cutworm, a chewing insect which plants off at the ground. What it places about a spoonful of poison bran bait around the base of each plant.
Aphids, sucking insects, bother all the popular flowers with their piercing of sinnia. They proliferate and cause crumpling and distortion of leaves. A compound (pyrethrum or nicotine base) should be sprayed or dusted on the plants.
Mildew is a disease found anywhere flowers are grown. It shows up as white all over the plant and finally turns to black, killing leaves and stems to rot. Zinnia is particularly prey, although petunia and others also are attacked. As a remedy, flowers of all kinds may be dusted on very dry days and the treatment repeated.
It is a big step toward eliminating all pests generally by burning weeds and trash, especially diseased stalks or leaves, before the season.

Posting Birds Is Surest Test For Worms in Flock

Roundworms Easily Seen When Intestines Are Split

"The surest test for worms in poultry is to kill one of the birds and remove the intestines," says Grifflin Lotthrop, head of the Sanitation Department at Purina Mills. "Split the intestines from end to end. If large roundworms are present they will show up readily."

Worms Reb Poultry

Roundworms are white or yellowish-white and vary in length from one to six inches. They are among the worst enemies of poultry. Worms rob birds of feed and lower the vitality of the flock, thereby causing both feed loss and lowered egg production. The intestinal lining is irritated by worms, and in some cases pus pockets form, giving disease germs an easy entry. Worms themselves give off poisons that weaken the bird's system. Many flocks infested with worms become blind, go lame, or become paralyzed. Loss of body weight is an indication of worms. Wormy flocks are never healthy flocks, and no poultryman can make money feeding worms.

Government Recommendations
"Both the United States Department of Agriculture and the American Veterinary Medicine Association recommend tetrachlorethylene as the quickest and most effective treatment for removing large roundworms from turkeys and chickens. To aid poultry owners, this recommended wormer has been placed in tetrachlorethylene at stores handling Purina feeds. In exactly the right amount to remove worms with a minimum shock. Of course birds are never wormed when in high production. Complete worming costs less than one egg per bird when it's done this way," Lotthrop says.

When Mrs. J. C. Knox of Duluth met her husband on the street with another woman, she turned him over her knee and spanked him.

Miss Ruth Pardue of Enterprise, Ala., spent the week end here and in Saginaw with friends and relatives.

THE expression "nobody home" is undoubtedly slang when used to denote stupidity. It is, however, slang with the backing of Alexander Pope, one of the most eminent of the Eighteenth Century poets. One of Pope's famous couplets reads:

"You beat your pate, and fancy wit will come:
Knock as you please, there's nobody at home."

An eminent man may be a prominent man, but a prominent man is not necessarily eminent. "Eminent" is properly used in speaking of a person who ranks high in his profession or the office which he holds. A prominent man is merely one who stands out from his fellows.

Music lovers of Clanton who attended the piano and voice recital of pupils of Miss Kathryn Foss, in Thorby, Saturday afternoon were: Mesdames W. M. Folk, W. D. Spigener, Lena Jones, V. J. Gragg, Atkinson, Grady Hefflin, Earl Parrish, Horsley White, Joe Mullins. Also Misses Annie Cordelia Smith, Mary Frances Atkinson and Elaine Burdette.

Mr. Cecil Todd spent the week end here with Mrs. Todd and their little daughter, Cecile.

HISTORIC MURDER

ONE hundred and ten years ago a man was murdered and as a direct result of that crime we now have, every four years, national conventions of delegates from every state and territory in the Union to nominate candidates for President and vice-president. Here's how it came about:

In 1826 William Morgan of Batavia, N. Y., published a book which purported to reveal the secrets of Freemasonry. Soon afterwards he disappeared and the Masons were not only accused of having kidnapped him and drowned him in the Niagara river but also of blocking a proper investigation of his disappearance. From western New York, opposition to the Masons spread to other states and several demagogic young politicians, among them Thurlow Weed and William H. Seward of New York and Thaddeus Stevens of Pennsylvania, seized upon the movement to promote their own ambitions.

The result was the organization of the Anti-Masonic party and in September, 1830, the first Anti-Masonic convention, the first national convention of any party, was held in Philadelphia, attended by 96 delegates from ten states. It was decided to hold another convention the next year to nominate candidates for President and vice-president and this meeting was to be composed of as many delegates from each state as there were representatives in both houses of congress.

Accordingly in September, 1831, the convention was held in Baltimore and it nominated for President William Wirt of Maryland, who had been attorney-general in Monroe's cabinet, and for vice-president Amos Ellmaker of New York. In the election of 1832 these candidates won only the electoral vote of Vermont. Later this party was absorbed by the Whigs and lost its identity, except in Pennsylvania where it elected a governor in 1835 and continued as a separate party for a few years.

But during the Anti-Masonic party's short existence it had pointed the way for others to follow in the method of choosing candidates. It gave them the national nominating convention and while convention procedure has since been changed in many ways, from that day to this the fundamental principle upon which it was based has remained unchanged—democratic representation of the party constituency.

That's What I Think

—O—O—O—

Saul M. Goldstein

Those who passed up the opportunity to attend the Kiwanis dinner last Thursday night and hear President Thomas W. Martin of the (Ala.) Power Company really missed a treat. Mr. Martin is a highly efficient executive—he has to be, to be the executive of such an organization, and you can depend on two things when he starts to talk; none of his words will be valueless; and all of it will be full of profit to both Mr. Martin and his audience.

The main theme of the speech was industrial development. It goes without saying that the Alabama Power Company is intensely interested in Alabama industrial development. No other field offers a better concentration of market for electricity and power; with the possible exception of electrification, which is a slow and labor-drawn-out process, there is no greater market of any kind.

On the other hand, we citizens of the state of Alabama must be intensely interested in industrial development. We have pushed our agricultural development to the limit, or mightily close to it; and if we are to increase our wealth and take our rightful place in the family of American states, our only avenue is industrial development. We are rich in natural resources, rich in agriculture, rich in water power, but poor in actual capital wealth. Our greatest problem is to attract capital wealth from other sources to make most of what we have on hand.

That is where Chilton County comes in most importantly. Just about one-fifth of the electric power in the state of Alabama is generated in Chilton County, and within a twelve-mile radius of the city of Clanton. According to Mr. Martin, the combined output of Lay Dam and Mitchell Dam, two generating stations is 182,000 horsepower; and we have it from fairly reliable authority that it will shortly be increased by some 25,000 H. P.

The power is here. The raw materials are here. Transportation is available, or can easily be made so. It is plentiful, and not of the type easily to be aroused by imported agitators—a very important point, manufacturers in these days and times. What then are we lacking?

The answer is obvious; initiative. Capital will come to such a favorable locality if sufficient inducement is offered, and if somebody stirs up enough energy to get out and invite it. A salesman told me this week that his firm, manufacturing ladies' dresses was looking for a good location in South, preferably in Alabama or Georgia. Their chief objection was loss to be sustained by them in the moving, and the cost of training and inexperienced labor. If someone loses, such as tax and power concessions over a limited period of time, there is no doubt that this firm or other, or—better still—many others would eventually be attracted to Clanton and Chilton County.

The loss that would be sustained by the county and city in granting concessions would be more than made up by the increased tax income derived from increased property values and what would develop into a building boom to accommodate the comers who would flock to Clanton for secure jobs from the new plant. I think it over and see if it doesn't go right.

At least, that's what I think.

What's the Big Hurry?

WELL FOLKS, -I MADE THE 90 MILES UP HERE IN TWO HOURS FLAT. HA! HA!

and here are some of the things he DID on the way up!

Was it worth the Risk?

Transfers Ins. Co. Safety Service.

Between 1925 and 1934, inclusive, the number of deaths from automobile accidents increased 17 per cent in urban territory of the United States. But while this change was taking place, the rate of death increased almost 100 per cent in rural territory. (Urban territory includes all towns and cities more than 10,000 population, and rural territory the remainder.) Last year there were nearly 150,000 automobile accidents which happened on rural highways which resulted in close to 14,000 deaths.

Many of these deaths happened because drivers took chances and drove too fast for conditions, as illustrated above. That speed is a more serious factor in deaths on highways than on city streets is indicated by the fact that at city street intersections last year deaths from almost 300,000 accidents numbered only 6,900, less than half the fatalities from accidents on highways. This information shrieks a warning about the danger of driving too fast, no matter how good a driver a person regards himself.

NUMBER TWO OF A SERIES

A Tale of Opportunity In Alabama

"BURIED" outside of Alabama and the South are billions of dollars—dollars that might be working in the South, and particularly in Alabama, if, in past years, "outside money" had been more fully acquainted with the opportunities for development in the South.

Other "buried" treasure is the money earned and spent and inherited by 3 1/4 millions of Southern people who have gone elsewhere to live and prosper within the past 30 years—money amounting to 15 to 20 billions of dollars that would have been spent in the South, had the natural resources of the South been developed to the point where these Southerners could have remained at home and prospered—money that would have helped give the South better schools, and roads, and other institutions.

Some Of That Buried Treasure Can Be Brought To Alabama

Of course this treasure is not truly buried. But it might just as well be buried so far as the South is concerned.

This treasure need not be lost to the South forever. During the past 14 years this Company, working with other far-seeing Alabama citizens, has been successful in bringing some of this treasure into Alabama—treasure in the form of new industrial plants—treasure that has helped bring about a more even balance between agricultural and other activities—treasure that has made opportunities for many of the fine girls and boys graduating from Alabama's schools.

Our Industrial Development Department is busier than ever before seeking this "buried treasure" to bring into Alabama for the benefit of ALL of her citizens.

THIS company engages in, and encourages its employees to engage in, activities beneficial to the area in which it does business. Many of these activities are only incidentally essential or desirable in the conduct of its business.

Health-Wrecking Functional PAINS

Severe functional pains of menstruation, cramping spells and jangled nerves soon rob a woman of her natural, youthful freshness. PAIN lines in a woman's face too often grow into AGE lines!

Thousands of women have found it helpful to take Cardui. They say it seemed to ease their pains and they noticed an increase in their appetites and finally a strengthened resistance to the discomfort of monthly periods.

MINOOKA HOME DEM. CLUB

The Minooka Home Demonstration Club met at the home of Mrs. C. B. Martin Thursday, January 28, with 10 members present, one new member and one visitor.

After roll call old business was taken up and passed in the absence of the leader.

The program committee being absent, Miss Grace read some appropriate selections from "Reader's Digest" which was much enjoyed.

As the weather is so wet nothing can be done in our gardens we were advised to get catalogs and select and order seeds so as to be ready to plant when dry enough.

New business was brought up. This included preparing for a baby show later in the Spring. Refreshments were served by the hostess, Mrs. C. B. Martin.

A Los Angeles court increased John Kiernan's speeding fine when he angrily said, "I'll sell my car and buy a perambulator."

Pleading guilty under an old statute, W. R. Courtney of Athens, Tenn., was fined one cent for shooting a cow.

YOUR INCOME TAX

A Weekly Series Of Articles Explaining Income Tax Payments.

When to Report Income From Salaries, Wages, Etc.

Of the millions of income-tax returns that are filed annually, the vast majority are from salaried persons and wage earners whose income is derived from personal services.

In general, compensation for personal services should be reported for taxation purposes in the year it is received or unqualifiedly made subject to demand. Compensation credited to an account or set apart for a taxpayer, without any substantial limitation or restriction, and which may be drawn upon by him at any time, is subject to tax for the year during which so credited or set apart, although not then actually reduced to possession. If the services were rendered during the year 1936, or even prior thereto, but the compensation was not received, or made unqualifiedly subject to demand, by the taxpayer until the year 1936, the entire amount is taxable in the year received, or made unqualifiedly subject to demand, when the taxpayer is reporting on the cash receipts and disbursements basis, which is the basis used by most persons in reporting net income.

The names of all employees to whom payments of $1,000 or over a year are made must be reported. The information return should be made on Form 1099, accompanied by transmittal form 1096 showing the number of returns filed. These returns should be filed on or before February 15, 1937.

All of the various types of compensation, unless specifically exempt by statute, or exempt by fundamental law, should be included in the taxpayer's return of gross income, such as salaries, wages, fees, commissions, bonuses, tips, honorariums, prizes, awards, retiring allowances for past services, etc. Where services are paid for in whole or in part with something other than money, the fair market value of the thing taken in payment must be included as income. Other items subject to tax are fees received by ministers of the gospel for services; executors' fees; directors' fees; Federal jury fees; and prizes received in contests of various kinds.

The salaries of Federal officers and employees are subject to tax, including the salary of the President of the United States and judges of courts of the United States taking office after the day of enactment of the Revenue Act of 1932, which was June 6, 1932. The salary of the Vice President of the United States and the salaries of Members of the House of Representatives and the Members of the United States Senate are also subject to income tax.

The committee on arrangements is working on plans for providing the board and lodging of contestants and their official chaperons. The meet will coincide in time with the Spring holidays at Alabama College, thus allowing visitors use of the dormitories and other campus facilities.

Final date for filing of entries is March 19. All athletic contests are included in the official Play Day program under regulation of the Alabama High School Athletic Association. The home economics division is offering 10 contests, which will include competition in food preparation, sewing exhibits, and home management. Musicians will compete in piano, voice, violin and organ. The speech division offers contests in poetry, prose, debate, story-telling, and play production.

Better Be Vigilant

There is an example of what too many pedestrians do. The person illustrated above never had time to wait for the green light, but now, as he admits, he has P-L-E-N-T-Y of time. No doubt any person who has had such an experience will find it better to wait a few seconds than to spend weeks and even months getting over injuries suffered because of impatience.

Last year there were more than a hundred pedestrians killed when they crossed at intersections against the signal, and there were more than 100 who were injured, according to the Travelers Insurance Company. Many of those killed, if they had a chance to do it over again, would be more than willing to wait the light to turn in their favor.

Likely those injured feel the same way. It may be a little income for the signal to flash "Go," but one remains dead a long time, and it's far from being funny to be in bed recovering from injuries.

SKIMMED MILK AND CALF MEAL PROVIDE THRIFTY CALF FEED

The natural food for baby calves is whole milk as it comes from its mother. Today, several factors make the "natural way" the "impractical way." Newer and sounder methods of feeding calves are being offered.

Today, milk has attained a commercial value that it almost prohibitive as a calf feed. At present, dry milk prices one gallon of whole milk testing five percent contains about one-half pint of butterfat, and has a market value of around 30 cents. When you stop to consider how many gallons of milk each calf requires for fulfilling body needs, the impracticability of such a feeding program is immediately apparent.

Scours Are Likely

But there are other reasons why whole milk is not the best feed for baby calves. Because whole milk does have such a high commercial value, dairymen are, and have been, breeding cows that will produce milk with a higher fat content. Research shows that high test milk really is a dangerous feed for young calves since the high percentage of fat makes it difficult for the calf to digest. Consequently, scours develop, leaving the calf sick and weakly. Scours may be gutworm and their results show up later in disease and lower production.

The calf raising problem becomes even more serious when one realizes that removing the cream from the milk doesn't do much good. Skimmed milk falls far short of being the ideal calf feed. In feeding skim milk, one of the causes of scours is avoided, but skim milk alone does not provide the essential calves need, and must have. If they are to grow and develop into money-making cows. When cream is removed, Vitamin A, the growth and health vitamin, is taken away. Without plenty of Vitamin A in the diet, calves slow down in growth becoming weak, scrubby animals that lower the average when they finally mature and become milkers.

Butterfat Substitute Made

A great deal of research has been conducted at the Purina Experimental Farm to find an answer to these troublesome questions. Since feeding high test milk is both dangerous and expensive, and since skimmed milk does not provide a calf with some digestible and inexpensive ingredient to replace butterfat has to be added for skimmed milk to do an acceptable job. Through years of research and experimentation with numerous calves, scientists at the Purina Experimental Farm have answered the calf-feeding problem satisfactorily in the form of a new calf chow meal to add to milk.

This newly developed calf meal contains pur-a-tene, and is actually made so high in Vitamin A that there is more Vitamin A in the skimmed milk and meal mixture than is in whole milk. Calves fed on this new calf chow meal have more vigor, vitality, and are more resistant to disease.

ATTENTION LADIES

I have secured the selling agency for the "Whirl-Pool Electric Churner."

This churner fits any churn from three to ten gallon size. It churns your milk in six to eighteen minutes. The cost of electric current to operate this churner is only about three cents per month for the average size family.

The churner is very light, only weighs a few pounds. The price is only fifteen dollars, it will last a life time. If you would like to have one of these churners drop me a card and I will bring one to your home, let you try it out a week or ten days free. After you have tried it out you can buy it if you want it, if you don't want it after you have tried it out you do not have to take it. Address, James Cooper, Mt. Creek, Ala., Route 2. 2-11-37

Demand for lespedeza and sorgo seed, cowpeas and soybeans, are increasing.

Nearly $300,000 have been expended in the surplus egg purchase program being conducted by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. A large part of the eggs bought will be distributed in the flood stricken areas.

More than 1,600,000 enrollees are engaged in soil and water conservation activities being carried on by the Soil Conservation Service and Alabama Extension Service on 202,381 acres in camp areas in the state.

The demand for baby chicks continues weak and the Bureau of Agricultural Economics predicts that the "demand will not get much better until egg and poultry prices get more in line with feed costs."

A ruling requiring government inspection of grain transported by motor trucks, the same as by rail or boat, in interstate commerce is announced by the United States Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

Two Dogs Help Scientists Build Finer Dog Food

Travelers returning from New Guinea smile as they recall the favorite dishes of the Papuan natives—sardines, salmon, and dog food—in the order named. Ring and Red, two experimental dogs, now in our United States, join with Papuans in praising prepared dog food, but without the sardines and salmon. For ten years they are in perfect health, and their chances for living to a "ripe old age" seem far better than that of dogs fed ordinary rations.

In June, 1928, Ring and Red were taken to the Purina Experimental Farm at Gray Summit, Missouri, a research plant where the constant testing of feeds for livestock, poultry, and small animals is carried on. Ring and Red were put into a pen and given their first meal of what is called dog chow—a compressed checker form of feed containing a balanced ration of dried meat, dried milk, cod liver oil, cereals, vegetable fibre, molasses and minerals. Once a day, 365 days a year for the last ten years, Ring and Red have received this same feed. With it they get all the fresh clean water they want, summer and winter. Today they are in "top" condition. Regular examinations show their teeth, gums, hair, and hide to be in excellent form. Brightness of eyes and sleekness of coat are other evidences of Ring's and Red's good health.

For hundreds of years dogs got only table scraps and a bone a day. Later prepared dog feeds were introduced to help careful dog owners to be better out their pet's diet. Ring and Red were two of the cooperating agents who helped in the development of modern dog feeds.

LIQUOR TRADE WAITING NOW TO VOTE DRY

Expected To Center Its Fight Against Repeal In 3 Largest Counties

By ATTICUS MULLIN

In The Montgomery Advertiser

Gov. Graves said yesterday that it had not been brought to his attention that the illicit sellers of liquor, both retail and wholesale, in Montgomery were gradually banding into an organization to oppose the passage of the State stores liquor and beer taxation bill which will be voted on March 10 for the benefit of health, welfare and other activities.

The writer talked to several officials during the week following the passage of the referendum measure and they said that those now engaged in the illicit sale of liquor, wine and beer in Montgomery, although licensed by both the Federal and city governments, would vote against a modification of the prohibition law as contained in the referendum and would throw their votes, their influence and their money behind the prohibitionists who are opposed to the taxation of liquor, wine and beer in any form.

Natural Drys

As a matter of fact the writer has talked to a number of operators of illicit liquor, beer, and wine-selling places and in no instance has he found an operator who expressed himself as being willing to vote to modify the prohibition law. And the writer was not disappointed because of an unwillingness on the part of State prohibition law violators to exude enthusiasm for a measure that would legalize intoxicants but would also tax them. No one in his right mind and with sense enough to keep out of an asylum would expect a man to vote bread and meat out of his mouth and into the State stores if he could continue to violate the State dry law.

Montgomery County bootleggers, both wholesale and retail, will be able to vote probably 500 persons directly and will directly control a thousand or more. That would not be sufficient to prevent the passage of the State stores bill on March 10 in Montgomery County which voted four-to-one two years ago to modify or repeal the prohibition law. But it would be sufficient to keep the majority in Montgomery down at least 1,500. And of course the same thing would be true in the same proportion in Jefferson and Mobile Counties.

The bootleggers will not be able to prevent legal sale of liquor in either Montgomery, Mobile, or Jefferson Counties. But they will be able to curtail the vote of the wets as registered in the referendum two years ago.

There are no organized bootleggers with vast businesses and vast sums of money to spend outside of the three populous counties. And there are a number of counties that barely went dry two years ago that will probably go wet this time.

The Real Danger

But the ultimate fate of legalization of liquor and taxation of liquor and kindred intoxicants does not rest upon the vote of each county separately this March, in spite of the fact that counties voting wet will become wet and eligible for State stores. The drys will feverishly scan the returns of the Statewide referendum in March and will be quick to add the entire wet vote and the entire dry vote in every county. And if the entire dry vote in the various counties is overwhelming, they will be heartened to place a candidate for governor in the field pledged to the repeal of the State stores system and indirectly pledged to a return of the present prohibition era with open bootlegging minus taxation.

Bootleggers in Montgomery, Mobile, and Jefferson who succeed in cutting down the wet majorities in these counties, even though it will have no effect on which counties will be dry or wet on March 10, will be promoting the campaign for a return to prohibition two years hence. There is the danger, as officials see it. What can or will be done about it remains to be seen but the matter is one that concerns genuine advocates of the taxation of intoxicants.

It is not what the organized bootleggers can do March 10 this year, but what they can and will do in the Statewide primary of May, 1938, when gubernatorial candidates will be nominated. Whether they will work their will remains to be seen.

"It's pretty hard to beat NATURE"

We present a "close-up" of a world-famous Jersey cow, Stockwell's April Pegis of High Pastures—"April" for short. She made a world's record over all breeds—3217 lbs. butter fat in 3 lactation periods within 3 1/2 years, each under Class A. A. with an average test of 6.46%. No Jersey farm in the world has ever bred, raised and tested her equal.

The pastures are full of Jersey cows—but there's only one "April." She's the empress—a hundred times more valuable than the rank and file of Jerseys—because Mother Nature gave her everything—a perfect natural balance of all the needed elements. So she eclipses all the others.

Natural Chilean Nitrate of Soda is another example of Nature's balance of many different elements. Just as Nature favored "April," she favored Natural Chilean. To the nitrogen fertilizer she gave a natural balance of vital elements—the so-called vital impurities in her own wise blend.

That's why Natural Chilean is more than just quick-acting nitrogen. That's why it is such an effective food for your crops.

THE word "claim" is often used incorrectly in place of "contend," "allege," "assert," "maintain."

Wrong: "He claims that he understands the Einstein theory."

Right: "He maintains that he understands the Einstein theory."

The English word "panic" is derived from the name of the Greek god Pan. Pan was a wild, goat-footed god of the woods and mountains, and was the dread of all travelers in such regions. Sudden and unreasonable fear would seize them with the premonition of the near presence of the god. Thus our word for such sudden and often unreasonable terror relates directly to the superstitious fears of a people living in remote ages.

HOME DEMONSTRATION AGENT HAS FINE REPORT

WORK OVER COUNTY DURING JANUARY SHOWS PROGRESS

Women In Rural Communities Receive Experience And Knowledge Of Much Study Through Their Demonstration Agent, Miss Grace

The report of Miss Meta Grace, home demonstration agent of Chilton County, for the month of January, gives in detail, the splendid work that is being done throughout the county by her department. This report which follows, will give one an idea of what the women of the rural communities of this county are receiving in the way of experience and knowledge gained through years of experimenting and work.

The report from the month of January, 1937, as prepared by Miss Grace is as follows:

Generally Speaking

The month of January has been spent in giving food demonstrations to both 4-H Clubs and Women's Clubs. A total of twenty-three (23) demonstrations were given with seven hundred and eighty-nine present and four clubs holding meeting without Agent who was attending conference in Auburn. These clubs had sixty-six in attendance, making a total of twenty-seven meetings being held in Chilton County with a total of eight hundred and fifty-five attending food demonstrations.

The demonstrations given the 4-H clubs was the composition and value of eggs in the diet, including special recipes in preparing the eggs for both the club meetings and for the home work for the girls. The demonstrations for the women have been planning balanced dinner and preparation of balanced dinner prepared and served in the homes. Seventeen homes have been visited assisting with home problems, helping mothers plan dinners for special occasions, and entertaining the faculty, or giving parties for their children, or giving suggestions on re-arranging furnishings, planting of shrubbery or renovating clothing. One hundred and eight calls have been made on the office, people asking for bulletins and assisting with personal problems. Thirty-three other meetings have been held in relation to projects including a weeks conference in Auburn in the form of a training school where individual problems and special demonstrations were given the agents. Special instructions have been given the leaders and officers of clubs after club meetings, stressing certain improvements that may be helpful in their meetings next month. Seven of these have been held with the 4-H Club leaders and seven with the various women's clubs.

Seven circular letters have been written. These letters included special information on "Gardening," "Caring for Pork," the "Instructions for the Baby Contest," "Correct Order of Business for Club Officers," "Special Recipes," two different sets, "Special Menus for Dinner and Special Menus for Breakfast and Supper," a list of menus used at the leadership meeting, including "Special Milk Dishes" for girls to be used for demonstrations for the next month. One thousand one hundred and sixty-nine copies of these mimeographed articles have been distributed. Five hundred and eighty-five U.S. bulletins have been distributed. These have included "Foods for 4-H Club Girls," "Planning three meals a Day," and the "Cook Book."

Major Project—Women's Work—Foods

Ten demonstrations have been attended by the Home Agent with one hundred and fifty-nine present. These demonstrations have been given preparing a balanced dinner for the farm family, after a discussion of the importance of balancing the family diet over a period of time. Foods were classified according to their value and the demonstrations were emphasized according to the value of the food that had been served in the dinner. Each club was active with leaders taking active parts in assisting their Agent with the dinner and giving the demonstration. Four clubs held their meeting while the Home Agent was attending training school in Auburn. These clubs were Baker, Midway-Mt. Creek, Shoults, and Isabella. They report an attendance of sixty-six. They sent reports of their meeting in to the office and for the newspaper. Each of the clubs served the dinner that had been prepared in buffet style and eating the special pre-

Free Textbooks For 843,404 Children Of State Cost $300,000

Montgomery, Ala., Feb. 6.—The State of Alabama has furnished free textbooks to 843,404 children in the first and second grades of public schools at a cost of $300,000 since the free textbook plan was inaugurated September 1935.

Dr. J. A. Keller, state superintendent of education, said that free books would be furnished third grade students, completing the system authorized by the legislature. After next year, the state will devote its funds to making replacements for lost or torn books.

Dr. Keller said that the free textbook plan, sponsored by Governor Bibb Graves, would lead to a sharp reduction in the number of failures among students of these three grades, many of whom previously did not have textbooks.

pared foods during their social hour. New methods of preparing the foods that they have at home and including some of these in their dinners were emphasized. This seemed to create much interest.

Plans are now being made for the next leadership school, which will be held the latter part of February on special diets of "underweights and overweights."

Girls Major Project

Thirteen meetings with six hundred and thirty members have been present during the month and the lessons have been on the preparation and study of eggs and fruits. The Home Demonstration Agent has given the demonstrations and the various leaders have been given active parts to discuss with the clubs on the lesson and also assist the Agent in the demonstration. The egg and its composition was studied. The effect of temperatures, low and high, on eggs was stressed and the effect of eggs prepared at low temperature and high temperature on sick people was given. Special recipes for eggs have been given the girls for home work, as soft boiled eggs, poached eggs, hard boiled eggs and baked eggs. The fruits demonstration was given showing the girls how fruits should be prepared and served. Oranges were made into drinks. Oranges were also halved and properly cut and served this method. Grapefruit, also was served likewise. A special display of fruits was arranged on a platter and fruits were given to the girls with fruits both for table and in their rooms. For the home work they were asked to serve the foods likewise and to serve their canned and dried fruits daily with their cereals and as desserts.

Gardening—For Both Women and Girls The Same

A special mimeographed letter was run and this included Garden Hints, as studying the seed catalogue, listing three new vegetables to be grown this season at home, making a list of the garden seed to be ordered soon and a special chart on when to plant, variety to plant, how much to plant and how long. Hot beds were also stressed. At each meeting fifteen minutes have been used during the month for recreation. This included games, stunts, contests and group singing. This has meant much to the club women, getting them to play together.

Recreation has likewise been stressed with girls. As a result four excellent plays have been given by Mt. Pleasant, Stanton, Enterprise and Collins Chapel Clubs. Mt. Pleasant's play, "How Can I Go To School," Stanton's play, "The Way of Sadie," showing a spoiled, overindulgent child. Enterprise's play was a peppy health play and Collins Chapel's play was on "Talking Too Much." These were very good. A reasoning contest has been enjoyed by the girls during the month. This contest was a romance of a young bride and groom, the answers being the abbreviations of States. Prizes were given the winners. The prizes were special cook books and foods products given by the food companies.

Training School January 11 through 16 Agent attended training-school held at Auburn by State officials and specialists. Two meetings were held daily by the various specialists discussing Agents' problems and in giving ideas and information by the specialists on all departments. Thursday and Friday were spent in studying on 4-H problems and later group singing. This was by Miss Elizabeth Delaney, State 4-H Specialist. The special foods demonstration included work in the laboratory with Miss Helen Kennedy on planning foods for special diets and assisting with barbecuing chicken in the oven and dinner dishes. A special conference was held with Miss Dorothy Dean discussing the handicraft exhibit and articles made by the women of Chilton County. A conference was held with Miss Helen Kennedy on planning the future foods demonstrations of the County and giving new foods bulletins. Two conferences were held with Miss Ruth Dobyne, District Agent, discussing the work of the clubs in the County. A conference was held with Miss Elizabeth Delaney and Dad Sims on the health program for 1937-38. A committee meeting and conference was attended with Mrs. Mamie B. Thornton.

Time Out For A "Pick-Me-Up"

By Mabel Love

FRUIT juices are important say the doctors and dietitians, and Betty Furness, charming M-G-M star featured in the screen success "The All-American Champ," thoroughly agrees with them.

When feeling fagged after long hours before the camera, Miss Furness has found that a glass of pineapple juice provides a remarkably quick-acting energy restorer. The vitamin content of the juice is a big help in keeping her fit, too, she says.

As a "pick-me-up" or an appetizer she likes the chilled juice, but she also suggests the following recipe for a delicious beverage for chilly evenings:

Mulled Pineapple Juice
1 inch of stick cinnamon
3 whole cloves
¼ teaspoon ground allspice
¼ teaspoon grated nutmeg
1 quart, canned Hawaiian pineapple juice
Pinch of salt

Tie the spices in a small piece of cheesecloth, add them to the pineapple juice and bring to the boiling point. Add salt. Serve hot with crackers and cheese, 4 to 6 servings.

Pletcher-Pilgrim Rest

Those on the sick list are Freddie Crane and Griffin Chandler. We hope for them a speedy recovery.

Sunday school seems to be improving. It was well attended Sunday.

Our B.Y.P.U. is not as good as it could be. The rainy weather has been a great hindrance. The intermediate B.Y.P.U. leader, H.C. Gray, had a social for his group Friday night, January 29.

The singing Sunday afternoon was enjoyed very much by a large crowd, although all the singers were not present that were expected. Prof. W. M. Devaughn and singers were not there for some unknown reason. Other communities that helped sing were Billingsley, Stanton, Fairview, Big Springs and Abbeville. We were very glad to have them all to help us make the singing a success. We hope they will come back every first Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Kendrick dined with Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Deavers Sunday.

Mrs. Jimmie Chandler of Demopolis is visiting her son, Mr. C. J. Chandler.

Mr. Floyd Lewis of Birmingham spent the week end at home.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Quinn of Birmingham are visiting relatives here.

Remember that next Saturday morning at 11 o'clock Brother Hughes will be at Pilgrim to fill his regular appointment and also remember Sunday school Sunday morning at 10 o'clock and preaching at 11 o'clock. Everyone come and bring someone with you.

In-Between Performance Refreshments

George Levinson, Jerome Walters and Donald Sharpe, popular young members of "Dead End" found themselves indulging in refreshments.

THREE popular young members of Sidney Kingsley's hit drama, "Dead End" may frequently be found between performances indulging in refreshments prepared by Don Sharpe, youthful Hollywood star featured in the play.

Fruit is often the mainstay of these quickly prepared refreshments, and canned Hawaiian pineapple cut in the new rectangular wedges is the latest acquisition to Don's list of favorite ready to serve fruits.

These little gems of Hawaiian sun-ripened flavor are cut to fit the mouth, easy to eat and just the thing to quiet those in-between-performance-hunger pangs—three good reasons, according to Don for their popularity with himself as well as the other youthful members of the cast of "Dead End." When there is more time to devote to the preparation of refreshments, Don Sharpe, who is a budding young culinary genius as well as a promising actor who has helped to make "Dead End" a success in many of the large cities, delights his fellow actors with this salad in which the pineapple gems are a prime ingredient.

Gem Nut Salad

3 cups Hawaiian pineapple gems
½ cup mayonnaise dressing
1½ cups finely chopped nuts (walnuts, pecans or peanuts)
6 canned or steamed dried figs (stuffed with cream cheese)
2 cups orange sections

Drain pineapple gems, dry on absorbent paper, dip in mayonnaise and finely chopped nuts. For each serving arrange 1 stuffed fig on crisp, chichory or romaine, surround with gems, and garnish with orange sections. Pass mayonnaise if desired. Six servings.

ENTERPRISE HOME DEM. CLUB

The Enterprise Home Demonstration club met Wednesday afternoon, February 3, at the home of Mrs. C. M. Yergap. Several members were present, also Miss Grace. We enjoyed the interesting talk on foods by Miss Grace. She gave us receipts for several new dishes. All entered a little contest. Cook books were given as prizes to the winners.

Afterwards we all went to the kitchen and prepared breakfast as "Balanced Breakfast" was our demonstration. A very nice table was set in the dining room. Everyone enjoyed breakfast that afternoon.

We wish more of the women of the community would join our club. We feel that you would enjoy it and learn something useful.

"We Serve To Serve Again"

MEMORY OF MRS. CHARLIE JONES

January 21, 1937, God called to his mother, Mrs. Charlie Jones. She was to be sixty-one years of age. She lived only a few hours. At her death she was living with her mother at Clanton.

She was survived by her husband, 14 years. She gave her heart to God for twenty-five years ago and dedicated her life to His service. She was a true and true to all. To know her was to love her.

We understand God had prepared a place for her above. The Lord called her to the Lord, take her away; and she is now in the name of the Lord. We hope, so much, but she is promised to a more glorious home to await the coming of those who loved her. But let's wait for her death—but just wait—wonder in that fair and happy loving hands to welcome us.

Services were held at New Church with Spigener in charge, on January 22. The Rev. Jim Spigener officiated.

Easy To Teach New House Dog Proper Manners

"You may not be able to teach an old dog new tricks, but you can teach a new puppy proper manners," says A. H. Leonard, dog authority of the Purina Mills, who believes that a complete understanding of the master and animal may be worked out in a little care, and time is taken in "breaking in" the new pup.

"A strange child coming into one's home wouldn't feel particularly familiar with his surroundings for a day or two, so how can a puppy, who has far less powers of reason be expected to settle right down?" Leonard points out. "Treat your puppy as you would a person—give him some quiet and peace and some time to get himself adjusted."

Watch Feed Carefully

"And don't," Leonard cautions, "stuff the little new comer with greasy table scraps, meats, sweets and other feed that his system is unable to care for. Feeding has a lot to do with a satisfactory start of a pup. Give him a food suited to his needs. For young puppies compressed dog food in small checker form is ideal. These checkers fed with water will give a puppy just what he needs for growth and health."

Feeding plays a big part in helping the new puppy get adjusted to his surroundings.

Housebreaking

"Housebreaking is easy if puppies are taught from the very beginning the meaning of cleanliness. Fresh newspapers should be spread out and the puppy taught that they are to be used at all times. Sometimes at first it may be necessary to cover the entire floor with newspapers, gradually reducing the covered area to one newspaper pad. Dogs are intelligent animals and are quick to understand what is expected if some member of the family will take time to deal with them sympathetically," Leonard says.

Poultry Pointers

Sudden changes in feeding and management often result in a drop in production, and may result in a false molt of the flock.

Drinking water is almost as important as feed in poultry raising. Clean water fountains with an abundant fresh water supply of water should be kept before the flock at all times. In the northern part of the United States precautions must be taken to prevent fountains freezing.

Usual symptoms of colds in the flock are sniffing, diarrhoea, watery and swollen eyes, and stuck eyelids. Colds may be brought on by sudden changes in temperature, overcrowded quarters, damp litter, or infection from older birds. To prevent outbreaks of colds the temperature must be kept uniform. Chicks should be started to roost early and the house should be kept thoroughly clean. A solution made of one fourth pint Purina creso-fec in one gallon of water is an effective cleansing agent to keep down infection.

If moldy litter is put into the laying house, pullets breathe the mold spores into their lungs. This may cause trouble. If birds get a touch of pneumonia from moldy litter, the best treatment is a good flush with epsom salts mixed in a wet mash. Be sure that the birds eat all of the mash.

Worms take a tremendous toll from poultry profits. Unthrifty birds cut down the flock average. At the first indication that birds may be infested with worms set to work to eradicate the pests before they have a chance to infect the whole flock. Use a Purina tetsule for round worms. If birds are dosed in the afternoon worms will be on the dropping boards by morning.

Feather picking is a vicious habit held over from chick days. It can sometimes be checked by providing birds with bulk, such as good green dried alfalfa. A box of soil about 4 feet square in each pen may break up the habit. The soil should be changed every week.

Many poultrymen object to feeding wet mash at night. It chills the birds in cold weather, and not enough mash can be consumed to keep the birds comfortably filled until morning. Mash pressed into handy grain-like pellets fills a definite need in the feeding program. Purina Layena checkers should be fed in the evening so that every bird goes to roost with a full crop.

Many breeders rotate their male birds, using red, blue and yellow leg bands. Each set of males is kept with the flock four days, then rested eight days. This increases fertility and keeps the males in fine condition.

Practical research on how to handle male birds shows that they develop better if kept by themselves on free range through the growing season and into late fall. Various pens of birds should not be mated until two weeks before eggs are to be saved for hatching. Males should be kept where there is little likelihood of their coming freezing, since this definitely reduces fertility and lowers the hatch.

Scouts Celebrate 27th Anniversary

The Boy Scouts of America, more than a million strong, are celebrating Feb. 7 to 13, as their 27th anniversary, with unusual activity. In almost every community in the nation, Troops and Councils have recorded 1936 as the year of greatest gains in membership as well as advances in all programs of movement.

The year 1937 is scheduled to be a momentous one in Scouting. President Roosevelt, Honorary President of the Movement and himself an active leader, will address the Scouts by radio from the White House on Monday, February 8. Next June 30 to July 9, more than 25,000 Scouts from "every nook and cranny, every section of the nation," to use President Roosevelt's own words, will gather at Washington, D. C., where they will live, work, and play together in a great National Jamboree, camping on 350 acres loaned by Congress.

Following this comes the Fifth World Scout Jamboree at Vogelzang-Bloemendaal, Holland where more than 30,000 Boy Scouts will gather from all over the world in a great camp of world-wide friendship. The World Jamboree will be held at the World Scout Center, Breda, Holland, from July 2 to 11, 1937. The World Jamboree will be a great event for the United States, as it will be the first time since 1913 that 1930 Scouts and Leaders.

A feature of the Boy Scout Week celebration is the awarding of the President Walter W. Head Acorn Awards to Boy Scout Troops, Cub Packs and Sea Scout Ships who made it possible for boys to get into the game of Scouting through new Troops, Packs and Ships. These awards will be presented at Courts of Honor, Merit Badge Shows, Rallies, Scout Circuses and other jubilee events throughout the nation during the anniversary week.

Many long-established Troops are arranging Troop reunions, and "old-timers' hikes" which will enable former Scouts now grown to manhood, to relive their early days in the organization. "Scout Sunday" will be observed in nearly all churches, of every faith, on Sunday, February 7 with Scout Troops attending special services in uniform.

Better Cotton Contest Offered Alabama Boys

To promote the economical production of better staple cotton in Alabama the Alabama Cotton Manufacturers' Association is sponsoring a Better Staple Cotton Contest for Alabama farm boys 10 to 20 years of age, announces J. C. Lowery, extension agronomist.

Fifty prizes, totaling $13,000 and ranging from $12.50 to $50 each, will be awarded the winners. Contestants must enroll with county agents not later than March 15, 1937.

Full information about the contest may be obtained from county agents, vocational teachers, or by writing T. A. Sims, state boys 4-H club leader.

THE 25-MILLIONTH FORD HAS JUST BEEN BUILT

IT HAS never occurred before in automobile history that 25 million cars of one make, bearing one name, have been manufactured under one management. The 25,000,000th Ford car rolled off the Ford Rouge Plant production line on January 18, 1937.

25 million cars since 1903 . . . more than one-third of all the cars ever built . . . enough cars to transport the entire population of the United States.

The figures represent a remarkable contribution to the social welfare, the industrial stability and the general progress of our country.

People respect Ford efficiency. They know Ford uses fine materials, the best workmanship at good wages, the most exact precision measurements. They know these things are passed along to purchasers in the form of extra value. Naturally, they like to do business with such a company.

That is the only reason it has been required to produce 25 million cars.

Naturally, too, they expect more of a Ford car, more this year than last year—more each year than the year before. They have every right to. The experience gained in building 25,000,000 cars enables Ford to produce today a really superb motor car at a really low price—with the Beauty, Comfort, Safety and Performance of much more expensive cars.

The 1937 Ford V-8 combines advanced design, all-steel construction, extra body room, and brilliant brakes with a choice of two V-type 8-cylinder engines—the most modern type of power-plant on land, sea, or in the air.

The 85-horsepower engine provides top performance with unusually good economy for its high power.

The 60-horsepower engine gives good performance with the greatest gasoline mileage ever built into a Ford car—and wears the lowest Ford price tag in years.

People expect more of a Ford car because it's a Ford—and they get more, for the same reason. It is undeniably the quality car in the low-price field.

DRY CLEANING COMPANY PLANS OPENING MODERN LAUNDRY HERE

Plan To Have Machines In Operation Here By March First

A former citizen of Chilton County and president of a large dry cleaning company, announced this week that they are completing arrangements for the establishing of a modern laundry and dry cleaning plant in Clanton.

R. P. Bryan, who is well known here, and who made his home in the county for sometime spent several days in Clanton recently completing these plans. Mr. Bryan is president of the Royal Cleaners, a widely known laundry firm.

He stated that announcement of the formal opening date of this new dry cleaning establishment will be made within a short time. The new enterprise for Clanton will be located in the building next door to the old Wadsonian Theatre, formerly occupied by the Bradberry Furniture Co., Mr. Bryan stated.

By March first, Mr. Bryan stated, he plans to have the modern dry cleaning machinery in full operation, while the laundry will go into operation sometime within sixty days. Only the latest type of machinery will be installed in this plant. Mr. Bryan stated, and prompt, efficient service rendered their customers. Watch for the opening date.

What Fertilizer To Apply To Cotton?
The best fertilizer for cotton is the one which leaves the largest profit after the cost of fertilizer has been deducted. It is not sufficient that a fertilizer simply increase crop yields.

The Alabama Experiment Station in tests conducted over a six-year period at five experimental fields and three sub-stations found that the best cotton fertilizer for average Alabama soils is one that supplies at least 36 pounds of nitrogen, 48 pounds of phosphoric acid, and 24 pounds of potash per acre. To supply these amounts of plant food, it would require 225 pounds of nitrate of soda or its equivalent, 300 pounds of superphosphate, and 48 pounds of muriate of potash, or a 6-8-4 fertilizer applied at the rate of 600 pounds per acre.

Many farmers will not use 600 pounds of fertilizer per acre. When less than 600 pounds per acre is used the ratio of nitrogen, phosphate, and potash should be in the same proportions of 6-8-4.

The popularity of 6-8-4 is shown by the fact that farmers of Alabama used 91,193 tons of ready-mixed 6-8-4 in 1936 and home-mixed several thousand tons in the proportion of 6-8-4. It has been almost universally satisfactory. In one county, for example, 152 farmers out of 156 were more than satisfied with 6-8-4 and expect to use it on all their cotton in 1937.

Using 6-8-4 in place of grades such as 3-8-5 added more than $3,000,000 to the income of Alabama farmers in 1936. 6-8-4 increased the farm income of Chilton County by more than $37,000 in 1936.

Remember that a ton of 6-8-4 beat a ton of 3-8-5 by approximately $28.00 per ton after cost of fertilizer was deducted and a 3-1-3 by more than $25.00 tails of the program begin to manifest themselves," Mr. Walton stated. "It is most interesting to learn that already throughout the state interest in the program of our Association is increasing, with letters reaching me daily requesting aid for various communities in the location of an industry which is investigating the possibilities of these communities," he added.

"While making a survey of the state recently it was learned that Selma has already secured a small factory and that within a very short time another would announce its location in Dallas County. In one of the southeastern counties of Alabama a garment mill has been located and within a very few days official announcement will be made to that effect. In many other counties of the state industrial leaders are investigating the possibilities of certain kinds of industries while news comes from South Alabama that one of the large packing houses may seek location of a branch factory in that section," Mr. Walton continued, as he pointed to numerous instances where industrialists are looking with favor at this time on what Alabama has to offer.

"A letter last week from Dean C. L. Ware of the A. P. I., Auburn, informs me that considerable interest is being manifested in the location of a $500,000 starch mill and its various features are being studied by nationally recognized engineers. The research department of the A. P. I. as well as investigations by the National and State governments substantiate the opinion that starch can be made from the 'Alabama Yam,' and it is hoped at some future date some definite announcement can be made of the location within our state of such a plant," Mr. Walton stated.

a short distance from Clanton, was the first project of this company in harnessing water power for generating electricity.

He held his listeners with his figures and statements regarding the prospects of Alabama and the South becoming just as much an industrial center as the New England states, and pointed out reasons why Alabama ranks low in industrial activities.

"The South is too busy with its glorious traditions, while our young people are leaving us seeking more fertile fields," he stated. "It has been estimated by those familiar with the facts that millions more people will leave this Southland within the next decade unless we awake to the possibilities of bringing more and larger industries here."

"Alabama has the necessary raw materials in abundance to attract industry per ton. After deducting cost of fertilizers a 6-8-4 was more profitable than the other grades even as a gift. Insist on 6-8-4 for your cotton in 1937. It pays best.

Hayes Chevrolet Co. Making Unique Offer

When a man can purchase a used automobile and receive as a gift fifty gallons of gasoline with the car, that is what might be called news. This offer is good only on cars that sell for sixty dollars or more. See their advertisement in this issue.

D. W. WAITE REPRESENTATIVE OF PRODUCTION CREDIT ASSN.

D. W. Waite, with offices over Mazer's Dept. Store, in Clanton, has been appointed as representative for the Montgomery Production Credit Association, according to an announcement given the News.

Mr. Waite succeeds Hon. Raymond Smith who recently resigned this position. Applications for loans under this set-up may be made through Mr. Waite and capital from New England and elsewhere. We have the labor, the soil and the power to offer any of them," Mr. Martin pointed out to the club. He deplored the condition existing now whereby thousands of young men and women must complete their education in the South, their home, and then seek employment on other sections simply because Alabama and the South have nothing to offer them. He urged citizens of Clanton and Chilton County to join in the movement to invite industries to Alabama.

In commenting on what the Alabama Power Company has done for this county, Mr. Martin gave some interesting figures. "In the last tax year of which we have record, 1935, the Alabama Power Company paid 41.34 per cent of all taxes paid or allotted to Chilton County, the figures being, Alabama Power Company paid, $68,167.17; others paid $89,613.59, making a total of $157,780.76 paid to your county in taxes for 1935," he stated.

"This, however, does not include city licenses and taxes; state and county licenses or gasoline taxes," he continued. "In addition, the power company paid to Chilton County a total of $28,000 ad valorem taxes for use of State, or a total of $95,167."

"It may be of interest to you to know that for the past ten years the Alabama Power Company has paid in Chilton for state and county ad valorem taxes a total of one million, one hundred fifteen thousand, five hundred eighty-four dollars and ninety-five cents," Mr. Martin told the club.

Monthly Average
Members of the club began to divide these figures as cited by the power company president to determine the average monthly income in taxes from the company to this county. They found that the ten year figure would mean that Chilton County has received an average monthly tax income from the company of over nine thousand dollars in state and county ad valorem taxes.

PASSING FOOTPRINTS

Of The Times
— Billy Smith

Best Congratulations
Today, our heartiest congratulations to our good friends, Judge and Mrs. Smith who were united in marriage twenty years ago, today. Judge and Mrs. Smith have been busy this morning acknowledging congratulations from their many friends. We hope when we have reached our twentieth wedding anniversary we will have some charming personality, the way, and the same congeniality now possessed by them.

And Taxes
There are two major topics of conversation and discussion in Alabama—taxes and liquor. The question "We Make Liquor Pay Taxes?" was decided on March 10th, and probably by the time you read this the legislature of Alabama will have decided about the general sales tax for the state.

seems now that liquor, wine and are about the only things in Alabama that are not bearing their share of the tax burden. Flowing over the freely and escaping the thing that is a lot of us. However, there is another side to the liquor question in Alabama—the side that is taken by the staunch prohibitionists, who are the welfare of youth and persons who are not strong enough to resist the urge to drink liquor and possibly become habitual drunks.

Personally I am not the least worried about a brother of mine, or son, who state votes wholeheartedly in favor of legal liquors. I'm not thinking of any of them being able then to purchase liquors, because everyone of them can purchase all the liquors or they wish to now without being disturbed. The only difference is that tremendous amount now being sold in Alabama is escaping taxation.

We are not, however, trying to say we want liquor in Alabama. But, we are saying that if it is continued to be allowed to be sold openly in the state as it is now, then it should be under better control and bear full share of taxes for the state.

We have made it a point to discuss a matter with many of the leading citizens of this county and not one of them said this county should vote "no," for the provision of the liquor act for the election on Wednesday, March 10th. Like myself, they believe it was possible to eliminate intoxicating drinks from the state entirely—no do that. But, we realize that has tried many, many times meeting every one each time.

will law enforcement officers of the county, and other officials with whom we have discussed this with, state that the event this county votes "yes" they will see that no person who becomes intoxicated on the streets, or highways, will go unpunished if caught, that the punishment will not be lenient. That, it seems to us, will be a major means of placing the beverage under excellent control if legal in the state.

Frankly, we have heard more sound arguments expressed in favor of the act than against it. But, at the same time, the "dry" are mapping out now for the most extensive campaign over the entire state, while we are little of a "wet" campaign. The ballot to be used on March 10th is simple. It merely asks the question "You Favor The Legal Sale Of Intoxicating Beverages In This County?" There is a place to vote "yes" or "no." It is a matter that should have sound consideration by every citizen of this county.

Fine Start
The other day when the Bill making appropriation possible for the construction of a huge bridge at Mobile passed the Legislature, we noted that Representative Oliver Steele of Coosa and Representative Joe Samuels of Etowah County. Now, in all these counties, these men are citizens of the county, I think it is proper that the State arrange the construction of a bridge over the Coosa, connecting that county with Chilton. These representatives who are good friends of mine, certainly a splendid foundation for some good work to be done to this end that will bridge over the Coosa.

Dry Will Gather
We note on this page that the Local Committee of the Alabama Temperance Union will hold a rally at the courthouse Saturday afternoon at two o'clock. All citizens are urged to attend and bring a friend.

This was brought to our attention. We are not responsible but at the same time we feel that we can approve. FOR RENT—two desirable coned rooms. Permanently. To gentlemen or legislator."

CHILTON DRIES TO HOLD RALLY HERE SAT'DAY

Meeting Set For 2 O'Clock At Courthouse; Citizens Urged To Attend

STATE BODY IS ORGANIZED FOR WILD LIFE

John Hollis Is Elected As Vice-President At Recent Meeting

Coordinating the State's 67 county wildlife conservation councils into an effective agency, the Alabama Wildlife Federation was formed yesterday morning at the Jefferson Davis Hotel with Dr. Walter B. Jones of Tuscaloosa, State geologist, as president. Dr. Jones is chairman of the Tuscaloosa County Conservation Council and widely known throughout the State as a sportsman.

Other officers elected include: T. A. Smith, Cullman, vice-president for north Alabama; John L. Hollis, Verbena, vice-president for central Alabama; Dr. E. V. Stabler, Greenville, vice-president for south Alabama; Thomas A. Ford, Mobile, secretary, and Kenneth A. Miller, Montgomery, treasurer.

More than 50 representative Alabama sportsmen attended to formulate the first organization of its kind ever established in the State. With each county chairman serving as a member, the Statewide group will present a united front for the betterment of the game and fish situation through efforts for the preservation and restoration of wildlife and natural renewable resources.

WETS MAP JEFFERSON VOTE DRIVE

Fight Of Dry Forces Is Launched As County Leaders Meet

Determined that Jefferson County's untaxed flow of liquor shall bear its part of governmental and educational expenses, the Local Legislation League Monday announced plans being rapidly whipped into shape for a county-wide campaign in behalf of repeal ratification.

Albert Boutwell, vice chairman of the League, said headquarters at the Tutwiler Hotel would be ready to function immediately to be followed by opening of women's headquarters in the next few days.

Meanwhile, dry forces launched their Jefferson County campaign with the slogan, "It's time to fight," at a meeting Monday night in the courthouse. Ten men were nominated and voted upon, the five receiving the highest number of votes to head the drive to keep Jefferson in the dry column. Results of the balloting will be announced Tuesday morning by Dr. A. H. Reid, secretary of the nominating committee.

Organized labor in the county went emphatically on record as endorsing legislation at a meeting of the Birmingham Trades Council Saturday night, while voluntary pledges of support already have been received by leaders of the campaign from various sections of the city and county.

More Jobs Foreseen
C. P. Thiemong, president of the Birmingham Trades Council, said members of organized labor in the district are fully aware the only issue is whether liquor shall be taxed or allowed to remain tax free and predicted the vast preponderance of trade unionists in the district will cast their vote in favor of the league's slogan: "Make (Continued to Back Page)"

STATE WEEKLIES NOT AS DRY AS THEY USED TO BE

The Alabama weekly press is not as dry as it used to be.

Survey of 44 weekly newspapers printed since the Legislature passed the county option liquor law shows five papers definitely wet, six definitely dry and five non-committal, but critical of certain phases of the law.

Twenty-eight weeklies hugged the fence and did not comment.

Weekly papers in the state have been generally regarded as dry and daily papers as wet.

The survey showed these weekly papers with editorials definitely wet in tone: The Tusculum Times, The Floralia News, The Andalusia Star, The Jackson South Alabamian and The Dothan Journal.

On the dry side of the fence were The Jackson County Sentinel, The Roanoke Leader, The Greensboro Watchman, The Wetumpka Journal, The Enterprise Ledger, and The Livingston Southern Home.

Critical, but neither wet nor dry were editorial in The Jasper Mountain Eagle, the Centreville Press, The Fayette Progressive-Weekly, The Lafayette Sun and The Geneva County Repeater.

Generally, dry editors were more vehement, wets milder in comment.

From the drys:

"Alabama's sacred legislative halls and some of the minds of the representatives have been invaded and polluted by the floods of poisonous propaganda of the liquor traffic, until this bunch is forced to open the flood-gates by passing a prohibition repeal law. . . don't let repeal be shoved down the voters' throats on March 10."—Livingston Southern Home.

"The present law gives no protection to dry counties—sorter like spitting in the face of a handcuffed boxer. . . the only difference between a wet and a dry county after the election is the state appoints a bartender in the wet counties. . ."—Jackson County Sentinel.

"Once more the people of Alabama, through wire pulling of those satisfied

PAYMENTS OF POLL TAX OFF FOR LAST YEAR

Tax Collector McKee Says Almost 1,000 Voters More Paid 1935

There were something like twice as many men than women in Chilton County that intend to vote this year, and expressed this thru the payment of poll taxes for 1936, according to tax collector T. L. McKee.

This year, up to February 1st, there were 550 women in this county who paid poll taxes for 1936 and 1,116 men, according to Mr. McKee. This makes a total of 1,666 persons who paid poll taxes here for the year.

Less Than Last Year

However, Mr. McKee pointed out, this figure is 974 less than the number paying in 1935, as his figures show that 2,640 paid poll taxes in 1935. For 1936 poll taxes, Mr. McKee collected $2,895.00, which includes payment of two years in many cases. That is, for 1935 and 1936.

Woman Is Barred From Prison In Parole Check

Two Young Girls End Jaunt In Local Jail

"I'll not try another trip like that," Mary Lou Barlow, age 14, of Chattanooga, told a News reporter Monday while she was resting in a cell in the county jail. She, with a chum, Mildred Stogsdill, age 14, also of Chattanooga, left their homes Wednesday of last week planning to hitchhike to Montgomery, "to get a job as waitresses" and ended their jaunt here.

Highway Patrolmen Wallace Waites and Earl Henley, seeing a notice in a Birmingham newspaper of the disappearance of the two young girls, were on the alert and found them at South Clanton Monday of this week on their way to the capital city. Their parents were immediately notified and came to Clanton to get them last Monday.

DELINQUENT TAXPAYERS ARE CITED TO LAW

State Law Provides For Penalty If Taxes Not Paid Soon

A section of the laws of Alabama relating to payment of taxes is being cited to delinquent taxpayers of this county, according to the tax collector. This section states that the law requires an additional penalty on delinquent taxes if not paid by March 1st of each year. After that date, the law requires that a list of delinquent taxes be turned over to the probate judge which brings about the state penalty.

FINE PICTURE TO BE SHOWN IN CITY SOON

"The Plainsman" Booked To Be Shown Sunday And Monday, 21 & 22

The charming couple who made "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," the delightful success it was, are back in a sweeping panorama of America's greatness in the making, "The Plainsman." Cecil B. DeMille's tribute to the men and women of America who brought civilization to the plains, which begins Sunday at The Wadesonville Theatre.

Handsome Gary Cooper is cast as "Wild Bill" Hickok in the saga, and lovely Jean Arthur portrays "Calamity Jane," famous frontier-woman who loved the silent, hard-fighting peace officer, but could not have him. They are a far different pair in "The Plainsman" than they were in "Mr. Deeds," and yet their assignment to the leading romantic roles is regarded as a master stroke of casting.

Cooper is widely known for his portrayals of the outdoor man-of-action, soldier-of-fortune and seeker-after-danger. "Wild Bill," who was sent into the West by the government in the early seventies to find out who was responsible for selling guns to the Indians, was all of that. "Calamity Jane," on the other hand, was a hard-boiled beauty, equally familiar with shooting irons and the bullwhacker's whip. There was something of the tomboy about "Calamity Jane" which is particularly adaptable to the hoydenish Miss Arthur.

Behind this tender romance DeMille

VETERANS WHO ARE IN PRISON WERE SOUGHT

Birmingham Woman Accused Of Charging Prisoners To Get Paroles

'RACKET' TO BE LOOKED INTO SAYS OFFICIALS

By RALPH HURST
Birmingham News Staff Writer
Montgomery, Ala.—A prison parole bureau in various prisons and road yards to determine what prisoners had been in new or other funds to pay for paroles has resulted in the State Convict Department issuing a written order to a Birmingham woman from the prison. The woman is Edith Elsie Bates, 1491 Eleventh Avenue, South.

The order barring her from the prisons was issued by Hamp Draper, convict department head, after it had been brought to his attention that she was checking up on inmates on the various prisons to determine which had money that could be paid for paroles.

The names of such prisoners were turned over to various prisons, some of whom are members of the Legislature, who actually obtained the paroles from the office of Gov. Graves.

After she had been banned from the prisons, Convict Department officials discovered that Negro trustees who are employed at the capitol during the day but who are returned to Kilby Prison each night were being used to carry on the survey. The result of this was that a Negro trustee, Charlie Stedemeyer, who works in the Agriculture Department, confessed his part and was put back in stripes along with William Jones, Negro trustee who works in the secretary of state's office.

Stedemeyer admitted he had been checking up on what Negroes in Kilby had money and were willing to pay to get out, and that he had been delivering this information to his sister who in turn had been delivering it to Mrs. Bates. The part of the two Negroes was discovered after they had been seen in the company of the Birmingham woman.

Efforts in carrying out this parole business, looked upon by Convict Department officials as the biggest individual setup yet discovered, were concentrated on prisoners who are World War veterans with bonus or compensation checks coming from the government.

Letter Is Found
It is best known by the following letter declared by Convict Department officials to have been taken off a prisoner at Atmore Prison:

Birmingham, Ala. Sept. 22, 1936.
My Dear Mr. Ritchey:
Your nice letter rec'd and I'm indeed happy to say to you, "I can get you a parole at once." If you want to see me, would be necessary for you to pay my expense for the trip. But I'll get the parole, you don't have to worry about that. You understand these things are not free. But I don't get you out in a few hours, will return your money by mail. And in regards to your attorney, forget it. When he failed to fulfill his contract, the contract was broken by law. Of course you can have him to return your money when I see you out on parole, and if he doesn't, then you can prefer charges against him before the bar, and he will gladly pay you.

Will be impossible for me to go to Montgomery and go over your file, if you don't mind, write me all details at once, and if you want me to will make plans to handle your case. Please advise me and I'll go right to work and will let you know on receipt of your letter, with inclosed expense check of $25 just what day to expect me next week. Will leave here next Monday.

points on heroic canvas the whole of the American frontier scene in the ten years which immediately followed the Civil War. Such famous frontier folk as "Buffalo Bill," played by James Ellison; his wife, Louisa, portrayed by Helen Burgess; "Broken Nose" Jack McCall, desperado who slew Hickok, played by Porter Hall; John Lattimer, notorious gun-runner, played by Charles Bickford, and General George A. Custer, portrayed by John Miljan, all come to life again, while 20,000 Cheyenne Indians, 250 army cavalrymen and an equal number of horses, are employed in the characteristic DeMille manner to capture the sweep and scope of the period of American westward expansion.

"We can attribute this extraordinary demand in part to the good words that owners of 1937 Chryslers are speaking about their cars. They are our best salesmen. We knew, of course, that the 1937 Chrysler was a great car. Everything that could be done in laboratory or in the most exacting series of factory road tests had proved it. But the one final proving ground for any car is public use. Until the car has received the stamp of approval from owner-drivers, it still must be regarded as a laboratory job.

"The new Chryslers have been on the road in the hands of owners long enough for us to get some conclusive reports on their performance. I am happy to say that these exceed even our own high expectations. With one accord owners say that the car is the most economical, the most comfortable and the most inspiring of ownership pride that they ever have driven.

"Our own tests, which we conducted under conditions simulating those of owner driving, showed that the Chrysler Royal, our low-priced car was getting from 18 to 24 miles to the gallon under normal driving conditions. We were much interested to see whether the experience of many hundreds of owners would confirm this. We are now convinced that our figure was a conservative one as owners who use their car in reasonable service are reporting most remarkable mileage.

"When you remember that the new Gold Seal engine in the Royal develops 93 horsepower, this is a remarkable mileage figure. It bears out our contention that the Royal is a great car for persons of moderate means, for it not only is low in first cost but low in operating and maintenance costs, which is an even more important factor. That is to say, when a man buys a Chrysler Royal to save money, he keeps on saving it as long as the car remains in his possession.

"In addition to its fine gasoline mileage, the Royal is standing up splendidly. It is too early as yet to boast that the car will require less ser-

Kudzu Serves Four Purposes On Farms

Alabama farmers should plant kudzu this year because it is valuable for hay production, for temporary grazing, for feeding green, and for controlling erosion, advises J.C. Lowery, extension service agronomist.

Kudzu should be set during this season of the year while it is dormant and should be fertilized with manure and about 200 pounds of basic slag or its equivalent per acre.

The usual way of propagating kudzu is by setting two-year-old or older crowns. However, the Soil Conservation Service was successful in growing kudzu from vine cuttings last year, and Mr. Lowery is advising farmers to try a few cuttings this year.

Public Demand Keeps Chrysler Stock Low

Joseph W. Frazer, vice-president of the Chrysler Sales Division of the Chrysler Corporation, after a trip that included visits to the principal Chrysler and Plymouth distributors and dealers in the North Atlantic States, reports that business in that section is the best that his company's dealer organization has ever enjoyed.

"The most striking feature of my trip," said Mr. Frazer, "was that dealers simply haven't any cars in stock. The demand for Chrysler and Plymouth products has been so remarkably brisk in the last three months that dealers can't keep merchandise on their floors.
Even our increased output hasn't enabled us to keep abreast of the demand. One of our biggest distributors whom I visited on this trip did not have a single Chrysler or Plymouth touring sedan in stock, a condition that is without precedent in my experience.

"Our own tests, which we conducted under conditions simulating those of owner driving, showed that the Chrysler Royal, our low-priced car was getting from 18 to 24 miles to the gallon
under normal driving conditions. We

Supervisor's Visit

The supervisor visited the Diversified Occupations Class a few days ago and was well pleased with the work being done, as this is a course that helps students to train themselves for an occupation to follow through life. When they finish the course, they should be able to hold a job anywhere the type of work is being done.

Burns And Ivey

Mr. Burns and Mr. B.N. Ivey were recent visitors at the school and made splendid talks to the agriculture students about their work and how they might improve it. They also gave splendid talks to the boys who belong to the Calf Club; these speeches were pertaining to animal husbandry. The students and faculty were glad to have them visit our school.

Less Monthly Discomfort

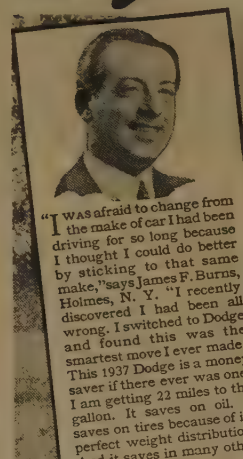

Many women, who formerly suffered from a weak, run-down condition as a result of poor assimilation of food, say they benefited by taking CARDUI, a special medicine for women. They found it helped to increase the appetite and improve digestion, thereby bringing them more strength from their food.

Naturally there is less discomfort at monthly periods when the system has been strengthened and the various functions restored and regulated.

Cardui, praised by thousands of women, is a mild, healthful medicine. If you are not benefited, consult a physician.

How James Burns Switched to Dodge AND SAVED MONEY!

"I was afraid to change from the make of car I had been driving for so long because I thought I could do better by sticking to that same make," says James F. Burns, Holmes, N. Y. "I recently discovered I had been all wrong. I switched to Dodge and found this was the smartest move I ever made! This 1937 Dodge is a money saver if there ever was one. I am getting 22 miles to the gallon. It saves on oil. It saves on tires because of its perfect weight distribution. And it saves in many other ways!"

YOUR INCOME TAX

A Weekly Series of Articles Explaining Income Tax Payments.

NO. 4 WHO MUST FILE RETURNS

Returns are required of every single person who for the year 1936 had a gross income of $5,000 or more or a net income of $1,000 or more and of every husband and wife living together who for the year 1936 had an aggregate gross income of $5,000 or more or an aggregate net income of $2,500 or more. Widowers, widows, divorcees, and married persons separated by mutual consent are classed as single persons. The personal exemptions are $1,000 for single persons and $2,500 for married persons living together and for heads of families.

Husband and wife living together may make separate returns of the income of each, or their income may be included in a single joint return. If separate returns are filed, one may not report income which belongs to the other, but must report only the income which actually belongs to him. If a joint return is filed, such return is treated as a taxable unit, and the income disclosed is subject to both the normal tax and the surtax.

Husband and wife may elect each year whether to file a joint return or separate returns. Where, however, joint or separate returns have been filed for a particular year, neither husband nor wife may after the due date of the return file an amended return or returns on a different basis for that year.

Brief Farm News

Cooperative hog and poultry sales are gaining in favor in many sections of Alabama. Each week farmers are selling thousands of dollars worth of hogs and chickens.

A common cause of hog poisoning, although seldom identified, is the use of too much salt or salt brine in the ration, says Dr. R. M. Hoffer, veterinarian of the Bureau of Animal Husbandry.

Alabama farmers are planning to grow improved cotton and to use better fertilizers during 1937, reports J. C. Lowery, extension agronomist, who finds that an increased number of farmers are following the recommendations of the Alabama Experiment Station.

By properly feeding and caring for her chickens, Mrs. Thelma Bailey, Oswassa, Ala., last year made a profit of $228.51 on 128 white leghorn pullets, she reports in a letter to John E. Ivey, poultryman of the Alabama Extension Service.

Experience has shown that it pays Southeast Alabama farmers to grow Ootatan soybeans for grazing hogs. Plans are being made for a large acreage to be placed in beans this year for this purpose.

Lespedeza is up to a good stand in North Alabama and there is considerable danger of it being killed before spring.

The Long Shot

"And where's the cashier today?" "Gone to the races." "What, during business hours?" "Yes, he figures that that's the only place left where he can balance his books."

Said one young lady with righteous indignation to an erst while friend: "And what do you mean by telling your boy friend that I am deaf and dumb?" "I didn't say deaf," was the chilly reply.

IT COSTS LITTLE TO INSURE YOUR COTTON YIELD

POTASH STARVED

POTASH IS CHEAP INSURANCE

PLENTY OF POTASH

Only 5 lbs. of lint cotton will pay for an extra 4% of potash in your fertilizer applied at the rate of 500 lbs. per acre. Use plenty of potash to prevent rust, reduce wilt, increase yields, and get the profits you want.

Cotton Rust Is Potash Hungry

Cotton rust, which was more general last year than ever before reported, can be controlled by liberal applications of potash. The Arkansas and Mississippi experiment stations have shown that potash will also greatly reduce the wilt disease. At least 24 pounds of actual potash per acre are necessary, on the average, to get good results, according to the Alabama station. This means 600 pounds of a fertilizer containing 4% potash, 400 pounds of one containing 6% potash, or 300 pounds of one with 8% potash. If rust appeared last year, use either more potash in your fertilizer at planting time or in your side-dresser.

Consult your county agent or experiment station regarding the right fertilizer for your own farm. Write us for further information.

PIGS NEED PROTECTION FROM CHILLY WEATHER

Pigs farrowed in February often die from excessive chilling that could be prevented by giving them adequate protection from cold weather.

"A farmer who loses pigs in this way is really paying the price of a good farrowing house without getting the benefits because each pig that dies at farrowing time costs 140 pounds of feed," said F.W. Burns, extension animal husbandman at Auburn.

Burns urges farmers to build a farrowing house for each brood sow; or if old houses are available, clean and disinfect them thoroughly.

Farrowing houses are not hard to build, he said, and the cost is low, much less than the loss that may be suffered by losing pigs through exposure.

It will also pay to move the houses on to clean ground, preferably, where the sow can graze some green feed, such as oats or rye, if possible. This grazing not only reduces the cost of feeding the sow and litter but does much to prevent the pigs from becoming infested with internal parasites.

Plans for building a farrowing house may be obtained free from county agents or from the Agricultural Engineering Department at Auburn.

That's What I Think

Saul M. Goldstein

Last Sunday's issue of the Birmingham News and Age-Herald carried a news story that should be of the greatest interest to the residents of Chilton County. It was a small paragraph, and perhaps many folks read it without paying much attention to it; yet it was important to the future of many people. In substance it stated that Monroe, Alabama, had attracted to itself the location of a silk mill, through the cooperation of the people, the mill and the agency of the Chamber of Commerce.

Our hats are off to Monroe. The new mill will give employment immediately to two hundred persons, with the possibility of increasing its payroll within the near future. The addition of this industrial population will mark Monroe's emergence from the status of a small town; it is on its way to becoming a city. For many long years its size and importance have depended on its value as an agricultural market and shopping place, but now it becomes an industrial center.

Capital is looking longingly at Alabama. President Martin, of the Alabama Power Company, on his visit here two weeks ago, pointed out that the plans are ripe and ready for the picking. "The American and Cotton Reporter," a trades magazine for the textile industry, takes occasion in its issue of January 28, to answer publicly an inquiry from a woolen mill about a desirable location for a new mill. It says, in part: "We are sure that the best location today for a woolen or worsted mill is in the South—Georgia or Alabama, perhaps." When you consider that this magazine is printed in Boston, the hub of New England's industrial activity, and that the South has already robbed New England of many of its textile mills, you find not a biased opinion, but a recognition of the facts. You can put this in your pipe and smoke it: Industrial capital is definitely headed for the South, and Alabama is one of its main objectives.

You may ask here, where does Chilton County come in? Simply this: Like Monroeville, Clanton existed for years as an agricultural market and shopping place. With the addition of the Alabama Mills—an industrial plant—Clanton stepped into its biggest boom, and we are still in the midst of it. Clanton's prosperity is Chilton's prosperity. A larger industrial population in Clanton means a larger home market for Chilton County's agricultural products; it means a better developed business section, with a better shopping center for the Chilton County population.

I quote further from the magazine mentioned above: "The public opinion in the South is better—more favorable to mill owners." How strangely similar this is to President Martin's remarks, when he said that capital would come to Alabama and Chilton County when public opinion in Alabama and Chilton County showed itself favorable to industrial development.

Just between you and me, Clanton is a much better location for an industrial plant than Monroeville, with all due respect to that progressive little city. We are centrally located, on Alabama's main arterial north-south highway, and on the main line of the L&N Railroad. We are within ten to twelve miles of the power plants which generate about twenty per cent of the power produced in Alabama. We are within quick and easy reach of Birmingham, one of the South's greatest transportation centers, so that we can offer the advantages of a small town location with those of the big-city opportunities.

Our only need is a public opinion that is not only favorable to industrial development, but anxious for it. When we get there, there will be no stopping the growth of Clanton.

At least, that's what I think.

THEY HELP THE WEATHERMAN

ALABAMA Power Company employees aren't meteorologists, although some of them are of help to the weatherman in his work of weather prediction.

At selected points in the State, certain of our employees act as volunteer "weather watchers", along with other duties. Colder weather here—warmer weather there; a thunder-storm north—a cyclone south—all of these weather incidents interpreted by the experienced meteorologist enable him to predict with reasonable accuracy what the weather is likely to be a day or a week hence in broad areas, even though he may occasionally "miss it" for specific localities.

Our "weather watchers" report their observations of rainfall and river gauge readings to the Weather Bureau at Montgomery daily.

THIS company engages in, and encourages its employees to engage in, activities beneficial to the area in which it does business. Many of these activities are only incidentally essential or desirable in the conduct of its business.

Merely supplying electricity AT REASONABLE RATES is not considered by Alabama Power Company to be its sole duty to the community. This advertisement tells you about one service "not written in the bond."

LOCAL CCC CAMP GETS EXCELLENT RATING RECENTLY

The following letter of commendation was received by 1st Lt. L.W. Graham, Commanding Officer of the local company, from Colonel John W. Lang, Commanding Officer of District "D" at Fort McClellan, Ala.

"It is especially gratifying to me to inform you that your company has shown the greatest improvement in District "D" for the quarter ending December 31, 1935. After a very careful inspection of the best company in each of the six sub-districts, which included company administration, and economy of operation as well as other particulars, your company was selected by the District Executive officer as the runner-up to the best company in this district.

You and your subordinates are deserving of the highest commendation for this achievement, and be certain there is no let down in your effort to become the best company in district "D" for the next quarter.

This rating was given over forty-one camps in the district. It includes camps in Alabama and Mississippi.

A hard-driving taxi-driver ignored a red signal, threatened the traffic policeman's knees, missed the street island by a hair, and slightly grazed a bus, all in one dash.

The policeman hailed him, then strolled over to the taxi, pulling a big handkerchief from his pocket enroute.

"Listen, cowboy!" he growled. "On yer way back I'll drop this and see if you can pick it up with yer teeth."

Chickens And Cotton Make Excellent Team

"Our records show conclusively that during the last five years 100 hens averaging 160 eggs per hen per year on Alabama farms have produced an average gross income equivalent to 100 bales of cotton."

This statement was made by John E. Ivey, poultryman of the Alabama Extension Service, in calling attention to the fact that Southern farmers are falling far short of producing enough chickens and eggs for Southern needs to say nothing of possibilities in outside markets.

"In Alabama," he points out, "an increase of 1,500,000 hens is needed to supply the state's normal egg needs. This is equivalent to 100 more hens on each of 15,000 farms, or to 50 hens on each of 30,000 farms.

In urging more cotton farmers to grow more chickens, Mr. Ivey stated that hens neither compete with nor place cotton. "They add another cash crop without interfering with cotton," he declared.

Machinery Repair Is Important Job

A most important job on Alabama farms at this time of year is getting the farm machinery ready for work before the spring rush begins, advises J.E. Wilson, engineer of the Alabama Extension Service. The first step is to inspect all machinery carefully, he said, and make an inventory of repairs needed and the parts to be replaced.

Parts should be ordered as early as possible so they will arrive before the machinery to be used first will be repaired first.

Used Car Sales Advanced In Winter

The automobile industry definitely has disposed of the old bugaboo—"you can't sell used cars in winter," according to Clanton Motors.

The fact is, Clanton Motors declared, that the public is buying more and more used cars every winter, with the seasonal effect upon used car sales becoming less and less a problem each year.

"The public is buying used cars in winter months and in increasing numbers each year," he asserted. "Statisttics compiled by the Ford Motor Company show that used car sales in the winter months have been advancing steadily each year for the last few years."

"Today, buyers no longer need wait until spring to buy used cars. The used car buyer can go to a dealer in zero weather and buy a car which he knows will perform dependably. The reason is that today used cars are conditioned for winter driving.

"Through the active and aggressive cooperation of the Ford Motor Company, Ford dealers now find their used car business a live, active and growing part of their operations, due to the factory developed 'R & G' procedure, under which the used car buyer is sold an automobile of guaranteed quality."

"In cooperation with the factory, Ford dealers now offer the used car buyer a written money back guarantee. Before this guarantee can be delivered, however, the dealer must renew and guarantee a used car to specifications laid down by the factory. The guarantee means that a used car offered for sale under the 'R & G' procedure has been completely renewed and conditioned."

"The terms of the guarantee are specific. The body and upholstery is inspected and put in order, repairs being made where needed. Mechanically, the car must be up to certain specifications, and this means adjustments and improvements when necessary before sale."

"The electrical system must be in working order. The engine is thoroughly inspected and checked by expert mechanics. The radiator must be clean and in proper condition. The steering system must be in good working order and the tires good. In every particular the car must be in satisfactory working order."

"By terms of the guarantee, the dealer agrees to correct at his expense any condition which is not in accordance with these specifications, provided he is notified of the condition within ten days of date of purchase and further-provided the condition is not the result of accident, neglect or abuse and that the car or truck has not been repaired or altered outside his shop during the guarantee period."

"Ford dealers also agree to refund within a certain time limit the purchase price paid, if the purchaser is not satisfied. With this broad policy it is small wonder that the used car market now extends into the winter months in defiance of traditions."

Soil Response To Fertilizers Varies

That the various soil types of the southern states give a different response to fertilizers is emphasized in recommendations recently made public by experiment stations. For cotton, results obtained in experimental work have led to recommendations of from four to six per cent nitrogen, eight to ten per cent phosphoric acid, and four to ten per cent potash. The application per acre is from 400 to 600 pounds.

In nearly all states it has been found that cotton gives a greater response to a certain plant food element on a particular soil type than on others, while the reverse may be true in the results obtained from one of the other elements when comparisons are made.

Many farmers have found that on certain areas of their own farms there are apparently greater deficiencies than on others, and they therefore vary the fertilizer treatment to meet the existing condition. They have found, for instance, that portions which are inclined to rust can be controlled by increasing the potash application, and wilt can be reduced by the same method.

Practically all farmers make only one application of phosphoric acid and that is at planting time. However, on potash an nitrogen it is a common practice to make additional applications in the form of a side-dresser. In fact, the use of a nitrogen-potash combination as a side application to supply the needed amounts of these two elements is now widely followed.

Experiments indicate that there is little difference in the results obtained from potash either in the planting application or when applied as a side dressing when cotton is 35 to 40 days old. Where fertilizers with a sufficient quantity of potash in the mixture are not available, side dressing with an additional amount alone or in combination with nitrogen is recommended.

THAMES FORSYTH DIED AT HOME HERE LAST SUNDAY

—o—o—o—

Thames C. Forsyth, age 42, died Sunday at his home here following a short illness. He was well known here, having been a member of one of the county's oldest families. He was a printer by profession.

The body was shipped to Columbus, Ga., for funeral services and burial. Martin & Sons, of Clanton were in charge.

Thanks

We are grateful for the kind remarks we have been hearing about our work on the liquor and tax question last week. We are endeavoring to make this all-important topic with a clear mind and from the angle of the lesser of the two evils—eliminating an evil from liquor which our people are now suffering from March 10th, or rather April 10th, than to have the state of Alabama not be rightfully called any more than today.

County

A prominent citizen of Clanton gave us a report on the beer and wine question the other day. As usual we are glad to hear from our friends. Clanton and Chilton County are realizing that Clanton, Thorby, and Verbera are stopping for motorists between Birmingham and Montgomery, and that Maples is a nice summer afternoon from Selma. Recreation seekers doubt snub these places after this if this county votes "no" on March 10th. But, if we vote "yes" these will find that business will increase at all filling stations, cafes and at all places where beer can be bought. Places dispensing beer and will have to purchase a license. Revenue will be brought into this particular county. Now, that's a small angle of the question worth thinking.

Florida

Slipped off this past week end to south Alabama newspapers. Clanton right on into Pensacola, where we were delighted with the control of legalized liquor. The bars (no saloons) were mostly closed and while doing a good business saw no one under the influence of intoxicating beverage. Beer was sold at most roadside stands, while liquor could be purchased only at certain places. Now, that is a slant on a state experiencing legalized liquor. That's that for the liquor in supposedly "dry" Alabama, suffering from some kind of a nation.

In Coming Out

will be startled, perhaps, when we run thru the pages of this issue. News, by a large advertisement from Pan-American Petroleum Corporation. Pan-Am is telling the world that March is "Open House" at all their stations. Horace says that is correct and that personally extending a cordial invitation to auto-owners to visit the service stations in this county.

For 1937 Loans

Application for emergency crop and feed loans for 1937 are now being received at County Agent's office in Clanton by W. C. Harkins, field supervisor of the Emergency Crop and Feed Loan Section of the Farm Credit Administration.

These loans will be made only to farmers who cannot obtain credit from any other source, as provided by regulations issued by the Governor of the Farm Credit Administration. The money loaned will be limited to the farmer's immediate and actual cash needs for growing his 1937 crops or for the purchase of feed for livestock and in no instance may exceed $400.

Farmers are not eligible for these loans if they can borrow from an individual, production credit association, bank, or other concern. Emergency crop and feed loans will not be made by the Farm Credit Administration to standard rehabilitation clients of the Resettlement Administration whose current needs are provided for by Resettlement.

As in the past, the security for these loans will consist of a first lien on the crop-financed if the loan is for the production of crops, and if for the purchase of feed for livestock, then a first lien on the livestock to be fed, will be required to waive their claims in favor of the lien to the Governor of the Farm Credit Administration until the loan is repaid.

Checks in payment of the approved loans will be issued by the Regional Emergency Crop and Feed Loan Office at Memphis, Tennessee.

WILSONS NOW OPERATORS OF BIG FEED MILL

Earl H. Wilson Manager Of Large Mill Located In Reynolds Addition

The Central Alabama Milling Co., located just east of the city, in the Reynolds Addition, recently changed hands and is now under the management of Earl H. Wilson, one of the county's well known young business men.

Formerly owned by W. A. Cawson, the milling company is widely known in this section. They manufacture all kinds of feed for livestock, operate a modern crushing mill, in connection with a sweet feed mixer, corn shucker and sheller, and a uniform feed mixer.

The feeds manufactured and sold by the Central Alabama Milling Co., carry a registered tax assuring the proper mixture of all ingredients.

"We buy all kinds of ingredients for making feed," Mr. Wilson stated. "And we have Mr. Billy Maddox in charge of our grist mill. He is one of the best known millers in this section."

A well stocked grocery store is also operated by the Wilsons at this same place. The store is in charge of Buddy Ellison.

Mrs. Lawson B. Nelson of Chattanooga, Tenn., is spending the week with Mr. and Mrs. Joe Mullins.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Bachelor and Miss Mary Jo Sanford of Wetumpka were guests of Mrs. Billy Smith Sunday.

State Legally Wet If One County Goes Wet Boutwell Points Out

Repeal leaders reminded the voters Alabama will be legally "wet" March 10 if a single county votes for legalization and taxation of the liquor traffic, and called upon the citizens of the several counties to protect their own interests by voting to bring the traffic under the orderly control of a state store system.

"Alabama citizens should give serious consideration to the issues involved," Albert Boutwell, director of the Local Legislation League, declared.

"In the first place, it should be borne in mind that there will be no such thing as unlawful possession of liquor in Alabama after March 10 if just one of the 67 counties voted to legalize and tax liquor; not if that liquor comes from a state store and bears the state identification."

"This means that citizens of Walker, St. Clair, Talladega, Chilton, Shelby and other counties adjoining Jefferson could, and undoubtedly would, patronize Birmingham's state liquor stores if Jefferson votes to legalize, and the local law enforcement official would be powerless to interfere."

"And by the same token, the citizens of all the other counties of the state could do the same thing. This is simply a handful of the counties vote to legalize and tax liquor, we immediately would see a concentration of business in those few counties, to the economic detriment of the other counties."

"We believe this question of sufficient importance to receive the serious (Continued to Back Page)

Your Part In The Safety

Death stalks the highways of the nation. More than 36,000 lives were sacrificed on our streets and roads last year to the demon of carelessness and thoughtlessness. What are you doing to end this reign of highway terror? Are you driving with care? Are you observing the rules of the highway? Are you operating a car that is mechanically right?

You, too, can do your part to help reduce this colossal accident rate. You can put your automobile in condition to operate with safety on the highways at but trifling small cost. At the same time you can prolong the period of useful service of your car.

The condition of your car is a vital factor in safety. It is almost obvious that a car with worn tires that blow out at high speed or fail to grip the road when you apply your brakes is a serious hazard on the highway.

It is a menace to the lives of those it carries. It is likewise a menace to others who pass or meet it on the highways. Why delay longer? Have this checked at once. It is unsound economy to save a few dollars and risk your own life and the lives of others.

But new tires alone may not make your ing gear may be in order. A motor tune car safe. A complete check-up of the step-up may help. The addition of needed accessories to assure clear vision may be advisable. A brake adjustment or new brake linings may be almost essential. Headlights may be badly out of focus. Many other parts of your automobile may demand attention.

Even with your car in perfect operating condition accidents will happen. To protect yourself against serious financial loss when the unexpected occurs be sure that you have adequate insurance coverage including fire, theft, collision, liability and accident insurance.

Something must be done to end this constantly increasing toll of death and injury exacted on the highways of this community and of the entire nation. You can now contribute your part to the campaign by having your own car placed in perfect operating condition.

Why gamble longer with your own life—or the lives of others which depend upon the skill and care with which you drive and the condition of the car you operate.

Standardized Circulars

"Handbills and circulars have their place" observed a friend of ours the other day.

"But," he continued, "when I see my front porch piled high with gaudy red and white circulars that I know are printed a thousand miles away from home and notice that they urge me to support some local institution, then I am quite uninterested and unconvinced."

Is this man's opinion typical? Is his attitude representative of the opinion of a large number of local citizens? If it is, then we would suggest that local merchants discontinue a practice that obviously adds little to their popularity.

A standardized circular is of questionable value as an advertising medium, we sincerely believe. Except under certain conditions where it accompanies a mechanizing plan it fails to reflect the goods, service and character of a local store. It would be far better for the average merchant to prepare his own circular, which accurately tells of what he has to offer.

People object to circulars when they find them uninteresting or of little value. This probably explains why feeling in some communities has gone so far that anti-handbill ordinances are being enacted.

Farm Management

One of our friends who operates his farm on a business like basis was exhibiting his method of account and record keeping. He was proud of the system in use and satisfied with the information he gleaned from a study of his records.

We were interested and pleased to discover that farming is gradually being placed on a sound, business-like basis. We were even more interested, not long ago, to learn that many farm management associations are now in existence for the purpose of encouraging business like record keeping on the farm.

When this practice is extended much highly valuable information should be made available. This knowledge should assist materially in reorganizing agriculture on a profitable basis. In recent years we have heard frequent demands for "cost of production" on the farm, but this request has received scanty attention because nobody really had an accurate or acceptable idea of what cost of production actually was. That of course never can be determined down to the exact figure, because costs vary on different farms.

But if a sufficient amount of this information were available so that general averages could be secured, the government, farm organizations and the general public would have a better idea of the exact seriousness of the agricultural problem and of what should be done to restore farming to its rightful place in the economic order.

We are pleased to extend our word of approval to this farm management movement. We urge the farmers of this county to consider the value in accurate farm accounting.

O-O-O

Conservation

With unparalleled floods following close upon the heels of an unprecedented drought, with dust storms sweeping through regions where such events were unknown just a few years ago, with a steady loss of soil fertility due to wind and water erosion the time has come for Americans to take serious consideration of the situation that faces our nation.

What can be done about it? The experts advise reforestation on an intensive nationwide basis. They also urge that swamps once drained be restored. That land be cultivated to control erosion. That so far as possible we restore America to a condition approaching its status before the time of land and forest exploitation.

The government, we observe, recognizes the responsibility and opportunity and a comprehensive national program is being outlined. To us, however, it seems like too big a job for any single agency.

Farmers and land owners must help, and the most effective way to secure their cooperation is to offer some incentive. Why not provide tax exemptions for the farmer who will grow forests on his hillsides, or who will restore swamp area that now produces only on a marginal basis?

Through wise exercise of the power of taxation a great nationwide program can immediately be inaugurated that will produce beneficial results within a very few years. If we must wait for the Federal government to do the whole job irparable damage to the nation's resources may occur before the task is well advanced toward completion.

O-O-O

Keeping Informed

Our state legislature is now in session. There is rumor that much strange and unusual legislation may be presented. Citizens should, therefore, keep themselves informed on what is taking place in the capitol city during the next few months.

In the past our state legislature, like the law making bodies of most states, has ground out a vast amount of legislation. Some of which was hastily drafted and passed without careful consideration. This hit and miss practice, with more misses than hits in the opinion of many informed citizens, has filled our statute books with unnecessary laws into which the ordinary well intentioned citizen may collide in the ordinary and natural activities of the day.

For this reason we urge our readers to pay close attention to what is transpiring in the capitol city. If you know of a bill inimical to your interests or one that may create hardship that the legislators do not anticipate, write to your representative. If he is the right kind of an official he will welcome constructive suggestions and valuable information. Democracy functions best when the people exhibit an active interest in the problems of government.

MORALECHOS

D. W. Haskew

The family arose from the table at night and a girl in the home asked, "Now what shall we do for entertainment?" Books were no attractive, family fellowship was prosy, games had no fascination. There was nothing that appealed to the children in that home but picture show, the dance hall and the automobile. Life did not seem to be worth living if it was deprived of the romance of a picture, the passion of the dance and the thrill of speed. These things are the drugs of the soul. Doubtless you know of one or more people who are known as drug fiends. They take Morphine to drown pain and ere long they will do anything on earth to get that dope to keep up their habit. The method of entertainment that is in vogue in our American life is none other than a drug that is choking out the voices that call us to a higher state of living. We are fiends for entertainment and the more entertainment we have of the kind that is sought the more dangerous we become to society.

Speaking of entertainment and what some folks call a good time let me tell you how such things hurt some folks. On the last night of the year 1936 a car load of people ran through the town where I lived in a car, carrying with them a large supply of fire crackers. As much as every one wanted to see they would fire a bunch of these high explosives and dump them out into the street. It must have been fun to the thrill seekers, but it was torture to the aged, the sick, the nervous and the invalids. Did you know that in almost every home there is at least one person who needs to be protected from all noises and alarms at the midnight hour? And yet this bunch of thrill seekers cared nothing for such folks. Said they to themselves, "To Hades with the aged who need sleep, to the nervous who need protection, to the invalids who crave quiet—this is our town and we can do as we please." Do you think that a cultured soul, a refined spirit, would be guilty of such things?

There was a beautiful girl came to womanhood in a Christian home. She was refined, she was beautiful, she had a good education. She was employed in the place of business with a relative. This girl with all of her intelligence allowed herself to become entangled in a love affair with a married man. With all of her training on the question of right and wrong, she allowed herself to be swept off her feet. Something went wrong on Christmas day and the day following this girl took her life. A bright, beautiful, missing girl brought down like a wrecked palne. She was the one who allowed the Monkey Wrench to be thrown into the machinery of her life. I am not saying that she alone was guilty, but with her training there was no excuse for her to allow herself to become thus entangled. Verily, verily I say unto any young woman who allows herself to become entangled in a love affair with a married man, you are fixing to wreck your ship of life.

While I was pastor in a East Alabama town I met with an observation that has followed me for many years. It was Christmas time and the college students had come home. Three mothers who were prominent members of my church got together and decided that they would give a big dance for the young men and women at home. Together they decided that they would have the dance at the country club on Saturday night. Well, they had it and to the worldly minded it was a great success. Much hugging, much dancing, much drinking, much smoking. Now here is where the observation of the pastor came in. On Sunday morning not one of the three mothers was at church. Our regular attendance of the young men and women at Sunday School and church ranged around fifty each Sunday, but on this day following the dance there were only ten present and these were out of families where the parents saw fit to forbid their children from attending Saturday night dances. Verily, verily I say unto you if there were no other harm coming from a Saturday night dance other than keeping our young people away from church on Sunday that would make them wrong through and through. O, my Lord, How can parents be a partner in keeping the young from the house of God.

In my study a proud father related to me the story of what took place in his home the night before. His son, the idol of his heart, was at home for the Christmas holidays. A Saturday night dance was being held at the country club and this boy asked for his father's car that he might drive out for the night. Together they discussed freely the influence of those nights of entertainment and the parents decided that it was best for the young man that he not attend that dance. In a beautiful way the boy acceded his father's wish. That young man was at church in Sunday School the following day. Let me say just here that the world today is in need of parents who have a Christian love for their children. To be sure all parents are supposed to love their children, but the kind of love that will save that young man, that young woman in your home is a Christian love. All parents should love their children to the extent that you will not allow the poison of had company and ungodly surroundings to enter the blood of their soul life.

New Tax Laws Are Explained By Commission

The passage of the law commonly known as the two per cent luxury tax law (House Bill 179 by Mr. Chichester) does not affect the one and one-half per cent gross receipts tax law (House Bill 30 by Mr. Ellis) so far as sales and receipts for the month of January and February are concerned.

The gross receipts tax law (Ellis Bill) remains in force and all returns required under this law must be made for January and February. The reports covering January business should be in the office of the State Tax Commission at Montgomery not later than the 20th day of February. Remittance covering the tax should be attached to the return.

Those merchants who have taken deductions for credit sales made during these two months will be required to keep a record of collections made on these credit sales and make reports and payments from time to time until all deferred payments of the tax have been met. It is important that collections on those deferred credit sales be kept separate from all other transactions for the one and one-half per cent (1½ per cent) rate will apply to these collections irrespective of any increase in rates on sales made after the new law becomes effective.

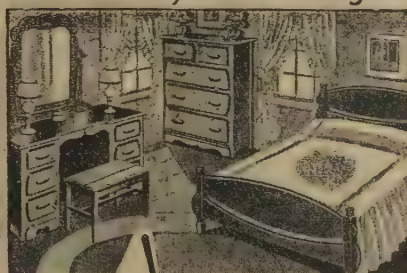

It is the desire of this Commission to administer these laws with the least possible inconvenience to the taxpayer and the cooperation of all concerned will be greatly appreciated.

CHILTON COUNTY JAIL

The dew was wet, the East was the snail was on the thorn.

I slipped up from my feather bed As a new day was born.

The mocker in the apple tree, Did sweet music trill.

All else was quiet as quiet could be As I slipped down to the still.

The beer was ripe, the wood was I grabbed my water pail.

A shout, a race, a ride and I Was in Chilton County Jail.

I bought myself a new V-8 and out for a ride,

Highway Patrolmen for the state To catch me did decide.

I pressed my foot upon the gas. When, STOP! they did sign.

The race was close, but alas I crossed a county line.

There I was caught and tried and I could not go my bail.

I found myself thrown right in The Chilton County Jail.

I went away to a distant place, And there I robbed the mail.

A guard saw my handsome face, And lived to tell the tale.

"Ha, ha," I laughed; the Federal Has a better place I know.

I'll see a jail I never saw, To Chilton County I'll not go.

But Federal Inspector liked the story For those beyond the pale,

And so I sat, as I waited trial, In Chilton County Jail.

It seems that I, whatever I do, Wherever I may roam,

If apprehended, I'm brought right My Chilton County Home.

I know by now, there's no escape, From the dyrup and beans,

Steel bunks and corn cake And all that Chilton means,

If I should board a mighty ship, And cross the ocean sail,

I'd take one drink, then I'd step Back in Chilton County Jail.

Last night I dreamed that I died And sought a better place,

But St. Peter shook his head and cried, "I know your homely face."

You've filled my book with red. You've committed every sin,

If entering here is of what you'll Well, you'd better think again.

Your life has been one long sin. On every test you fail,

I sentence you to eternity In Chilton County Jail.

BANKHEAD IS HONORED AT CAPITAL

Alabamians Honor Speaker Of The House At Recent Banquet

BY FRANCES YOUNGBLOOD
Publicity Director, Alabama Society of Washington

The "Speaker's Banquet" sponsored by the Alabama Society of Washington on Thursday evening, February 18, was one of the season's outstanding social functions of the National Capital as assembling more than a thousand former Alabamians and their invited guests, many of whom are leaders in official and diplomatic circles of Washington.

This affair was arranged by Edwin K. McDowell, President, and members of the society, as a tribute to Speaker William B. Bankhead and Mrs. Bankhead, to convey the appreciation of the honor which has come to the State of Alabama through the elevation of a native son to the position as Speaker of the United States House of Representatives, the first Alabamian ever selected for this signal honor.

Ovation Accorded
When Mr. Bankhead entered the banquet hall the orchestra burst into the strains of "Dixie" while the dinner guests, with one accord, rose to their feet and gave the Speaker an ovation in typical Southern fashion. In acknowledgment, Mr. Bankhead stated that he wanted to talk from his heart to his friends, his neighbors, from "down home" who had seen fit to compliment him in such a magnificent manner, at the same time, disclaiming any credit or honor for himself personally but accepting it in behalf of the State which he was privileged to call his own.

Azalea Trail Theme
The ballroom of the Willard Hotel where the function was held was transformed into a semi-tropical garden with Spanish moss hanging in festoons from the walls and massive crystal chandeliers. A profusion of camellia japonicas, azaleas and southern smilax, shipped from Mobile by airplane, banked the Speaker's table and stage from which an orchestra played familiar Southern airs during the dining hour.

Seated at the Guest of Honor Table in addition to Speaker and Mrs. Bankhead and President and Mrs. Edwin K. McDowell were Senator and Mrs. Hugo L. Black; Representative Sam Rayburn of Texas, Majority Floor Leader of the House of Representatives; Representative John J. O'Connor of New York, Chairman of the Rules Committee of the House of Representatives; the Chaplain of the House of Representatives, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D.D. and Mrs. Montgomery; Honorable Chas. West, Personal Representative of the President of the United States and Mrs. West; Miss Cornelia Morgan, daughter of the late Senator John T. Morgan, who represented Alabama in the United States Senate for more than thirty years; Honorable Jesse H. Jones, of Texas, Chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and Mrs. Jones; Representative and Mrs. Frank Boykin, Representative and Mrs. Lister Hill; Representative and Mrs. Sam Hobbs; Representative Henry Steagall; Representative and Mrs. Pete Jarman; Representative and Mrs. Joe Starnes; Representative and Mrs. J.J. Sparkman; Representative and Mrs. Luther Patrick; Mr. Miles C. Allgood, Mr. L.L. Patterson and Mr. W.B. Oliver.

After Mr. McDowell welcomed the members and guests he presented the Chaplain of the House of Representatives, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D.D., who offered the Invocation. Tributes were paid to Mr. Bankhead by high ranking Government dignitaries from other states as well as from Alabama among whom were Honorable Charles West, personal representative of President Franklin D. Roosevelt; Representative Sam Rayburn of Texas, Majority Floor Leader; Representative John J. O'Connor of New York, Chairman of the Rules Committee.

Mrs. Bankhead Presented
Senator Hugo L. Black introduced Mrs. Bankhead to the assemblage. She was becomingly gowned in a white and silver lane model fashioned along Princess lines and made slightly entrain. Her accessories were of rhinestones and silver and she wore a coronet of brilliants which added to her regal appearance. A corsage of white camellias and silver slippers completed her costume.

Mrs. Mary Knox Willett's lovely contralto voice was heard in a cycle of songs during the evening.
Mr. R. Lee Barnes, Chairman of Reservations for the banquet, arranged an attractive souvenir program signed by each guest at the dinner which was presented to the Speaker as a memento of the occasion.
A committee composed of well known men and women from Alabama were in charge of arrangements including: Mrs. B.Y. Martin, Mrs. Pauline Vann Byrd, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. A. Calhoun, Col. A.R. Brindley, Mrs. H.O. Sargent, Mr. Ira Bain, Miss Claire Storrs, Mr. Alphonse Lucas, Miss Juanita Buchanan, Mr. Jeff D. Harris, Mr. A.C. Rade, Miss Frances Youngblood, Mrs. Mary Malone Moore, Mrs. E.L. Deal, Mr. Osce Bentley, Mr. Louis Reynolds, Mrs. M.A. Gore and Mrs. C.A. Sherrod as chairmen. Minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved, and other business matters attended to.

Federal Land Bank Stockholders Meet

New Orleans, La., Feb. 20.—The national farm loan associations of the Fifth Federal Land Bank District, which are cooperative credit organizations through which farmers obtain loans from the Federal Land Bank of New Orleans, last week completed their regular annual meetings of stockholders at which reports for the past year were read and officers and directors for the year 1937 were elected. In response to invitations from the associations, representatives from the Federal Land Bank attended the meetings of two hundred and four associations at which there was a total attendance of more than ten thousand three hundred stockholders and guests of the associations. The representatives of the Bank addressed the meetings on the "History, Purposes, Progress of the Federal Farm Credit System." These talks covered the development of farm credit through its various phases to its present operation under the Farm Credit Administration.

The Federal Land Bank of New Orleans, Louisiana and Mississippi, will complete twenty years of operation in March of this year. During these two decades the bank has closed 86,393 first mortgage loans on farms for a total of $179,538,871.00 and has closed for the Land Bank Commissioner 26,466 loans representing $25,985,050.00. This makes a combined volume of credit amounting to $205,523,921.00 in 112,859 loans to the farmers in the three states which comprise the Fifth Federal Land Bank District.

According to the annual reports of the various associations it is evident that the farmers in this district have made considerable progress towards a return to normal conditions. The improvement in the farmer's financial situation has been demonstrated by the increase in the percentage of Federal Land Bank collections to collectible amounts which rose 10.3 per cent in 1935 while the increase last year was 17 per cent. The members of the associations were also told that during 1936 the Bank sold 3,742 farms for a total of $7,603,100.00. This is an all time record in the sale of bank owned property.

Demoy, Mr. Claude Hamilton, Miss Nina Gluckstein, Mrs. Lamar Matthews, Miss Esther Wood, Miss Kate Hulse, Miss Susie V. Watwood, Miss Frances Lamar, Mrs. Ruth Foscue, Mr. and Mrs. Miles C. Back in Service

Guess you know how it is, neighbor. Comes a bit of trouble, sickness or danger in your home and business just has to shift for itself. Well, it looked like a tough spot down here with the Ohio walking right in the front doors of all our families. But L & N, fortunately, has the equipment and men for just such an emergency. Our train service was donated to help flood sufferers to safety... food and other supplies were transported free during the crisis; then, when the swirling water slunk back to its bed, our forces whipped into action to restore service.

Now, the L & N, "Your Home Sweet Home On Rails," is back on the job... as strong and well equipped as ever... grateful for the privilege of having served in some measure our neighbors and friends. Today, safe, comfortable passenger trains are rolling again. Speedy freight cars are again carrying the nation's goods. And the L & N, which never bowed a head or bent a shoulder in adversity in all its eighty-seven years, thanks you for your consideration during our time of trouble.

"APRIL"
Empress of the Jerseys
STOCKWELL'S APRIL POGIS, the only cow in the world twice winner of the President's Cup of the American Jersey Cattle Club, owned by OWEN MOON, publisher Winston-Salem Journal and Sentinel, owner of Upway Farms, Woodstock, Va.

We present a "close-up" of a world-famous Jersey cow, Stockwell's April Pogis of Pastures—"April" for short. She has a world's record over all records—3217 lbs. butter fat in 3 lactation periods within 3 1/2 years, each class A. A. with an average yield of 46%. No Jersey farm in the world has ever bred, raised and sold her equal.

The pastures are full of Jersey cows but there's only one "April." It's the empress—a hundred times more valuable than the rank and file Jerseys—because Mother Nature gave her everything—a perfect natural balance of all the needed elements. So she eclipses all the others.

Natural Chilean Nitrate of Soda is another example of Nature's balance of many different elements. Just as Nature favored "April," she favored Natural Chilean. To this nitrogen fertilizer she gave a natural balance of vital elements—the so-called vital impurities in her own wise blend.

That's why Natural Chilean is more than just quick-acting nitrogen. That's why it is such an effective food for your crops.

WHAT IS GOOD CITIZENSHIP

The United States Constitution says, "All persons born or naturalized in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof are citizens of the United States and the state wherein they reside." Citizenship is the state of quality of being a citizen.

The qualities of citizenship are many and varied. A citizen owes allegiance to the government of which he is a part, and is entitled to protection from it. A good citizen realizes that it is his duty to obey and defend the laws of the constitution, church, home, school and community. He uses his influence to help others also obey them because he realizes the need and use of so powerful a body of laws. He does everything he can for his country in order that it may be more prosperous and happy.

A good citizen understands that he owes his country many other duties than allegiance. He respects the flag of his country at any time or place. In time of war, as in time of peace, he is willing to give his service to help mankind. He is willing to help when needed, whether it benefits him directly or not.

A good citizen is cooperative and useful to his community. He helps to promote progress of clubs for the betterment of his community and is willing to give at least a portion of his leisure time for the sake of others.

One of the things a good citizen thinks of is public health and safety. He feels that it is his duty to look or help look after the cleaning of the streets and the removal of accumulated waste, or any dangerous subjects from the streets.

A very important duty of Citizenship is observing the rules and regulations of the traffic officers because failure to do this may cause the death or permanent injury to a citizen. Any careless person can drive a car at a dangerous speed, but a reasonable intelligent person can get his thrills in better and safer ways. A good citizen realizes that much unhappiness is caused from the killings and injuries that result through preventable accidents. The loss of life costs much whether it is estimated as money or happiness. A nation cannot be prosperous with unhappy people. "A nation is no stronger than the people it governs," is true of any nation. A good citizen understands the objective or education by becoming active in the campaign for safety in his home and in his community and through the nation.

The conservation of our natural resources require cooperation on the part of the citizens. A good citizen helps in such a campaign by using his influence to get others to help.

Thrift is a method of conserving our natural resources. Arthur W. Dunn, author of Community Civics, says "Thrift is good management of the business of living" and "Thrift is the very essence of democracy." There are many reasons why a citizen should be thrifty. There must be thrift in earning, as well as spending money. It is a right as well as a duty of a citizen.

Since taxes are the only means of raising money for public upkeep and improvement, as roads, schools and drainage, the good citizen supports the tax program. Much of the tax money goes for the protection of health. Even the poorest citizen may be made rich in the benefits that he may enjoy while the rest is made proportional to his ability to pay. Cooperation among the citizen tax-payer is one of the most important thing a citizen can do.

One writer said "The decline of home ownership both in the cities and in the rural districts of the United States has been observed with considerable anxiety because of the effort upon our national welfare and upon citizenship of the country. It is the home-owner citizen's duty to encourage the tenant or home renter to be more interested. A good citizen's speech is free from gossip and destructive criticism. Because a person is judged largely by his speech, he speaks calmly and concisely without effection of speech. Even though he does not criticize others, he accepts criticism and profits by it. He develops so good an opinion of his neighbors that it goes far toward satisfactory friendship between him and them.

Walter E. Meyer, Editor of Weekly News Review in "Talks to Students" says "Snubbery is not only undemocratic but utterly detestable. It should be avoided by every person who wishes to maintain the slightest shred of respect." Every citizen should sympathize with those who do not have as much as he. He should be so kind that they will not have the slightest

County Agent Tells When Turn Legumes

Winter legumes should be when the green tops of hairy will weigh 12 to 15 pounds or more per square foot. The average growth in the first year is 15 to 20 pounds per square foot. J. W. Fant, county agent.

Growers who have never made measurements of the green growth measure plots 10 by 10 feet at points, cut or pull the green about even with the surface of ground and weigh the green top of each plot. Several such measurements over the field will give a good stage growth that will furnish good growth to turn. The legume be turned with any good plow stage.

Turning shouldn't be delayed the legumes have made a growth. The crop that is to may be delayed or drought in. After turning, delay at least two before planting the crop that is low.

Corn following winter legumes no further fertilization. Cottoning these crops should receive pounds of nitrate of soda or 100 to 200 pounds superphosphate, 50 pounds muriate of potash along with no additional fertilizer.

That's What I Think

Saul M. Goldstein

Of all the subjects I have chosen, at one time or another, to ramble on about in this column, none has brought so much public response direct to me than that of providing Clanton and Chilton County with a public library. Industrial development, Red Cross generosity, the cross-roads highways, all of these subjects have aroused some measure of comment which has come to my own ears, no matter how meager; but the idea of starting a Free public library has caused more citizens of this county to comment to me about this column than all the other subjects put together.

Perhaps that is why I have chosen this topic again this week. Perhaps I am following the line of least resistance, and getting in a few words which I am reasonably sure, from past experience, will arouse some response. As one more human being on this earth I am certainly entitled to sit up and beg for attention once in a while, no matter how subtly I do it.

On the other hand, perhaps I chose the topic for other reasons. Thinking aloud, or rather on paper, it might be because it is the subject closest to my heart. Education becomes true education only when it becomes a pleasure to learn; and I think I may safely say that there is no more pleasant way of learning than by reading just what one chooses.

That pleasure is not available to all

YOUR INCOME TAX

PERSONAL EXEMPTIONS

In addition to the personal exemption of $1,000 for single persons and $2,500 for married persons living together and for heads of families, a taxpayer is entitled to a credit of $400 for each dependent, defined by income-tax law and regulations as a person under 18 years of age or incapable of self-support because mentally or physically defective. The term "mentally or physically defective" means not only cripples and those mentally defective but persons in ill health and the aged.

In order to be entitled to the $400 credit, the taxpayer must furnish the dependent his or her chief support. The credit is based upon actual financial dependency. For example, a father whose children receive half or more of their support from a trust fund or other separate source is not entitled to the credit.

Neither relationship nor residence is a factor in the allowance of the $400 credit for a dependent. The taxpayer and the dependent may be residents of different cities. If husband and wife both contribute to the support of a dependent, the $400 credit may be taken by the one contributing the chief support, and may not be divided between them.

A single person who supports in his home an aged mother is entitled not only to the $400 credit for a dependent but also to the personal exemption of $2,500 as the head of a family. A widow supporting under similar circumstances a dependent child under 18 years of age also is entitled to the personal exemption of $2,500 as the head of a family, plus the $400 credit for a dependent.

Under the Revenue Act of 1936 both the personal exemption and the credit for dependents are required to be prorated where the status of the taxpayer changed during the year.

A GOOD LAXATIVE

the people of Chilton County because of the scarcity of reading matter. It can be easily remedied by providing a free public library.

I don't doubt that each and every one of you realizes the need for such an institution, and agrees with me thoroughly; but I do have serious doubts that any of you realize that the failure to have a library in this community may be laid directly at your own individual door. You are to blame for its absence; you individually and you collectively.

Perhaps I am exhibiting colossal impudence in accusing you for the failure of the community to provide. But you are the community! If you stirred yourself up about this matter, if you brought it up in your sewing circles, in your Parent-Teacher Associations, in your Sunday School classes, in your service club meetings, if you thrashed it out with your neighbors and developed a concretely definite plan to start a library we would have one by this time.

Some time within the next thirty days you—and I mean you, the reader of this column personally—will have an opportunity to attend some community group meeting of one type or another. If you agree with me that we need a public library for Chilton County, why can't you take that problem up at that meeting and discuss it then and there?

The County Board of Education, through its Superintendent, Mr. Little, has volunteered to house the library, at least in its early stages. If your club, class or community is in favor of the project, get in touch with Mr. Little and let him know that you are ready to stand with him on the issue. In that way, and in no other way that I know of, we can get action.

At least, that's what I think.

REPEAL LEADERS PREDICT VICTORY

Estimated Taxes from Liquor Sales in Alabama to Aggregate About $2,500,000 Yearly

Montgomery, Ala. — Alabama's $25,000,000 a year liquor traffic is about to feel the strong arm of law and order—and the burden of taxation.

Albert Boutwell, director of the Local Legalization Leagues, announced here today reports from many of the state's 67 counties indicate a preponderance of sentiment in favor of legalization and taxation of alcoholic beverages which for more than 20 years have run more or less unrestrained over the state.

"We want especially to point out," Boutwell declared, "that there will be no such thing as illegal liquor in Alabama if a single county votes wet. Not if the liquor comes from a state store.

"Under the state store system a citizen of any county in Alabama is privileged to go to any county where legal liquor is obtainable and purchase that liquor for his own use. So long as it bears the tax stamp it cannot be touched by city, county or state officers, regardless of the law in any community."

Not only will the several counties throw off the oppressive yoke of attempted prohibition enforcement, but a majority of them, Boutwell declared, will exact from the traffic, a portion of the toll which for years it has imposed on other items.

"Moreover," Boutwell declared, "reports from various sections of the state make it unmistakable that public officials no longer look solely to meat and bread for revenue for essential functions of government, but will impose upon the traffic a levy that will contribute not less than $2,500,000 annually toward effectuation of the President's New Deal program in behalf of old age pensions, public health administration, public welfare, education of the youth of the land and other governmental functions.

"Orderly government thus is preparing to take the place of lawlessness and the questionable rendezvous of the thousands of dollars that annually have contributed to a notoriously flagrant underworld, especially in the urban centers of the state."

Boutwell said county organizations from one end of the state to the other are conducting their campaigns in high speed and with a maximum of public acclaim in an effort to prevent levying of additional taxation through the medium of parking meters and other questionable devices in favor of a reasonable tribute from a traffic which for many years has flourished in Alabama without bearing any part of the cost of government.

Leaders of the repeal movement in the various counties have emphasized the necessity of an impressive state total in favor of legalization and taxation of liquors in order to effectually combat a highly organized minority which would attempt to restore present intolerable conditions two years hence by electing a "dry" governor and Legislature.

In addition, it has been emphasized that Alabama is the only state in the union which derives not one penny of revenue from alcoholic beverages while trying in vain to enforce the statutes against them and spending huge sums of the taxpayers money each year in court costs, law enforcement, arrest fees, etc.

Tennessee and Georgia, both of which are collecting revenue from beer, are fast moving toward legalization of liquor, as is Mississippi, which also exacts a tribute from beer.

Should legalization fail in an appreciable number of the counties, Alabama thus would be surrounded by taxed liquor with the resultant diversion of purchasing power to other communities, especially in the border counties.

But the vast majority of the state's counties, it is indicated, will grasp the opportunity to be presented March 10 to collect this money from the liquor traffic, boost business generally throughout the state and rid Alabama of the evils of an unlicensed yet flourishing business.

Former Alabama Representative Weds At Capital

WILLIAM B. OLIVER

Miss Beryl McCann Married To William B. Oliver In Quiet Ceremony

Washington—In a ceremony which was a surprise to all except the closest friends of the contracting parties, former Representative William B. Oliver, of Tuscaloosa, and Miss Beryl D. McCann, of Seale, were married here Saturday morning.

Witnessed by only a few close friends, the ceremony was performed by the Rev. James H. Taylor, at the Central Presbyterian Church. Mr. and Mrs. Oliver left immediately for a brief wedding trip. They will be at home after next week at 1827 Wyoming Avenue, Northwest, the bridegroom's Washington home.

Mrs. Oliver is widely known in Washington, as well as in Alabama. She has visited here frequently as the guest of her brother, Lieut. Com. Lee McCann, United States Navy, who now is on duty in the Orient. Lieut. Com. McCann married a niece of Mr. Oliver, the former Miss Jeannette Duncan. Mrs. Oliver for some time held a responsible position with the federal government, being stationed in Paris for the Department of Commerce, but she resigned this post last Summer. A brother, Lamar McCann, is in business in Paris. She is the daughter of the late Rev. W. A. McCann, a widely known Methodist minister during his lifetime. Her mother resides at Seale with a son, Dr. R. B. McCann.

Mr. Oliver retired voluntarily from Congress in January after having served continuously 22 years and was succeeded as representative of the Sixth District by Congressman Pete Jarman.

Not only did Mr. Oliver establish for himself a record of distinction while in Congress, but he served Alabama well before coming to Washington, and during his time here. He is a native of Eutaw, and received degrees from the University of Alabama College arts and Sciences and from its law school. He started the practice of law in Tuscaloosa and from 1898 to 1909 was solicitor of the Sixth Judicial Circuit, resigning in the latter year to become dean of the law school of the state university. He resigned that office to run for Congress in 1913, and being elected, he was kept here for 22 years by the Democrats of his district.

In Congress, he became a member of the appropriations committee and was chairman of the subcommittee handling the state, justice, commerce and labor supply bills. He served the Alabama democracy at various times as chairman of the campaign committee, rendering especially notable service in 1928 and again in 1930 when there were breaks in party ranks which were overcome in both instances.

Brief Farm News

Experiments show that it pays to warm potato seed a week or two before planting, especially if the seed potatoes have been taken from a storage temperature of 38 degrees.

Cash receipts of Alabama farmers during 1936 from the sale of principal farm crops, livestock and livestock products totaled $97,352,000—the highest figure for any year of the past four. This total does not include $6,546,000 received by the farmers of the State in government payments.

More than 6,000 miles of broad-base terraces—enough to reach 20 times from Scottsboro to Mobile—have been constructed on farms of cooperators in demonstration and CCC camp areas in Alabama.

Farmers in 11 North Central Alabama counties—Blount, Calhoun, Cherokee, Cleburne, Etowah, Fayette, Lamar, Marion, St. Clair, Walker, and Winston—bought 1,283 brood mares within the past few months, reports N. S. Stewart, RA supervisor.

Cut-over lands in nine southern states—Alabama, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas, Oklahoma, and Texas—can be made a big asset to the South, if properly treated and adequately protected, according to a survey conducted by the Southern Forest Experiment Station, New Orleans.

Letters To The Editor

C. J. MOATES WRITES

Dear Vperts of Chilton County:

I would like to say a few words in regard to this liquor question. Let's carefully consider before we go to the polls. Weigh the matter—think of the principle. Some will say legalize liquor in order to run the schools. That is just saying to our young generation: "You drink whiskey and it will do you good. It will help to educate your friend." You already see little children in rags and in need of food on account of whiskey. Then go to the polls and say give me more whiskey? The worst thing I ever saw is a so-called preacher who prays "Our Father, who art in heaven, hallowed by Thy name, Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done, on earth as in heaven," then go to the polls and say, "Give me whiskey." How on earth could the kingdom come through legalization of liquor?

Friend, let's pray Thy kingdom come and look for it to come. I am for better government.

C. J. MOATES.

THE REFERENDUM MARCH 10TH

The question that comes before us in a referendum on March 10th is not a question of voting, or not voting, whiskey, wine and beer upon Chilton County. It is already here and it is only a question of putting it under control, and taxing it that it might be made to bear its proper share of the cost of government. No informed person will dare say that there is not already a bountiful supply of whiskey, such as it is, so we need have no qualms of conscience about legalizing whiskey on account of our boys and girls and weak husbands. They can easily get all they want now. In fact it is brought right to their door now. Do you think the state and county will do any better than that for them?

This whiskey we propose to legalize can not be bought at roadhouses and fulfilling stations as the bootleg stuff can be bought today. Nothing but beer can be legally sold at these places after March 10, as it is certain that some counties will go wet and that gives legal whiskey for all counties, even though some vote dry. If we vote dry we can buy any amount of whiskey we wish in the wet counties and bring it home. If we vote dry we will have a worse condition than we now have, so the best thing we can do in Chilton County is to legalize alcoholic beverages so that we may have better control over them and make them pay their part of the cost of government.

I voted for national prohibition thinking that the federal government could put whiskey out of the country, thereby removing the temptation from my boys and from men who could not resist the temptation, and I would still vote for prohibition if it would prohibit. If all our political prohibitionists and all other prohibitionists would vote prohibition for themselves as well as for the other fellow and live it, then there would be some chance for prohibition, but such is not the case, I am sorry to say. It is true that we hear of a lot of pitiful cases of drunkenness a debauchery and of automobile accidents, caused by whiskey and men's lives being blotted out in a moment, but that is no reason for voting dry as these things are happening under prohibition. Under the old open saloon days men and women drank themselves into ruin and shame just as they do under prohibition. I do not see how we can make conditions any worse by legalizing the whiskey business and I honestly believe we may make them better.

A majority of our people do not respect the prohibition law and I believe that has helped to breed contempt for all laws, so let us go to the polls on March 10 and legalize and tax whiskey thereby bringing it out in the open where we will have a better chance to control it. The bootlegger will vote dry. Let's vote wet and put him out of business. He is a greater menace than the liquor store.

P. H. KNOX, Clanton.

Helping Farm Tenants Program Proposed For

President Roosevelt has submitted to Congress a seven-point program for solving the farm tenancy problems. The program, proposed by a special committee on farm tenancy, follows:

1. Government purchase of good farm land for sale on liberal credit terms to selected tenants. Purchasers would have to pass through a trial leasing period not to exceed five years, would have 40 years to complete payment, and could acquire title in 20 years if their finances permitted.

2. Federal and State purchase and retirement of about 100,000,000 acres of poor crop land, and assistance to families moving from it to better farms. This would be carried forward at the rate of 2,000,000 to 5,000,000 acres a year.

3. "Modest loans" to prevent small farm owners from slipping into tenancy and to help tenants, croppers, and farm laborers to increase their standards of living. The committee said about 1,300,000 tenants and cropper families and members of other groups of "disadvantaged farm workers" needed such Federal assistance.

4. A Federal "windfall" tax to take a large percentage of profits from sales of land made within three years after its purchase. This was proposed as a means to discourage land booms and to encourage families to stay on and develop one farm.

5. State legislation to improve the general leasing system and provide compensation to tenants for property improvements they make.

6. Construction and operation of "decent places to live" for itinerant farm laborers.

7. Creation of a farm security administration, under the State Agriculture, to direct the Federal program. A farm security commission would handle legal transactions concerning purchase and sale of stock and equipment, and the making of loans.

WOODLAND AND GRASS INCREASE FLOOD

The cover torched on the grass or forest litter greatly increases the amount of run-off from rains, according to James H. Camp, superintendent of the Conservation Service, CCC camp, Ala. It serves as a sponge, catches the water, and gradually percolates into the soil to run slowly to the streams.

If the grass or forest litter the water run-off is many times as fast. It rushes rapidly into the causing their sudden rise, flood, and untold damage in property loss.

CHEVROLET TO SPEED ORDERS FOR NEW CARS

Every Consideration Will Be Given Orders Left With Dealers

Detroit, Feb. 16.—W. E. Holler, vice-president and general sales manager of Chevrolet, announced this week that every consideration will be given to the thousands of customers who have demonstrated their loyalty to Chevrolet by leaving their orders with dealers in spite of the fact that they did not know when they could get delivery.

In a communication to Chevrolet's 10,000 dealers, Mr. Holler requested them to extend his thanks to the thousands of purchasers who were willing to await resumption of production for delivery of their cars. He also assured dealers that new orders for Chevrolets will receive immediate attention and that deliveries will be made with the utmost rapidity.

"It is a source of deep gratification to me and to everyone in Chevrolet to notice the fine spirit of cooperation exhibited by the public," Mr. Holler declared. "We have received hundreds of letters here in Detroit from customers assuring us their willingness to take delivery as soon as we could obtain the materials which would permit us to resume production.

"Production now has been resumed, and shipments of new cars will shortly be under way. We expect to be producing at capacity within a few days in order to reward the loyalty and patience of the public with deliveries of new cars with all the speed of which we are capable."

Mr. Holler pointed out that in November and December Chevrolet enjoyed two of the most successful months in its history, producing and delivering more than 200,000 of the new 1937 models.

New sales records have been consistently set up ever since the announcement of the new models last November, the sales chief recalled.

"We will bend every effort toward returning to a high peak of business as quickly as possible," Mr. Holler declared. "In the meantime, the many thousands of orders from Chevrolet customers, which we have not been able to fill during the recent stoppage of production, will be filled as soon as normality can be restored to the assembly lines."

The Defense Wins

Recently we read about the English colonel who wrote back home to defend the climate of India. Said he in part:

"The climate of India is not bad. Of course some young men come here and drink themselves to death and then write home to say that it was the climate that killed them."

"Of course people do die in India. But they die in other places, too. Show me a country where people don't die and I'll go there to spend the rest of my life."

The essay on winter was interesting. One youngster wrote:

"In winter it is very cold. Many people die in winter and most birds also go to a warmer climate."

Then among the typographical bonnets that we rather enjoy is one about the rehearsals starting on the play, "Ladies of the Jury" a three act play."

MAKE LIQUOR PAY TAXES!

VOTE YES FOR REPEAL

On March 10th

ON MARCH 10th the Alabama Beverage Control Act, passed by the legislature, will be submitted to a vote of the citizens of Alabama.

The Alabama Beverage Control Act is patterned on the plan which has been so successful in solving the liquor problem in other progressive states. It sets up a constructive liquor control system to regulate the legalized sale of alcoholic beverages, promote temperance in their consumption, eliminate the illicit liquor traffic, and foster respect for and obedience to law.

The Alabama Beverage Control Act provides for the sale of alcoholic beverages through rigidly controlled state stores and in hotels and restaurants in Alabama counties which approve the Act. It forever bars the open saloon. It strictly prohibits the sale of alcoholic beverages to minors.

Based on the experience of other states, it is estimated that revenues which will be received by the State of Alabama, its counties and municipalities from the legalized sale of alcoholic beverages will be about $2,500,000 yearly—a sum which now goes into bootleggers' pockets.

These revenues will be distributed as follows:

50% to the General Fund of the State for the maintenance of public schools and other governmental functions.

10% to the State Treasury, earmarked for Old Age Pensions and Public Welfare.

10% to be evenly divided among Alabama counties for their General Fund.

10% to the counties, earmarked for Public Health, Old Age Pensions, and Public Welfare.

20% to cities in counties which approve the act, and where State stores are operated.

The real question to be voted on March 10th by the citizens of your county is not whether to "stay dry" or "go wet" but whether municipalities within your county shall share in the revenues and business benefits which will accrue from legally controlled stores.

If you vote "no," liquor can be bought in state stores in your neighbor counties and freely brought into your own county.

If you vote "no," municipalities which have state stores in your neighbor counties will receive their share of the revenues from liquor sales not only to the people in your neighbor counties but also to the people of your own county.

If you vote "no," many of your citizens will drive into neighbor counties to buy liquor and spend their money with your neighbor county merchants.

If you vote "yes," your county will legalize and control something that already exists and derive from it revenue to keep your schools open and carry on the human welfare program instituted by our great President.

We've tried the path of prohibition in Alabama. It has not led us to true temperance, but instead to a $25,000,000 a year bootleg industry.

Let's give the new and open road of constructive liquor regulation a fair trial.

investigation of all matters that we felt needed our immediate attention herewith submit the following report.

During our investigation we have considered 18 cases and have examined 52 witnesses and are returning herewith 10 true bills.

We have examined the fee book of the Probate Judge and find it neatly kept and correct in so far as we were able to ascertain. We have examined the bonds of the various county officials and find that they are ample for the protection of the public; and in our examination of the sheriff's account with the State for feeding prisoners we find that it is being kept in accordance with the law. On our examination of the office of the County Superintendent of Education we find that his books, records and papers are neatly kept and in so far as we ascertained were being kept fully in accordance with the law.

We have made a personal inspection of the county jail and believe it to be sufficiently safe for the keeping of the prisoners and find that the prisoners confined therein are being well fed and cared for with reasonable comfort.

We wish to thank the sheriff and his deputies and the bailiff, for the prompt manner which they secured witnesses that we needed to complete our labors, and for conveniences given us during our stay as Grand Jurors.

Now having complied to the best of our ability with your Honor's charge, we respectfully ask that we be dismissed until such time as your Honor may see fit and think proper to have us again convene.

actual cost of the dinner, the excess to be forwarded to the Committee to be added to the Victory Dinner fund.

Judge Boykin announced that he would make public within the next few days the cities and towns where the dinners will be held throughout Alabama, together with the names of the local dinner chairman in each locality. Meanwhile his Victory Dinner headquarters will be located at Mobile where full information regarding detailed plans can be obtained.

The Number One dinner at $100.00 per plate will be held at the Mayflower Hotel in Washington from which President Roosevelt will address all the other dinners by means of coast to coast hook-ups of all major radio networks. Every ticket sold to this dinner will mean an additional $95.00 to the fund. Similarly a $50.00 per plate dinner will be held in New York City, of which $45.00 will go to the Committee.

The price of the dinners throughout the rest of the country will be determined by the local committees.

WETS & DRIES

consideration of the citizens of all the counties, and we believe such consideration will result in a decisive vote in most of the counties to impose a tax on the traffic and bring it out into the open in this state."

Boutwell reminded repeal advocates in Jefferson County they must not cease their vigilance, even in the face of a preponderance of sentiment in favor of legalization, but should continue their efforts to bring the real issues before the people and, above all, go in increasing numbers to the polls next month to vote a decisive victory.

Repeal leaders have consistently recognized not only the economic but the moral question involved and declared experience has shown legalization has definitely promoted temperance in addition to imposing upon the traffic a fair share of the costs of state and local government.

"All we need to do to bring about an orderly situation in the liquor business in Alabama, is admit the facts," Boutwell said.

"In the first place, there is no shortage of liquor throughout the state. Anybody who wants to know could find that out in a single day's observation."

"Granting that is true, then there follows but one logical conclusion and that conclusion is that advocates of law and order should be willing to change a system that admittedly is a dismal failure for one that has proved a success elsewhere."

"The people of Alabama are spending millions of dollars a year for alcoholic beverages. There never was a liquor they couldn't get all the liquor they wanted. Why not legalize and tax it? Frankly we can see no plausible answer to that argument."

"Our public institutions need the money. The aged and the infirm need the money. Our public health and public welfare departments need the money. It is inconceivable that the people of the county and state should be willing to let this annually increasing business continue and go scot free of all tribute except that which it pays the bootlegger and the underworld."

The women's division of the Local Legalization League had their headquarters in the Thomas Jefferson Hotel in full operation Monday under direction of Mrs. Lucy J. Wideman, chairman.

PASSING FOOTPRINTS Of The Times

— Billy Smith

Listening to the radio program of a known automobile manufacturer the other night we heard these words, "believe we are making cars too fast because drivers of our cars rely on super-hydraulic brakes and risk up to the point of stopping before applying the brakes." That statement seems to us rather true in that we have noticed drivers doing that dangerous and foolish thing. Then on an automobile radio program we were delighted at this statement, "Remember, it is stylish to drive safely," as if the old, reckless, fast method of driving automobiles is passing and we are glad.

Meeting Up
An attractive and charming young woman at the office of The Alabama Power Company is Miss Mary Robinson, who is taking the position held by Mrs. J. B. Roberts for a number of years as cashier. Mary has been gradually getting into the business life of Clanton and now she occupies a prominent position there. Mrs. Roberts will have an extended rest—well earned.

Token
Who's got the token? That was the question making the rounds here Monday when the sales tax went into full effect. Sales tax tokens were as scarce as hen's teeth round here. But Tax Commissioner Henry says just sit steady in the boat, there are "millions" coming—no, not dollars.

Wednesday
We used to fuss because elections were always held on Tuesday and because it was a hard job getting the papers in the office in time to get the news on the next day. Now comes one strange and calls a liquor election on Wednesday. It couldn't have been a worse day for weekly news that are published on Thursday. However, we believe we will be able to give you a fairly accurate report on the returns of next Wednesday.

The Same Opinion
Carefully looking over about eight daily newspapers of Alabama of last week we find the same opinion—that our county votes "No" next Wednesday you will still have plenty of it. In other words, it seems that we will be "wet" although we might not be dry. Our city and county will not receive the revenue from the alcoholic beverages if it votes "No" nor will you be able to purchase a bottle of beer in the county, from a bootlegger, and I imagine you will have 'em, but in larger numbers.

Shell's Cagesters
We note from a news item in this issue of the News that Mitchell Dam is to be the front in a splendid manly basketball tournament held in the town of Montgomery. The basketball team of the Dam village have made a name for themselves during the past season and our hat is doffed to them. We missed all those games but with the Legislature doing tricks and trying to run a newspaper the same time, we were more than compensated with work.

"He-Men"
We read an article by Stewart H. Hook in The American Mercury titled "The Vanishing American Male." A most charming tale, and too. On reflection, we find that the true American Male is vanishing. That women are gradually, but coming to the front in business and politics and other things. Already a portion of the Nation's wealth is in the hands of the women and at the same time things are going on, it won't be long until they get it all. At least, that is my experience. Among other things, Mr. Holbrook says "on cold nights it was the function of a dutiful husband to get in the bed first and warm the sheets for her lord. But not more. Twin beds have brought emphasis into marital relations." If the husband has been a good man, he may sleep with his wife—some-

County Will Install Water Cooling System

PUBLIC FOUNTAINS AMONG LATEST IMPROVEMENTS

Bids Will Be Asked Just As Soon As Official Notice Is Given

Visitors to Clanton may have the pleasure of enjoying clean, cold drinking water during the hot summer months in the near future, if the governor signs a local Bill, which passed through the legislature last week. This Bill, which was sponsored by Representative C.B. Cox and Senator Earle Thomas, had the unanimous support of Judge Lee Smith and the new commissioners court of the county. It provides for the county to make an appropriation for the installation and maintenance of a refrigerating, or cooling, system at the courthouse and the installation of public drinking fountains on the premises there.

This will no doubt be good news to drug store and cafe owners of the city who have been furnishing millions of gallons of cold water to Clanton visitors during each summer. Judge Smith stated that he would ask for bids on this work just as soon as he is official. (Continued to Back Page)

Glover Presiding At Various County Courts

Judge Arthur Glover has been enjoying the novelty (if it is a novelty) of presiding over circuit courts in Dallas County, Tallapoosa County as well as Chilton, Autauga and Elmore. Judge Glover does this under the power of chief justice to exchange circuit judges at will from one county to another. He has also been taking care of his official duties in his own circuit.

NEW DRUNKEN DRIVER LAW GIVEN PRAISE

Thirty-Day Jail Sentence Mandatory For Those Of Two Offenses

The new State traffic law which is now in force is receiving praise from officials and citizens of the entire state, according to Chief Walter K. McAdory, head of the highway patrol. This new law makes mandatory a thirty day jail sentence for anyone convicted of driving a motor vehicle on the highways of Alabama while intoxicated for the second time. Commenting on this, one Birmingham officer stated "Liquor is the predominant factor in accidents here and this new law should go a long way towards restraining persons from taking charge of the steering wheel when they have been drinking."

LEVINE BROS. SHOWING BIG LINE NEW SPRING DRESSES

Levine Brothers are rapidly becoming one of the leading stores in Clanton and a large advertisement in the News this week brings out evidence that they know how to bring bargains to Clanton. This ad is about a special offer on print dresses that should interest every woman in this section. These brothers are also experts when it comes to fitting shoes. They are equipped to fit almost any customer that comes into their store, and take particular pains to see that their shoe customers are fully satisfied.

Mrs. A. C. Johnson was brought to her home in a Martin ambulance Monday afternoon from Highland Avenue hospital. She is doing nicely.

State Focuses Eyes On Coming Liquor Election

Graves Says He Will Play "Hands Off" Selecting Operators Of State Controlled Liquor Stores;
Senator Cites Benefits

Montgomery—Governor Graves will adhere to a strict "hands off" policy in the selection of personnel for the operation of State liquor stores when they are established shortly after the county referendums are held March 10, he announced this week, explaining that the responsibility for employing store managers and clerks would be left entirely up to the Control Board and Administrator John D. McNeal. Amplifying his statement that patronage will have NO part in the administration of the state liquor stores, the Governor told newspapermen that all applications for jobs are being speedily forwarded to Administrator McNeal "who has full authority to hire or fire."

LAW CHANGED ON PUBLISHING COUNTY REPORT

Treasurer's Report To Be Published April First
And October First

The Report of the County Treasurer of Chilton County, and every other county in Alabama, will be published the first week in April and the first week in October in the future, if Governor Graves signs a Bill passed by the legislature the last day of the recent session. This Bill amends the Code of Alabama which requires this report to be made, and changes the dates of publication from July and January to April and October, and will become law with the Governor's approval. There was considerable stress placed on abolishing the present form of publishing the report, with the idea in mind of publishing it only in a condensed form, the form to be prescribed by the state comptroller. However, that part of the Bill was omitted before its final passage last Friday by the Senate.

COURT KEEPS SHERIFF AND DEPUTIES BUSY PAST WEEK

With Circuit Court in session here, the office of Sheriff J.R. Hardy has been unusually busy for the past week. This accounts for the shortage in arrests over the week-end, perhaps. Two were arrested for public drunkenness and one for driving while intoxicated.

Mitchell Dam And Columbus Manufacturing Co. Win In Montgomery "Y" Tournament Saturday

A full day of basketball was the program at the Y.M.C.A. at Montgomery Saturday with seven strong teams over Alabama participating and one from Columbus, Ga., making the eighth. County To Purchase New Road Machinery

LANDE'S VISIT SPRING MARKETS FOR GOODS

Mr. and Mrs. M. Lande and Miss Glennie Thompson, all of The Leader, with Mr. Ben Margolis of Bens and Miss Willie Easterling of The Modern Beauty Shop, spent the week end in Birmingham where they visited the beautiful display of dresses, suits and ready-to-wear displayed by several of the country's largest manufacturers. Mr. Lande and Miss Thompson say they purchased the most beautiful line of dresses, suits and ready-to-wear ever shown in Clanton. They will begin to arrive at once until Easter. After the trip through several of the manufacturers' displays they were in a reception held at the Tutwiler Hotel, where music and cats were plentiful. There were served hundred buyers from all over Alabama at the showing.

Absentee Ballot Bill Fails To Become Law

The Bill which was introduced in the past session of the Legislature making it law that anyone wishing to vote an absentee ballot in Alabama must apply and vote the ballot in person at the courthouse, failed to pass, according to Representative C.B. Cox. This Bill, if enacted, would have affected this county considerably and cut down on the number of absentee ballots here.

THOMAS PUTS FISHING BILL IN STATUTES

Seining Will Be Permitted
Below Dams On Ala.
Waterways Now

Fishermen of Chilton county, Coosa county and the entire state will no doubt rejoice over the recent passage of a Bill in the legislature lifting the ban on certain seining for minnows below dams on the rivers of Alabama. This Bill, introduced by Senator Earle Thomas of Chilton, will allow seining with large seines just as soon as, as if and when the governor affixes his signature to the Bill. Details of the new law will be published later, shortly after the governor signs it.

EDWARD P. NICHOLS HURT

Edward P. Nichols, of South Clanton in Tuscaloosa Monday in a Martin was carried to the Veterans Hospital & Sons ambulance suffering from a fractured spine received when he fell.

TRACTORS AND TRUCKS AMONG NEW PURCHASES

Structural Steel To Be Used In Bridges Is Also On List

Indications are that the Commissioners Court and the office of the Road Supervisor intend to get busy in earnest on the roads in this county. These indications come from several notices to bidders appearing in this issue of the News.

These notices ask for bids on new blades for road machines, new trucks, tractors and graders, and structural steel for bridge work.

Judge Smith stated that they were anxious to get these bids in and make the necessary purchases of new equipment so that the Road Department could operate more efficiently.

The bids asked are for three trucks, with hydraulically controlled dump bodies three modern road graders; three crawler type tractors, motor power controlled. Purchases of this new equipment will necessitate the expenditure of thousands of dollars. However, old equipment will be traded in. T.J. Arledge, road supervisor stated that this new equipment is badly needed and that just as soon as it is purchased and put into operation, considerable more work will be in evidence on the county roads.

P. O. DAVIS GETS HIGHER POST AT INSTITUTE

Succeeds Dr. Duncan As Extension Director
At Auburn

Auburn, Ala.—The Board of Trustees of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute has named P.O. Davis director of the Alabama Extension Service succeeding Dr. L.N. Duncan, who retired to devote his entire time to the presidency of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute.

In becoming director of extension, Mr. Davis retired from the triple position of executive secretary, registrar, and director of publicity. He was succeeded as executive secretary by Prof. Ralph Draughon of the history department.

Born and reared on a farm in Limestone County, Mr. Davis began his educational career as a teacher of rural schools. After completing his high school work at Athens he came to the Alabama Polytechnic Institute where he graduated in agriculture with honors in 1916 and entered immediately into agricultural work, serving as development agent for the Southern Railway and as feature writer and merchandise investigator for the Progressive Farmer, Birmingham. He joined the Alabama Extension Service Staff in 1918.

In 1921 he was placed in charge of publicity for the extension service and the experiment station at Auburn. In this position he attracted national attention by his clear and concise writings on agricultural and industrial subjects. Radio station WAPI at Birmingham was developed by him as a part of public information work.

Read The Ads. It Pays

In large centers where competition among newspapers for leadership is keen, the newspaper with the big volume of advertising inevitably wins the race. This can be interpreted in one way only. People find it interesting and profitable to read the ads.

What is true in a large center is equally true in Chilton County. Citizens of this community will find that it pays to read advertisements and note where they can buy the merchandise they want at the price they are able and willing to pay.

One of our subscribers asserts that she saves many times the price of a full year's subscription to the Chilton County News every month merely by reading what the merchants of the community have to offer. She finds it easier, quicker and more pleasant to shop from page to page than from store to store.

This of course is only one advantage she derives from reading the advertising. The ads contain the news from the stores of the community. They tell of latest styles and newest deas. It is impossible to be well posted without reading the ads.

If you are in the habit of skipping the ads, just try the experiment of reading them first. You will find it both pleasant and profitable.

O-O-O

Centers of Discontent

Labor disturbances indicate that all is not well with the social fabric, the way of life of the people, in our great industrial centers. Concentration of industry has brought concentration of population. This concentration inevitably raises the cost of living, forces people to live amid surroundings that are not healthful or pleasant, and breeds dissatisfaction.

This at any rate is the way we choose to interpret this wave of labor unrest which is sweeping the nation. People are not satisfied with present circumstances. They seek to right them by resort to violence. And violence threatens the very stability of our nation.

This solution of the problem lies in decentralization of industry. Industries should be spread across the nation, located in small communities like Chilton County where living conditions are pleasant and satisfactory from the standpoint of the worker. What is scarcely a living wage in a big industrial center might well be a handsome income in a town like ours. The contrast in living costs between the small town and the great city is recognized by all who have traveled. The item of rent alone is a substantial figure. The few low rental districts of a great city are also the places where living conditions are far from desirable, particularly for a family with children.

The need of concentrated industry is past. In this day of modern, high speed transportation, when power is transmitted over interconnected electric lines, the small town offers almost every business advantage that the big city affords. And more than that it provides a desirable place in which workers may live.

If big business will recognize this situation, as we believe it already does, the next few years should witness a substantial movement of business to communities like ours.

Let us hope that this movement starts soon, and that Chilton County may be in a position to benefit as a result.

O-O-O

It's going to take several years yet before most of us will mean it when we say that the depression was good for us.

The outer leaves of lettuce contain the vitamins, scientists have learned. And of course that's the part we use for decoration only.

The Mechanical Element

The human element, it is said, accounts for more than 90 per cent of all accidents on the highways. Only ten per cent of all wrecks are attributed to mechanical failures.

We would hesitate to dispute the findings of statisticians, and yet we are firmly convinced that neglect of mechanical adjustments accounts for a larger proportion of highway crashes than the students of the problem admit.

It is never easy to determine the cause of an accident. Both sides have different stories to tell. "He failed to come to a full stop at an arterial highway. He swerved to my side of the road. He did not stop his car in time because he was traveling too fast." It must be realized, furthermore, that the driver who is badly injured or shaken up in an automobile accident cannot give a clear and coherent account of what happened.

So obviously many of these accidents attributed only to the human failure may be due in part to mechanical failure as well. If he didn't come to a full stop at the through streets it may have been because his brakes were poor. If he swerved beyond his own side of the road he may have been blinded by lights which were out of adjustment. If his judgment proved to be wrong when he tried to pass a truck on the highway, the sluggish motor that needed a tune-up job may have contributed something to the accident.

Hence we feel that emphasis upon the human element alone is faulty. It may lead some persons to believe that mechanical details are of no consequence, and every experienced driver knows that he is more apt to fail in handling his car when it is out of adjustment than when it is in perfect running order.

Now that safety is becoming an issue of such vital public interest, we urge our readers to pay some heed to the condition of the car they drive. Be sure you have a good set of tires that grip the road. Be sure that your brakes operate evenly and effectively. Be sure your headlights are in adjustment. Be sure that your steering gear does not have too much play. Be sure the motor takes hold as it should.

One of our friends in the garage business here in Clanton informs us that more than 50 per cent of all cars which come into his shop are badly out of adjustment. The driver rarely mentions even part of the things that demand attention.

For your own safety, therefore, and the safety of others on the highway be sure that your car is in good mechanical condition. Surely your own life and the lives of those who ride with you are deserving of this consideration.

Helping the Farmer Helps Us All

Chain store cooperation is credited by Thomas A. Robertson, well-known California farm leader, with taking growers of Concord grapes in a number of counties out of the red during the 1935 harvest season. The chains bought the grapes at an established price agreed upon by the growers, and disposed of large quantities. This kept the market clear and maintained the price level. In previous years, growers often had to sell grapes for less than the cost of production.

This is simply one more example of the way large distributing groups are now co-operating with producers—cooperation that affects the farmers of every state, and the growers of almost every kind of crop or livestock.

To the short-sighted, it may seem that when the chains work with producers to keep prices from collapsing, the interest of the consumer is not served. In other words, if chains and other big retailers refused their cooperation and waited until conditions forced producers to sell for anything they could get, the consumer could purchase at a lower figure. And so he could—but anyone who thinks that one group of people can profit in the long run at the expense of another should think again.

Farmers are consumers themselves—they constitute the greatest single consuming market in this country. They must buy a large proportion of the articles workers produce—radios and cars, clothes and cigars, candy and newspapers—or our factories must close. When the farmer gets a fair and profitable price for what he sells, and retailing efficiency passes his products on to the ultimate user at the lowest possible in-between cost, a sound balance is attained.

So, when big retailers help the farmer, they help us all in a dozen different ways.

MORAL ECHOES

D. W. Haskew

In a huckleberry tree just outside of my study window I have witnessed many a struggle between my feathered friends. Two mocking birds seemingly claim this bush as their home. The jay birds of the community have learned this and they take delight in gathering there in droves to poke fun at the mocking birds. No sooner does Mr. Jay land in the branches of the tree than he is upset by a blow from the mocking birds. Then the chase is on. The jay bird offers no resistance, but flies from limb to limb, being hotly pursued by the mocking birds. Sometimes this will last for an hour. The mocking birds just wear themselves down doing nothing but flying after a jay bird. Finally the jay birds with a note of disgust go on their way as impudent as ever, leaving the feather-torn mocking birds to occupy their own little tree and they comb out their ruffled feathers. Everywhere we look there is a battle going on. Much of the struggle that we witness among birds, beasts and folks, is none other than just chasing a jay bird. Most of the things that worry man and beast would soon be gone if we did not worry ourselves about them. It is time for us to stop frizzling ourselves up flying after jay birds.

In California the Government officers recently uncovered a fraud that was a bit unusual. Six thousand boxes of face powder was confiscated and on examination the containers of the powder showed a false bottom that reduced the contents of the box at least a third of its contents. This was not according to government regulations and the manufacturers had to suffer. This is what we would call "fooling the folks for money." After all, was it not robbery? When "Squire Skemp" in the grocery business, or Mr. "Penny Taker" in the dry goods business, will sell eight pounds of sugar for ten, or four yards of cloth for cloth for five, that is robbery. When Annanias will give a sum to the church and claim that he has given more than he has, that is lying to the Holy Ghost. Strict honesty is one of the most beautiful elements of human life. You will never be the loser if you practice strict honesty in all of your dealings with man.

A few times in my life I have been to the picture show and when I came out I felt uplifted. I had been made better on the inside. A few times I have come out of the show feeling right to the reverse of what I desired to feel. I felt that I had been given a bad deal on the inside. I had seen things that I had no business seeing. I had heard things that should never have been uttered. I had faced ideals that should never have been before the mind. For any one to be inwardly ravished on attending a show, on being at any form of public gathering, or having any form of companionship, it is better for that one never to have been there. I have even been to church when I felt that I had been trampled under unhallowed feet. It hurts to see the sacred things of our Christianity, or citizenship, held up to ridicule. It is like turning pigs into your parlor. The same thing can be said about some books. I read "Gone With The Winds" and something on the inside of me felt ravished. After completing the book I felt like a hog had rooted up my garden of life. Better guard the garden of your life with as much care as you would guard your flower bed from a rooting pig.

A fine young man with a moderate income one day rode up to my parsonage home with a beautiful young lady in his car. He asked if I would say the words that would make them husband and wife. I did so and they rode away as happy and as hopeful as any young couple ever was. Two years later we had a card from this couple saying "We are now living in the edge of town and we own our home. We do not have much to live on, but we have a lot to live for." We treasured that card for it carried a fine philosophy of life. The most of us may not feel that we have much to live on, but if we will lose sight of the material, we can readily see that we have much to live for. Living for each other in the foundation of happiness in married life and to live for each other in the foundation for happiness in all social contacts. Anyone who lives for himself, has but little to live for, it matters not how much of this world's goods he may own.

We moved into a parsonage and found a leaking pipe in one of the water connections. I tried to fix it but not in a determined way. For two years my water bill was larger than it should have been. The pipe leaked on "One day I gathered my tools and went to the leaking tank and addressed it this way: "I am now going to fix you or know the reason why." I went to work and in less than two hours I had solved the problem and the leak was stopped. It was just a matter of deciding to do the thing that I knew should be done. How many of you know of a leak that is in your finance, in your time, in your efforts to improve yourself, and you just allow them to leak on. To be sure, some days, you are going to fix up these things. You are going to stop that financial leak that keeps you down all the time, but you are waiting. Why not resolve now that you are going to do that

ORGANIZED LABOR
APPROVES REPEAL

Public Health, Education, Old Age Pensions and Public Welfare to Benefit from State Stores

Montgomery, Ala.—Alabama voters will decide next Wednesday whether the counties will exact a tribute from the liquor traffic for public health, education, old age pensions, public welfare and homestead exemptions or whether they shall remain under the present bootleg system.

Legalization and taxation leaders from many sections of the state had received reports today of a swelling tide of sentiment in favor of placing the already flourishing traffic under the proposed state store system, according to announcement from headquarters here.

County units of the Local Legalization League have emphasized the wide public approval of the league's campaign slogan—"Make liquor pay taxes."

Legalization and taxation advocates today warned small restaurant and sandwich shop operators to beware of unauthorized persons who have sought to influence them against the state store system by "measuring" their establishments and notifying them they could not qualify under the new act.

"These persons are imposters," Albert Boutwell, Birmingham campaign director declared, "and are deliberately attempting to mislead these people by telling them they cannot even sell beer.
Nothing could be further from the truth, and there is nothing to prevent enlargement of an establishment at any time to qualify to sell not only beer but package liquors under the state store act."

Under the measure providing for a system of state stores, Alabama would receive approximately $2-500,000 annually from alcoholic beverages now flooding the state tax free which would be apportioned as follows:

1—Fifty per cent to the state general fund for schools and other essential functions of government.

2—Ten per cent to the state treasury earmarked for old age pensions, public relief and other activities of the Department of Public Welfare.

3—Ten per cent to the general funds of the counties.

4—Twenty per cent for the general funds of the cities in which tax paid liquors are sold.

5—Ten per cent to the 87 counties earmarked for public health, old age pensions and other public health and public welfare activities.

Campaign leaders have also placed special emphasis on the fact that the one issue involved is the question of whether liquor shall be taxed and regulated or whether it shall remain tax free and unrestricted.

Considerable sentiment in favor of legalization is reported to have developed since disclosure that a negative vote in a county will act as a powerful economic factor against the merchants of that county by inducing business into a neighboring county that had voted to bring alco-hols out into the open and make them pay their share of the tax burden.

Urban centers of the state, according to reports from Birmingham, Mobile and Montgomery, which have suffered a sharp decline in convention and tourist business, will poll a heavy vote in favor of legalization.

On the other hand, many of the smaller counties are expected to follow suit in an effort to prevent an influx of business to cities.

Under the proposal, counties which vote not to tax their liquor supply will be powerless to prevent transportation into their counties for personal use of any amount of state store liquor from an adjoining county.

Added significance was given the question as a statewide economic problem because of the likelihood that every adjoining state will soon remove their liquor ban after already having legalized and taxed beer, thus putting the entire state, and particularly the border counties, in position to lose thousands of dollars in business annually to out-of-state merchants.

Representatives of organized labor have laid particular stress on the resultant benefits due to creation of thousands of jobs for waiters, glass-workers, carpenters and others as a result of legalization.

W. O. Hare, secretary of the Alabama State Federation of Labor, announced in Birmingham an estimated 20,000 permanent jobs would be created in the state in addition to large capital investments likely to be made in breweries and brewing equipment.

Police of Miami, Fla., are now engaged in the matter of finding out who stole a ten-ton steam roller from the Homestead Machinery Company.

END THE BOOTLEGGERS' REIGN IN ALABAMA!
Restore Respect for Law

Prohibition has failed in Alabama.

Unless we shut our eyes to the overwhelming evidence available on every hand we must admit the fact that an intolerable condition now exists in our state with respect to the illicit sale of alcoholic beverages.

Throughout our state bootleggers ply their illegal trade. Caravans of cars bring liquor daily into Alabama from Florida and other nearby states, which have legalized its sale. Roadhouses sell it by the drink or the bottle. In many of our cities, stores are actually advertising "beer for sale" with flaunting signs and displaying rows of bottles in their windows. Juries are refusing to convict for liquor violations. In fact it has been estimated that the bootleg business in Alabama has grown to the proportions of a $25,000,000 industry!

This is an appalling situation whose greatest menace is the disrespect it breeds for all our laws.

Alabama is today the only state which still fosters the bootleg racket. It is the only state which has not legalized the sale of alcoholic beverages in some form. It is the only state which lets the sale of alcoholic beverages go tax-free.

Prohibition has failed in Alabama—not because of lack of diligence on the part of our law enforcement officers—not because of lack of law to restrain its sale, for Alabama has long had the strictest laws of any state upon its statute books—but because it is impossible to control the sale of liquor in Alabama unless a system of control shall be established to achieve that end.

The Alabama Beverage Control Act provides that system—a system which has been proved sane and sound in many other states and Canada, where crime is at a minimum and there is real respect for government and law.

Prohibition has failed in Alabama. Let's now try constructive control of the liquor question—the new way and modern way which has contributed so much to the solution of this age-old problem.

Vote March 10th to end the bootlegger's reign in Alabama and to restore respect for law. Vote for constructive control!

vice. Miss Bailey and Dr. Walston were introduced by Meta E. Grace, Home Demonstration Agent. Dr. Walston in her address described the true conditions of war and related the causes and results of war. The realistic description of the true methods of fighting as given by Dr. Walston, show that the masses are made to suffer horrible tragedy for the benefit of capitalists. She handled her subject in a forceful way, saying in conclusion that today the people should write their congressmen and senators saying they don't want war and please ask them to use their influence in preventing America entering the war.

Senator Earl Thomas commented on facts stated by Dr. Walston and also expressed himself as being very interested in the growth of Home Demonstration work in Chilton County.

Following the program a social hour was enjoyed at which time the guests were served delicious refreshments consisting of rolled olive and raisin sandwiches, cakes and punch.

HELP PREVENT WOOD FIRES

Seven years ago on a piece of recently cut over woodland on the Experiment Station at Auburn three one-acre plots were set up to determine the effect of fire upon the coming of another crop of trees. All plots had enough seed trees to furnish seed for restocking the land. The plots were separated by fire lines.

Plot No. 1 has been burned every March since and now has 100 trees or 8 per cent of a stand.

Plot No. 2 has been burned every five years (to learn whether or not fire every year or occasionally is most harmful) and now has 250 trees or 20 per cent of a stand.

Plot No. 3 has been protected from fire since the logging was done and now has 1,570 trees or 130 per cent of a stand.

A good many of the pines on Plot No. 1 were there when the experiment began and a large part of the others, being shortleaf, are bushy sprouts from the roots which were killed back to the ground by fire. The same holds true for the plot burned every five years.

The value of woods-fire-protection practices to Alabama may be judged by comparing results that could be expected from the behavior of these plots.

If all woodlands were handled as No. 3, the value of the standing timber produced per year in Alabama would be $25,000,000. If all were handled as No. 2, the value would drop to $5,000,000, and the practice on No. 1 would lower it to $2,000,000.

Make All Land Pay
The South has 38 per cent of the forest land of the nation, but 90 per cent of the acreage burned annually by woods fires is in the South. For every acre burned throughout the North, East and West, the South burns 9. These are over 95 per cent man-made fires.

With 38 per cent of the forest area of the United States, the South has 58 per cent of the land classed as poor to non-restocking. And yet, if protected, trees will grow up on nearly any spot in Alabama.

Abandoned acres in the South have been known to lose as much as 88 tons of soil per acre per year; whereas tree-covered soils adjoining lose none. Water run-off shows 44 per cent on the bare acres and one-half of one per cent on the woodland. With Alabama's 50 to 60 inches of rainfall per year, her soil needs protection.

Average Alabama woodland under protection will grow a cord of wood (500 board feet) per acre per year. The present average is 200 board feet.

The farm woods—consisting of relatively small tracts with fields, pastures, creeks and roads which prevent the spread of fire—present an easy fire problem to handle. There is little reason for fire in the farm woods unless they are deliberately set.

Every acre which does not produce some crop is a liability to the owner. Put all acres to work. Agree with your neighbor to stop fires.

The Price We Pay For Woods Fires
Young trees are killed.

Old trees are scarred and stunted. Turpentine yield is decreased.

Farm income is lowered.

Wild game is killed and its protective cover is destroyed.

Erosion is promoted.

Floods follow heavy rains on burned areas.

Streams and springs are less active. Boll weevils or screw worms are not controlled or their work materially lessened by woods fires.

IN LOVING MEMORY OF MY LITTLE SON, THOS. LAWRENCE

In this sad hour of sorrow and grief, I am so thankful I have a Saviour who gives me relief.

God took away from us the sweetest and best but we know he is now in heaven at rest. I loved him and nursed him as no other. I tried to be a faithful mother. We can't understand why he was taken away, but we will understand some sweet day.

He was too good, too gentle and fair to dwell in this cold world of care. He was too obedient and loving and full of cares to stay in this world of sin and distress, so God took Tommy to be at rest.

God didn't let him stay here and suffer very long. He whispered "Thomas, you are ready to come and be with me at home." In all of his troubles and suffering he never said a word. He was trusting in his Lord, which is the sweetest word.

God keep us to be faithful and patient as he was, and serve Him in every way, until God calls for us to meet Thomas in heaven on that bright and happy day.

Claud Billingsley Died In B'ham Hospital

Claud Billingsley, aged 50, passed away at a Birmingham hospital last Thursday, after a brief illness. Mr. Billingsley, who was a native of Chilton County, moved to Birmingham when a young man. He became a prominent business man and married a Birmingham teacher, Georgia McLeMore.

Several years ago when his health failed they returned to Chilton County where Mrs. Billingsley became a teacher. For some time Mr. Billingsley has been manager of Blue Creek Camp, while Mrs. Billingsley has taught in Clanton.

Mr. Billingsley is survived by his wife, Mrs. Georgia LeMore Billingsley, two children, Brady and Jane Fair Billingsley. Brady is employed by Hill Grocery Company in Birmingham and Jane Fair is a student at Auburn. He is also survived by six brothers, W. J., of Clanton; S. R. of St. Petersburg, Fla.; Ira and Ed of Mobile, Sidney J. of Birmingham and J. C. of Thorsby and two sisters, Mrs. Leila Martin and Mrs. Mae Martin of Thorsby.

The Billingsley family is one of the more prominent families of Chilton County and his numerous friends mourn his passing.

That's What I Think

Saul M. Goldstein

The topic of the day and week is tokens. All over the State of Alabama people will be talking about tokens this week, asking and answering questions, discussing pro and con the merits of the luxury tax (nee the general retail sales tax, if you please) and merchants and consumers alike will be trying to untangle the puzzle of figuring the value of an aluminum disc that stands for one-thousandth of a dollar.

The Winston Simplified Dictionary gives several definitions of the word "token," and some of them are interesting, to say the least. I quote: "a piece of metal intended to be used as currency, and having a face value in excess of its actual value;" and further on, "a coinlike piece of metal issued at a fixed price and good for special purposes, as the payment of trolley fares."

The 1-mill and 5-mill tokens issued this week by the State of Alabama Tax Commission are properly and technically classified under the latter definition; but there is still another definition, in the same dictionary, which may be full of meaning to citizens of Alabama for more than one reason. It heads the list of definitions for this particular term, and it says briefly: "something representing something else; a sign, symbol, or indication."

Our tax tokens are not merely coinlike pieces of metal issued at a fixed price and good for the special purpose of paying the retail sales tax: more than that, they will prove before long (or I miss my guess) to be symbols of a more direct participation by the public in the government of the state.

The vast majority of our taxes fall under the heading of hidden taxation. No one, or almost no one, buying a package of cigarettes here stops to think that he is paying six cents tax to the Federal government and three cents tax to the state government. He counts the cost of cigarettes plus tax as the cost of cigarettes. When renting a home or a place of business, the renter rarely realizes the amount of taxes he is paying indirectly. This failure to realize the amount he is contributing to the support of the administration of his local, state and federal governments leads to a lack of interest in the conduct of those administrations.

The sales tax brings home to the average citizen the actual cost of government (inequality only a fraction of it!) and makes him sit up and take notice. Each time he gives or receives a token in the payment of the sales tax, he will think of the cause and purpose of such payments: he will begin to ask of himself and of his neighbor whether the government he is receiving is worth the price he is paying for it; and then he will begin to examine his government and express his opinion thereof by means of the most powerful weapon civilization ever placed in the hands of the mass of men—the ballot.

So our tokens will become tokens of a new era of self-government, symbols of a society interested in the government it supports; they will hasten the day when "government of the people, for the people and by the people" will mean more than a mere mouthful of words uttered by a political speaker on the eve of elections. As such, although I protest the sales tax as a curb on buying power and advanced prosperity, I welcome it as a forerunner of individual consciousness of democratic obligation.

At least, that's what I think.

ADMINISTRATORS MEETING

Mr. C. G. Lackey, District Field Scout executive, was here Monday, February 22, for another "round table" discussion of Troop and District problems. The Scoutmaster from Thorsby and four of his Scouts were there.

Valve Construction Gives Chryslers More Horsepower

Improved valve construction is one of the reasons why the Gold Seal engine of the Chrysler Royal is able to develop its extraordinary 93 horsepower with a piston displacement of but 228.1 cubic inches. The valve action of all Chrysler cars always has been exceptionally good but in the 1937 models it reaches a new point of efficiency.

Exhaust valves are made of a new material called austenitic steel, which has proved far superior to the material ordinarily used for this purpose. This steel has exceptional strength when very hot and offers great resistance to the burning and searing effects of the extremely hot gases that are developed in combustion.

Exhaust valve inserts, which have been standard in Chrysler engines since 1933, have a most remarkable saving in 1937 and in valve grinding expense. The general practice in engine construction is to seat the valve in the cast iron of the cylinder block or cylinder head. This cast iron is much softer metal than the steel of which the valve is made, with the result that the constant pounding of the valve along with the pitting and burning of the cast iron seat caused by the high temperature exhaust gases soon prevents proper seating of the valve. Compression seal is thus lost and power and efficiency are correspondingly diminished.

Chrysler engineers solved this problem by devising rings of a hard, heat-resisting chrome alloy. These rings are inserted in the cylinder block by a special process to form seats for the exhaust valves. These seats resist the pounding of the valves because they are of great hardness and also resist the burning and pitting effects of the hot gases with which they are constantly in contact. They retain the original seal of the valves and the correct tappet clearances much longer than ordinary valve seats. Because the per-

Voters who go to the polls March 10, to register their will on modification of Alabama's dry laws, will have the chance to say whether they want legal and taxed liquors or whether they want illegal, uncontrolled and untaxed liquors, according to Speaker M. L. Robertson, of the Alabama House of Representatives, president of the Alabama Bankers' Association, former prohibitionist, banker, and resident of Cullman.

Speaker Robertson spoke over a Statewide radio hook-up on the proposals before the voters on March 10 and paid particular attention to the necessity of those who favor old age pensions, public welfare and other human needs going to the polls and registering their opinion in the shape of legalized and untaxed liquor.

Speaker Robertson was vigorous in calling attention to the utter lack of enforcement of the prohibition laws because of their unpopularity and because Alabama has now become "a marshy island in an island sea" due to States surrounding Alabama going wet.

Among other things Speaker Robertson said in his address:

"The issue, as I see it, is imply one of whether liquor should be controlled and taxed, is simply one of whether the profits of an existing traffic should be taken away from the bootlegger and diverted to the worthy purposes of human welfare.

Liquor Not The Question

"Certainly the issue now before the voters does not involve the question of whether we shall have liquor. I cannot believe that there are any of us devoid of the knowledge that liquor flows freely throughout the State.

"This condition has existed in Alabama for 23 years and enforcement of the dry law has utterly broken down. This being true, then we arrive at my contention that the only thing for us to decide is whether it shall be controlled, regulated and taxed in the best interests of temperance.

"The Legislature, which conferred upon the honor of presiding over its House of Representatives, has enacted several measures for the broad benefit of our people. The intent and purpose of these measures cannot be carried, of course, without the necessary revenue. Part of this revenue is dependent upon the legalization of and taxation of the liquor business.

"Our Legislature in 1935, acting at the request of our great President, passed a series of bills to carry out the Roosevelt human welfare program. These bills provided aid for the aged, for the crippled children, for the blind, for the infirm, and for others who have become victims of adversity in one way or another.

"These bills were measures complying with Federal acts. The federal government is willing to help the State to help its own people, but it can do this only by dividing the load and matching funds.

"Alabama is in line to carry out this program in full, needing only the money to match what the Federal government is ready to give us. Unless we match, of course, we get nothing. "Your Legislature more recently has moved to assure full school terms, to guarantee an education to every boy and girl in the State and to pay the salaries of the teachers with whom we entrust our youth.

Don't Blame Her

"My wife—having refused to live with me and under my bed and board, I hereby announce that I will not be responsible for any debts contracted by her," announcement in an exchange.

A writer observes that women take to kind hearted men. "Also from," we want to add.

fect seating of the valves is maintained, the necessity for valve grinding is postponed many thousands of miles and the engine is able to give "new car" mileage after long service.

Chrysler pistons are another factor in developing high horsepower that may be transmitted to the wheels instead of being wasted in merely turning the engine. They are of aluminum alloy, which permits much lighter weight than is possible with cast iron pistons. This light weight means that less effort is required to start and stop the engine and the load on the bearings is consequently reduced.

An anodic coating is used on all Chrysler pistons to give them such hardness that they are practically immune to wear. The anodic coating is supplied by means of an electrolytic treatment of the aluminum piston that gives it a surface of aluminum oxide, one of the chief ingredients of sapphires and similar precious stones. It is one of the hardest substances known. The pistons when treated become so hard that they are virtually immune to scuffing and scoring.

In the 1937 Gold Seal engine the pistons are of the "U" slot instead of the "T" slot construction, giving better bearing against the cylinder walls and consequently longer life and quieter operation.

Mr. Hicks Returns

The school is glad to have Mr. Hicks back with them. He has returned from his trip. He and Mr. Little attended the National Educational Association at New Orleans.

We are also glad to have Mr. Varnell back with us. Mr. Williams is also back with the school. This makes the faculty complete again.

While Mr. Hicks was absent Mr. Searcy was left in charge with full authority to punish any way he saw fit when punishment was needed and to his estimation some few needed it. Some of the students seemed to think that school was held other places than at the school house. But when Mr. Searcy went to meet their class they changed their minds.

Major Bowes Program

The Major Bowes program will be held at the High School auditorium at eight o'clock Friday night, March 5. The public is cordially invited to attend. The admission will be fifteen and twenty-five cents.

Miss Colley Absent From School

Miss Colley has been absent from school attending the wedding of her brother in Troy, Ala.

Senior II Play

The Senior II Class is going to put on a play before long and we expect it to be a very good one. Miss Simpson is sponsoring this play. We will have more about it later, so watch for further announcements of "Murdered Alive."

Old Age Pension

Although the other boys of this school are ready and waiting to leave this school there is one young boy who seems contented just to say and keep on staying. He says he has been here ever since this building has been built, (1914), and expects to be here a long time yet. Even the "Mac" is old he still knows how to get to school on time and stay at his work. "Mac" says that in one more year he will be old enough to draw his old age pension. We hope that he will have many more successful years as janitor at this school.

Mr. Little States

Mr. Little stated the other day that the school would run long enough to give the Seniors their diplomas and to let the others be able to pass and be promoted if they make the grades sufficient. This is the best news we have had for four years and we hope that this will hold true for the years to come.

Sports

The base ball prospects are very good. Every one is in good hope of a good season and we sincerely believe that we will have a good line up of players. Mr. Varnell stated that the school had bought new equipment for the other sports and he also expected the school to do the same for baseball.

Some of the boys have already started practicing, they play catch during the noon period and they look as though they might play good baseball. But you can't judge by that so come see their first game. The time will be announced later. The entire team will start regular practice in a few days.

The C. C. H. S. Gagers won a most interesting game from Verbena Wednesday night, Feb. 24, the score being 26 to 14. The teams both played a hard game but Verbena just couldn't hit the ring as well as Clanton.

The second team also won a hard fought game from Thorsby Jr. High by the score of 30 to 23. This game was a very interesting game and a very tight one. Both teams kept ball rolling fast through the game, and that is what it takes to a ball game interesting.

The second team also played interesting games on Friday of last week. They played the second team of Verbena High Friday afternoon with the game with all ease. The game was played Friday night at Thorsby Jr. High at Thorsby. This was a very interesting game and great sportsmanship from both of teams.

Arrangements are being made for girls to play the woman faculty of school. We hope this can be arranged for we know that it will be an interesting sight.

BUSINESS SEES RECOVERY AFTER BRIEF SETBACKS

Strikes Settled, Industry Rushes To Meet Orders

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—Business is making a spirited recovery from January's setbacks, National City Bank reveals in its monthly review.

In clearing up of such adverse factors as the Ohio Valley floods, the coast maritime strike and the coal miners' shutdown, industry is showing a strong rebound as business to meet unfilled orders, the review said. The urgent needs of consumers growing out of such interruptions to the normal flow of goods near always leads to a rapid stimulation of business lines, the bank's statement said.

The capital goods industries are still on the rise, and they are setting the pace for recovery. "Building," the report says, "is showing a strong rebound, and utility orders, farm implement sales and machine tool purchases have run substantially ahead of 1936 figures, with industrial building and railway purchases more than twice as great and machine tool orders not far behind."

The survey dwelt at length on the situation, pointing out that the dangers in further production interruptions from strikes. Considerable attention was devoted to the rising trend of prices and the effect on recovery which it has. Rises in wages and raw materials, social security costs and demand for products are all factors in the price upturn, the letter stated.

Purchases of Cream Based On Grades

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — Beginning on March 1 Alabama cream will be bought and sold on grade, announces R. J. Goode, Commissioner of Agriculture and Industries.

Managers, operators and owners of cream companies in the State have agreed to pay a minimum differential of three cents per pound butter fat for no. 1 over no. 2 sour cream. All cream unfit for human consumption will be condemned and discarded so that it can not be sold.

Cream grades established by the State Board of Agriculture follow:

(a) "Sweet cream" shall consist of fresh, clean cream of good taste and odor, and the acidity shall not exceed 2 of one percent calculated as lactic acid.

(b) "Grade One Sour Cream" shall consist of cream that is clean and free from objectionable odors and flavors, and that has at the time and place of purchase an acidity not exceeding .8 of one percent, calculated as lactic acid. All grade One Sour Cream shall be delivered to the purchaser within four days, and shall be delivered to the butter manufacturing plant within twenty-four hours after purchased, unless suitable facilities are maintained for holding this cream at 50 degrees Fahrenheit or below.

(c) "Grade Two Sour Cream" shall consist of cream that has objectionable flavors or odors, or that is too acid (or sour) to grade as Grade One Sour Cream.

(d) "Unlawful Cream" shall consist of cream that contains dirt, filth or other foreign matter which renders it unfit for human consumption, and that supporting basis, the bank found. As it must depend less in the future upon continuous additions to purchase power provided through Government expenditures, the danger of prices getting out of balance is evident.

High Producing Cows Require Good Care and Complete Feed

To balance the scale requires one of two things. Either the cow must feed herself to keep up milk production, or a good milking concentrate be provided to give her what she needs.

A good cow is her own worst enemy. It is repeatedly proved by the number of "breakdowns" among producers," according to D. H. Harrison, prominent dairy authority at Virginia Mills.

"Because the making of a large volume of milk does require an enormous amount of energy on the cow's part, many high producing animals sacrifice themselves for the job," says Van Pelt. "Poor milk care of themselves by growing from their own bodies milk. Consequently mastitis, and udder troubles, and general breakdown play greatest havoc with high producers."

Good Cows Easy Victims

A recent test for Bungs Abortion in a cow. Testing Association herd in Washington, D. C. Thirteen out of fifteen reacted positively. Production had been 11,950 pounds in 1936, a difference in average production of 2,074 pounds per cow those still in production. The picked out the high producers and workers. Tests of this nature show the serious loss in profits by result. Operating expenses all times he extended to cover production, but when the total was cut, the initial cost of every pound of milk is proportionately high," Van Pelt says.

Cows Are Like Factories

Comparisons have been made between a cow and a factory. Both operated for the specific purpose of turning out a profitable product. A cow produces successfully and unless attention is given to the repair of machinery. But a factory is not complete. A cow goes further than any completed product—whether she produces milk or not. A cow's body shuts down when the missing materials from her body. A factory can close down. A cow can't. As a result, "in breakdown" begins, and another begins her journey to the house.

An economically sound and far-sighted manufacturer knows that depend on the way his machinery operates. Efficiency increases breakdowns and inefficiency cut down the margin of profit, and cause loss below the line. So the wise business man keeps his machinery well-oiled, repaired, and smooth running. Not so with many dairymen.

Cyclic Needs Differ

"The cyclic requirements of a high-producing cow vary in their nature," according to Van Pelt. "During each period she must be supplied with the materials she needs for doing the best job, not only during the period she is then in, but in following periods as well. As a cow freshens she does she milk. By avoiding calving difficulties, retained placentas (afterbirth), and congested and feverish udders following parturition, a cow has a better chance of maintaining high production. Intelligent herd management, and providing feeds that do the job best, prevent expensive breakdown and inside teardowns."

Following calving, milk production becomes an exaggerated maternal function. The urge to supply food becomes predominant. This is a perfectly normal urge, stimulated by nature. The stimulation to produce, however, may become so great that the cow needs protection against excessive milk flow and building up body weight, strength, vigor and vitality during this period pays dividends in the form of money-making cows later on.

"During the milk-making months cows must still be watched carefully to prevent body sacrifices for supplying deficiencies in feed. To insure an easy and money-making performance, a completely balanced ration should be supplied. Only a ration that gives a cow everything she needs for making milk will protect her against 'putting herself in the pail.'"

"Supplying efficient and completely balanced feeds in every cycle of the cow's development insures a longer, more profitable life to every herd member, reduces turnover, and steps up milk production."

Local Citizens Discuss Liquor Question And County Election

Gives Views On Proposed Liquor Control Act To Be Voted On Editor, Chilton County News, Clanton, Alabama.

"Dear Sir:

"I want to write just a small statement of some of my views on the proposed liquor law which will be voted on March 10.

"First, we are to have four places to sell liquor, state stores, hotels, restaurants, and clubs. I will say first that I hate to see the State of Alabama go into the liquor business. I have been taught to love my state and respect the laws and it seems to me that it would look bad for the State of Alabama to sell its citizens liquor and then prosecute them for getting drunk and violating the law. If liquor is not sold to make those drunk that buy it, what is it sold for? Second, it seems to me that it would be bad to sell liquor in restaurants or hotels. I am sure the influence would be much stronger on our boys and girls to buy liquor in restaurants and hotels than it would in an open bar-room, then, too, the amount is sold in restaurants according to the purchase price of meals and I am informed that examiners will be appointed to examine every meal and see how much liquor was sold with the meal. Can anyone imagine the number of examiners that it would take to examine every meal and every drop of liquor sold in restaurants in Alabama. One other thing I want to call the people's attention to: the class of advertisements that will be put in the newspapers, advertising the sale of liquor. I just ask the voters of this county to look in the daily newspapers and look at the enticing and ridiculous advertisements of cigarettes and just compare this with what the advertisements of liquor will be. Now I do not intentionally want to hurt the business of any newspaper but I think more of the rising generation than I do of the benefits that these large newspapers will get from advertising

SEES PROHIBITION AS A FAILURE

Editor, Chilton County News, Dear Sir:

Please allow me space in your valuable paper to express some of my views in regard to the liquor problem in our state.

Mr. Editor, from my position, with twenty-some-odd years of observation and experience with prohibition, I consider it a total and proven failure.

Prohibition has not solved our liquor problem any more than slavery would have solved our labor problem.

Mr. Editor, I, for one, do not hesitate to tell you that I most earnestly want liquor, wine and beer to pay its share of taxes in our state to help maintain old age pensions and other worthwhile institutions.

I understand 46 of the 48 states are already receiving taxes from the sale of different drinks. Only Alabama and Kansas are considered dry and I do not consider Alabama dry by any means. Most everyone knows liquor can be procured very easily on most of the highways and most of the byways in town or even in the country. Since we have had plenty in the past, plenty at present, and prospects of plenty in the future, it seems to me the only sensible and sane thing to do is to liquor as they do cigarettes.

"We are told that blind tigers in Alabama are very bad. I say to you that they are bad and a truth that I can state that I have never in all my public life encouraged a single blind tiger nor any person to sell a drink of liquor but I had rather have blind tigers all over my country like it is than to have restaurants, hotels, etc., selling liquor in my country. I do not want my state to put its approval upon the sale of liquor and if we have to have liquor, I had rather have it in an open bar-room than to have it sold as it will be sold if this law is voted in.

"Our opponents make the argument that if Chilton County does not vote a majority to sell liquor, then we will lose our part of the liquor tax. This is not true. The law provides that this county will get its prorata share of the profit that is collected from liquor which will be equally divided among the counties whether we vote for it or against it.

We are told that if a majority votes for the sale of liquor that all blind tigers will be broken up. May I ask you who will break them up? The liquor people say the officers will break them up. May I ask you what officers will break them up? Won't we have the same officers then that we have now and if they could break blind tigers up after we have the liquor, why don't they break them up now?

"I hope that Chilton County will be the banner county in voting against the proposed liquor law on March 10. If I had my way there would not be a vote in our county for it.

"Respectfully,

settle on some honest business-like method of taxation and distribution.

Mr. Editor, you and many of your readers no doubt realize there are extremists on both sides of this issue and I consider one just about as weak as the other. I would like for you who are yet calm and undisturbed, to reflect for a moment over your past and present history. It is said Noah turned water into wine, that Noah drank wine, made from his own vineyard, that George Washington liked his "toddy," was fond of dancing and had a "gnack" for picking the best looking girl in the room, and my I add here that I do not believe Abraham Lincoln with his keen sense of justice, would approve of prohibition as a solution to our liquor problem, any more than he approved slavery as a means of solving the labor problem, and then, too, our own friendly president, Mr. Roosevelt, with his millions of friends in all walks of life, believes in legalizing and taxing the liquor traffic.

Mr. Editor, here is my picture of the whole situation: The prohibitionists built a strong political machine, having many others. They began to see their error and stopped donating and the whole works went down like the Titanic. The opposition in our State are afraid Bibb Graves is building a machine that will be hard to handle. Let that be as it may, I am willing to wager five to one that is enough to doom prohibition in Alabama. I hope every voter will come out March 10 and vote their convictions.

Yours very truly,
S. Y. DORMINEY.

THORSBY YOUTH WRITES ON LIQUOR

Dear Mr. Editor:

Since the time to vote on the prohibition question is growing near, I would like to drop a few thoughts to the voters of this county.

I want to ask one question. Is there any man or woman with a sound mind that believes that the State can stand on a foundation made of sand? I don't believe that the liquor business, either legal or illicit, will be substantial enough for Alabama to rest upon.

One of the chief arguments is that the revenue will reduce the taxes, which is absolutely false, because the police reports from some of the northern large cities shows that the revenue alone doesn't pay for the enforcement of the wet laws. (These reports can be secured from the mayors of the different cities.)

Those who let this influence them in voting for the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment will sell the souls of men for a promise that will never materialize. In the Birmingham Post of February 17th, 1937, Mrs. J. H. Craig, secretary of the Old Age Pension Club, asked that everybody vote for liquor because 20 per cent of the revenue would go to the old age pension. How many fathers and mothers are willing to push their children out in sin in order to sit down and take it easy?

Another argument is that it would put the wheels of industry into motion and that the surplus fruits and grains would advance in prices, that it would put a large percent of the unemployed to work. The distillery employees, a very few to operate it. If you will compare the rise in prices of grain and fruit with that of the rise in crime and accident, you can see that the crime and accident has out scored considerably.

What does Proverbs 23:20, 21 say? "Be not among winebibbers; among riotous eaters of flesh: For the drunkard shall come to poverty; and drowsiness shall clothe a man with rags." Poverty and not prosperity, rags and not robes. If the individual fails in such undertakings, isn't it reasonable that the State will come to the same end, if it indulges in such? I want you to turn to Matthew 24:45, 51 and read in verses 50 and 51 you wet voters and Legislators can see yourselves already condemned. The law-makers of our State have sold the safety and security of highways and households for a political advantage. Not only that but they have added to unemployment, poverty and dependency. When such people talk of social security, it only shows that they are short sighted or insincere. Can there be any social security from making brutes of men and robbing their wives and children of food and clothing?

Our office-holders were put there to help give people food "in due season" but instead they have betrayed and have caused them "to eat and drink with the drunken" even if they themselves have not indulged in such. I wish that everyone would take notice to what God says: "The Lord of the servant shall come in a day when he looketh not for Him and a man that he is not aware of and shall cut him asunder, and appoint him his portion with the hypocrites; there shall be weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth." A man that is wise enough to make laws and enforce them knows that no good can come from such. If he doesn't know it he could easily find it out by a careful study of social and moral consequence of sales and distribution of beers and liquors. People who can't see such should be replaced by wise, sympathetic, sincere citizens.
HORACE KENDRICK.

Patrolman Patrick Walsh, for 20 years a traffic policeman at one of the busiest corners in New York City, recently made his first arrest in 18 years.

YOUR INCOME TAX

A Weekly Series of Articles Explaining Income Tax Payments.

Normal Tax And Surtax Rates

The Revenue Act of 1936 provides for only one normal tax rate, that is, 4 per cent on the amount of the net income in excess of the allowable credits such as the personal exemption credit for dependents, etc. The act provides for an additional credit for the purpose of the normal tax of an earned income credit, that is, 10 percent of the amount of the earned net income but not in excess of 10 percent of the amount of the net income. The personal exemption and credit for dependents are also allowable as credits against the net income for the purpose of the surtax, the resulting net income being designated "surtax net income." The surtax is imposed on surtax net incomes in excess of $4,000. The rates increase in accordance with the amount of surtax net income included in varying so-called surtax brackets. On a surtax net income of $4,000 or less there is no surtax. On a surtax net income in excess of $4,000 and not in excess of $6,000, the rate is 4 percent of such excess. The surtax upon a surtax net income of $6,000 is $80 and upon a surtax net income in excess of $6,000 and not in excess of $8,000 the rate is 5 percent of such excess in addition to the $80, or a surtax of $180 upon a surtax net income of $8,000. The surtax on a surtax net income of $5,000,000 is $3,591,000, and upon a surtax net income in excess of $5,000,000, 78 percent, the maximum rate, is applicable to such excess, in addition to the $3,591,000. Many taxpayers make the error of applying the maximum rate instead of the rate provided for in the bracket in which their surtax net income is included.

Following is an example of how to compute the tax on a net income of $8,500, all of which represents earned net income, the taxpayer being single and without dependents:

Net income	$8,500
Less personal exemption	1,000
Balance (surtax net income)	7,500
Earned income credit	850
Net income subject to normal tax	6,500
Surtax at 4 percent on amount of surtax net income in excess of $4,000 but not over $6,000, 4 percent on $2,000	80
Surtax at 5 percent on amount of surtax net income in excess of $6,000 but not over $8,000, 5

Total surtax	155
Normal tax, 4 percent on $6,500	266

Total normal tax and surtax 421

Taxpayers are advised to read carefully the instructions on form 1040 relating to the earned-income credit and surtax, as well as all other instructions thereon, before preparing their returns.

SOYBEANS VALUABLE FOR HAY, GRAZING AND CASH

Soybeans are valuable for hay, grazing and cash, says J. C. Lowery, agronomist of the Alabama Extension Service, in advocating that Alabama farmers make maximum use of them in their farming operations during 1937.

For many years farmers of the state have used soybeans as a hay crop and within recent years farmers in Southeast Alabama have found Ootootan beans valuable for grazing hogs. For years farmers in the Piedmont, Sand Mountain and Mineral sections of the state have been successful in producing large quantities of Ootootan soybean seed for planting purposes and for additional cash.

For hay, grazing or seed production soybeans should be planted in rows when danger of frost is past. They should be fertilized with 400 to 600 pounds of basic slag or its equivalent and cultivated. The best varieties for hay production are Ootootan, Laredo, Mathews, and Easy Cook. In addition to the varieties recommended for hay, Biloxi, Tokio, and Mammoth yellow are well adapted for grazing. Ootootan, Laredo and Biloxi are good varieties for improving the soil while Laredo and Ootootan are well adapted for use as feed for doves and quail. The Easy Cook is an edible variety and can be substituted for beans or peas in the human diet.

pect to liquor law enforcement. The most potent argument for state-wide repeal was being advanced this week by merchants and consumers alike who believe that the revenue from the legal sale of liquor may eventually enable the State to balance the budget without recently enacted sales levy. While the sales tax will be automatically abolished in January, 1939, there is NO telling what attitude the next administration will adopt with respect to its continuance or reenactment. Senator Floyd Moneyham, of Montgomery, expressed the opinion that "if the mockery is removed by the voters in all the 'dry-voting' 'wet-drinking' counties, the State will be assured sufficient revenue for the adequate maintenance of all essential functions of government by the time the sales tax expires two years hence."

"The Federal government is now collecting approximately $750,000,000 annually in liquor taxes," Senator Moneyham said. "Most of this money is being returned to the various states—including the few States which still remain legally dry—to be used for old age pensions and other features of the Social Security program. It is both inconsistent and unfair that Alabama should demand and receive this Federal aid while at the same time refusing to tax alcoholic beverages sold openly from the Tennessee line to the Gulf."

officially notified that the governor signed the Bill making it a law, and there is no doubt this will be done right away, he stated.

In connection with this the county could go ahead and complete the job by installing in each office of the courthouse, for the benefit of officials and others, a drinking fountain. This would save much time and aid efficiency at the courthouse to a great extent.

Alabama's Sales Tax Now In Full Swing

MANY ITEMS ARE EXEMPT FROM TAXES

Tokens Late But Will Be Distributed Over The State This Week

The State of Alabama embarked upon its first experiment with a consumer's sales tax last Sunday night at the stroke of 12 with only a million and half of the 25,000,000 tokens purchased in circulation. The shipment of 1,000,000 of the aluminum and brass tokens expected to arrive here Sunday was held up in Cincinnati and when the State Tax Commission opened its offices at 1 p. m., it had only 200,000 on hand. These, in one and five-mill denominations, were exhausted in two hours and many merchants who applied for them were turned away.

Distribution of the tokens began first in Birmingham and Mr. Long estimated that about a million and a quarter were in circulation there when the sales tax became operative.

To merchants who did not provide themselves with the tokens, Chairman Long offered this advice:

"Charge by the penny. Where the tax is less than a half cent, give the customer the benefit. Where it is more, take it yourself. That will make everybody about even."

While an initial order was placed for 25,000,000 tokens, five million of brass in five-mill denominations, and 20 million of aluminum in one-mill denominations, no one was able to say yesterday how many would eventually be required for the efficient administration of the sales tax. The first batch will cost the State $15,000. They are to be used for making change in small purchases and remainders where the tax cannot be computed in cents.

Exemptions

The tax will be collectible on virtually all retail sales and theatre admissions. Flour, meal, sugar, and coffee are exempt. So also are cigars and other tobacco products which already pay a specific tax and gasoline, probably the most heavily taxed of all commodities. The tax on automobiles is one-half of one per cent.

The sales tax superseded the gross receipts tax which was in effect from Jan. 1 to Feb. 28 inclusive. It was estimated at the Capitol that the gross receipts tax of one and one-half per cent, would yield $900,000 during the two months of its effectiveness.

Token Schedule

Chairman Henry Long, of the Tax Commission, yesterday prescribed the following schedule for collection of tokens:

On sale involved:
3c to 7c inclusive, one "1" mill token.
8c to 12c inclusive, two "1" mill tokens.
13c to 17c inclusive, three "1" mill tokens.
18c to 22c inclusive, four "1" mill tokens.
23c to 27c inclusive, one "5" mill token.
28c to 32c inclusive, one "5" mill token and one "1" mill token.
The same ratio applies to larger sales.

Brief Farm News

Cash receipts of Alabama farmers during 1936 from the sale of principal farm crops, livestock and livestock products totaled $97,352,000—the highest figure for any year of the past four. In addition, farmers of the state received $6,546,000 in benefit payments.

Hog numbers increased 12 per cent, horses two per cent, mules and sheep showed no change, while cattle numbers declined four per cent in Alabama in 1936. At the same time the number of horses, mules, cattle and hogs decreased in the United States. Sheep increased slightly in the country. Indications are that potato prices will continue upward during the next two or three months, owing to the small supply of late potatoes that went into storage.

Maplesville Wins Second Place And Clanton Fourth Place In District Tournament

Chilton County High School and Maplesville High from Chilton County won distinction from the District tournament held at Selma March 5 and 6.

There were eighteen teams from over the district vying for the coveted honors of representing their schools at Tuscaloosa in the State Tournament.

The strong Jemison team, also a Chilton County team, was nosed out in the third round of play by Selma, the score being 19-18. Selma continued through the bracket to place first in the tournament.

Our own Chilton County High boys are to be commended for their efforts to place in the tournament. No team from C.C.H.S. has shown a finer spirit of loyalty than the team of '36-'37. The boys received compliments upon their fine team spirit and their well timed offensive attack.

The outstanding play of captains Maurice Thornton and Clive Aldridge were inspiring to little Buckley Armstrong, J.L. Littlejohn, Windol Massey, Kermit Jones, Durwood Williamson and Morris Woodfin to form a team with a never-to-give-up spirit. The boys from C.C.H.S. were real tigers in spirit and won the respect and favor of the fans. From the team of '36-'37 only two of the players were experienced in tournament play. Buckley Armstrong was high point man in the play of C.C.H.S.

Maplesville lost their first game to Selma and continued through to win in the second bracket second place and the coveted honor of going to the state tournament. Jemison and Clanton High were eliminated by Maples-

Chilton's Lawmakers Sponsor Bill For The Little Man

Bill Introduced By Cox To Place Salary Of Small Employees Back Almost To Level Of Pre-Depression

Chilton's two lawmakers, Representative C.B. Cox and Senator Earle Thomas, have the interest of the man of small salary at heart, judging from a bill sponsored by Cox and pushed by Thomas during the recent session of the Legislature.

Although the Bill failed to be enacted into law, it touched the heartstrings of many men and women who are employed by the State at salaries far below the pre-depression level. It was Mr. Cox's plan to have this Bill take the place of one by Representative Ellis of Shelby County, which increased the salaries of Supreme Court and Circuit Court judges only leaving off the small salaried employee.

The Ellis Bill, which passed and be-

What Is This? A Sit-Down Strike? Must Not Be So

The chef at Nell's Eat Shoppe ran into something Monday that might be called an "anti sit-down strike" on the part of a hen that was being prepared for the skillet.

Upon opening the fowl, the chef was startled to see seven well developed eggs and four eggs not well developed, come rolling out. Amazed beyond words for awhile, word was finally sent to the manager of the cafe who arrived on the scene and decided that for the price of a four-pound hen, the cafe had received more than it paid for—in eggs. So far, this is the first occurrence of this kind ever heard of here.

DRINK ACID AT RELATIVE'S HOME MONDAY

Walker Henderson Ends Life After Writing Note To His Wife

DIED AT HOME OF BROTHER-IN-LAW

Walker Henderson, age 39, employee of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad at Broyles, lay dead Monday night at the home of his brother-in-law near Jemison, the victim of his own hands.

According to his brother-in-law, Lonnie Rhodes, who resides five miles west of Jemison, Henderson spent the day at his home and while he (Rhodes) was working, drank a quantity of carbolic acid, death resulting within a few minutes.

Rhodes stated to Coroner J. Mell Martin, who investigated the case Monday night and examined the body, that Henderson told him what he had done. Rhodes said he then rushed for help, and when he returned found Henderson slumped in a chair dead. A pint bottle, having the odor of carbolic acid was found nearby.

Notes in the pocket of Henderson bore out the statement that he drank the acid at 5:30 o'clock Monday afternoon. Rhodes stated he died about six o'clock. The note was addressed to his wife and told her "it is not because I don't love you * * *". The note then went on to tell Mrs. Henderson to "do the best you can."

He is the son of H.E. Henderson, and survived by his widow, Mrs. Mae Hicks Henderson, formerly of Saginaw. Three brothers, T.A. Henderson of Montgomery; Arthur of Brantley; Hobson, of Ohio. Four sisters, Mrs. Lorene Martin of Tuscaloosa; Mrs. Maye Bearden of Montgomery; Mrs. Lula Latham of Maplesville; and Mrs. Lela McAfee, of Planterville.

Physical Training Valuable

Great learning and even artistic or literary genius are of little value to a man if won at the price of ill health. The boy or girl who takes full advantage of our opportunities for education and accumulates a vast store of knowledge, is neither able to enjoy life nor contribute effectively to the advancement of society if hampered by physical weakness or infirmity. Success, with the exception of rare and unusual individuals, goes to the person of robust health.

These facts emphasize the importance of physical education and athletics in our school system. Physical training which brings the benefits of regular and health drills to the great majority of school students, building exercise, and competitive athletics which add so much to general health as well as the joy of living certainly have a definite place in modern education.

In pioneer days athletic training was not of such importance. When boys and girls worked in the fields and woods, when life was lived in the open, competitive sports were not essential. But now when the majority of our citizens are compelled by force of circumstances to do most of their work within doors, an interest and training in sports means a great deal in the way of successful living.

We enjoy placing emphasis upon these facts at the present time when our local basketball squad is approaching the end of the season and while public interest in local athletics is still at a high pitch. There are those who believe that all this is merely play, that it has no place in education. For their benefit we want to emphasize the educational importance of athletics.

There is much we might say about what young men learn when they work on a basketball or football squad. How it teaches team play and co-operation and the necessity of conforming to the rules of the game. But that is all a long story which we shall endeavor to treat later.

Sufficient for the present is the assertion that athletics and physical education go hand in hand with the study of mathematics, languages, English, history and all the other subjects that comprise a well balanced school curriculum.

They are essential features in the training of young men and women for life's work.

Opposition Just Personal

How personal differences hamper community progress.

Personal dislikes motivated by jealousy or envy, grudges prompted by a spirit of revenge, personal animosity created by snap or intolerant judgment—these are forces that stand in the way of co-operation, of united effort, of a spirit of achievement.

A good idea is advanced by one citizen. Another who dislikes him opposes the plan or lends it but little support without giving a moment's consideration to the merit of the plan. A program is launched. Men who do not enjoy unanimous popularity are placed upon committee jobs. Others refuse to extend their assistance.

What we urge, therefore, as a first step in the direction of community progress is more neighborliness, more toleration, less envy and less personal animosity. Have you ever paused to consider how erroneous these quick and ready judgments you so often form prove to be upon longer acquaintance? Have you ever paused to realize that you too make mistakes but should not be eternally blamed as a result.

In this connection we like to quote a statement attributed to Dr. Johnson: "Sir," said the famous man of letters, "Even God does not propose to judge man until the end of his days."

Your Own Home---An Investment Opportunity

It was once said that men will fight to protect a home but never to save a boarding house. Home ownership, in other words is essential to good citizenship, to patriotism and love of country.

But home ownership, in our estimation, goes far beyond such remote considerations. Home ownership here in Clanton may prove in the years to come to be one of the safest of all investments.

There have been times and periods, abnormal periods to speak correctly, when home ownership does not pay, when it is cheaper to rent than to own. But these periods usually come to an end. When the situation changes it is much more economical to own than to rent. Such a period is now approaching in the opinion of all observers.

Ownership of a home here in Clanton should prove to be a highly satisfactory investment. First, because Clanton is a substantial community with fine possibilities of future development. The home you build or buy today may grow in value as demand for additional housing here takes an upward turn. Second, because there is a personal satisfaction that cannot easily be measured in living in a home of your own.

The fluctuating value of our money is another consideration that urges home ownership as well as home modernization now. Some students of economic conditions fear inflation. Others expect a new standard of values. The National administration has endeavored to establish higher values and so the argument among inflationists and anti-inflationists involves only a matter of degree.

Thus it appears almost inevitable that the American dollar will buy less in building materials and in labor in the years ahead than it will secure today.

In the face of this trend wisdom advises some ownership and home modernization now.

Crop Insurance

Spring comes. There is moisture in the soil. The warming sun brings a cast of green to meadows and fields of winter grain. The farmer plows, discs and harrows the soil, then plants his seed. All of this represents a substantial investment in labor and actual cash.

Then the rainfall he hopefully expected fails to arrive. Day after day a blistering sun withers the growing crops. A scorching wind from the south turns fields once green and promising to a dismal brown. And the farmer stands in his doorway, helplessly watching a season's work disappear.

We sympathize with farmers at times like that. But we have always said: 'Well, too bad, there is nothing we can do about weather.'

Then comes another season of heavy production. Beautiful, thrifty fields make us feel good. The hay, the grain, the corn are all good—in fact we have a bumper crop. And day by day during that good crop year markets fall. The farmer has an abundance, but he cannot get his cost of production.

Good crops and bad crops alike spell disaster. Only the average crop promises a good return to the tiller of the soil. And in recent years, it seems, we go from one extreme to another and as the pendulum of production and high and low markets swings back and forth it creates a desperate problem for the farmer and the nation as a whole.

It seems now, however, that something will be done about all this. Crop insurance covering a few basic crops will be tried if the administration's program wins approval. If this operates with success then the program will be extended.

While it is early to say just how this program will operate, we welcome the experiment. Too long have we extended our sympathy to our farmer friends in times of distress due to forces beyond the control of man.

Crop insurance, as we understand it, is essentially a plan of storing the abundance of fat years for the benefit of lean years.

The fellow who is so satisfying to himself is usually disappointing to others.

Many a pastor who hears that the church is becoming more liberal wishes that the trend would reach the collection box.

We notice that even the idealist gets farther when he finds some materialist to back his ideas.

The one thing we can all succeed at, is finding explanations for our follies.

MORAL ECHOES

I visited a beautiful home that was located on a well cultivated farm. The owner carried me about over his place and showed me all the conveniences of his farm and then with pride he said: "Parson, I have worked mighty hard to get this place in this condition." A little later we went into his home and then I heard him growling at his wife like a hound dog. He snapped at his children like a cur and roared at his hired help like a lion. Before leaving that beautiful home and that well cultivated farm, I decided that the man had spent the most of his time and effort in building up his plantation and not enough effort in building up himself. Let me say unto you—outside buildings and conveniences are not half so important as inside beauty. This farmer would have been a great spirit if he had built himself on the inside with as much care as he had built his farm on the outside.

You howling critics, you church member so hard to please, take your stand in the barnyard and watch that Holstein as she feeds upon the hay that is measured out to her. She takes a mouthful of that clean rich hay and relishes it as only a hungry cow can do. Down goes her head for another mouthful but this time she finds a thistle in the hay. Just watch her as she noses the thistle to one side and then fills her mouth with the hay again. This is kept up all during the time of feeding and when she has devoured the hay, all the thistle in that bundle are still left before her. Unlike the cow, when you find something at church that you do not like you take to your heels and go away bellowing like you had been covered over with horns.

You stay away from the feeding place of your soul and all because you found a thistle in the feed. If some church critics would exercise Holstein sense, they would become Holsteins in their living. I was calling to see a family who lived a few hundred yards in a field. I hitched my horse to the side of a road and then walked up to the steps that would help me over the fence. Under the steps I saw a crippled dog and from his eye I saw he was begging me to help him over the fence. I said to him: "Old fellow, do you want to get over the fence?" and then he wagged his tail as if to say: "If you please, Sir." I then picked him up in my arms and lifted him over. When I put him down on the inside he wagged his tail again as if to say: "I thank you. It was so kind of you to help a crippled dog over the fence." As I walked on down the path to the home of my church member I felt good on the inside and all because I had helped a crippled dog over the stile. If we will keep our eyes open we will find something good that we can do on almost every mile of the journey of life.

While sitting in a room with a number of friends, one of them arose from his seat and went out at the door. His name was "Mr. Door Slammer" and true to his name he slammed the door behind him, casing all of us shiver with a nervous rigger. The sounds made by the slamming door indicated that one side of the house was falling in. A few moments another man arose and went out at the door and not a sound was heard. The world is full of Door Slammers. If you doubt what I say just try to take a nap after dinner where several people live. I takes but little effort and but little time to open a door quietly and close it noiselessly. For the life of me I can not understand why we slam doors, whoop and holler, so as to make life miserable for other folks. May I advise you to listen to yourself as you go in and out at doors and see how much unnecessary noise you make.

The faucet at the parsonage was leaking. I called Harry, the lad of our home, to look it over. He knew that it was leaking, but he glanced at me with that expression of childhood that says: "Dad, I do not know how to fix it and it is your job." He was about to run away when I told him that the fixing of that leaking faucet was our job together and for him to remain with me until it was done. I knew how to fix the faucet and could have done so without his assistance, but I knew that some day he would need to know how to do a simple job like that and that it was my business to teach him how to do it. Parents discredit themselves tremendously when they raise children to maturity without teaching them to do the simple things of home life. I have heard many a mother laugh with delight as she said: "Why my daughter does not know how to make a biscuit, tidy a bed or sweep a floor." Shame on that mother. It is just as much the business of parents to teach their children to do the necessary things about a place as it is their duty to see that they attend school.

After his store was robbed for the third time, Henry Shippen of St. Paul hung up a sign saying: "Burglars, Your Welcome Is Warm Out."

The request of Miss Jessie Siders of Spokane, Wash., was that her parrot be chloroformed and buried with her when she died.

Mrs. Jane Cotton, aged 100, of Newburg, E. G., has had her hair bobbed and says it makes her look "much younger."

GOV. BIBB GRAVES

W. W. RAMSEY

"Now the Governor has named Mr. Ramsey not only to act as a co-ordinator of interest throughout Alabama in the hospital but to head a committee of state officials who will call upon all members of the official family of Alabama to take an active part in making this living memorial a reality.

"Serving on Mr. Ramsey's state committee will be J. P. Shaffer, assistant comptroller; Arthur Heutiss, secretary of the State Board of Administration; Dave Birmingham, chief clerk of the State Convict Department; H. Rex Cogdell, auditor in the State Highway Department; and Pitt Tyson Maner, the governor's secretary.

"This committee will call on all state employees to cooperate with the thousands of other Southerners in making a contribution to the Roosevelt Memorial.

"A similar movement is already underway amongst organized labor in Alabama," Mr. Saliba pointed out. "The working men and women, the first to be thought of and served by President Roosevelt when he took office five years ago have been the first to answer the call for gifts to this hospital that will not only carry a message of gratitude to the President, but will serve the children of the state in their hour of need.

"As co-ordinating committee headed by State Federation of Labor President William Mitch and State Federation of Labor W. O. Hare are presenting the Roosevelt Memorial Hospital plan to every union local in Alabama. They will take any gifts to the fund and in turn make their organization's gift to the hospital.

"This plan is being followed through among the many groups who are anxious to have a part in honoring President Roosevelt.

"The hospital plan was conceived by a number of Tennessee Valley leaders, among whom is Congressman Joe Starnes of Guntersville, who thought that the Tennessee Valley should express its appreciation of the great work that the President has brought about there.

manded a share in the movement and then its appeal caught the attention of outstanding men and women in Mississippi and Tennessee.

"Medical societies, organized labor groups and federations, fraternal organizations and other bodies have given the movement their endorsement.

"County organizations have been set up throughout Alabama and are actively soliciting funds.

"These funds are held in trust in the Tennessee Valley Bank in the Muscle Shoals area where the hospital is to be built on LaGrange Mountain, historic site of one of the earliest educational institutions in the South.

"A board of trustees will have plans drawn, erect the hospital, equip it and then create a board of doctors who administer its service to the South.

"The Warm Springs Foundation has served the crippled children of Georgia well. Its fine program has received national recognition. But there is need for other hospitals.

"One fine organization is already serving the crippled children of Birmingham and vicinity under the sponsorship of the 365 Club there.

"We who are interested in the Roosevelt Memorial Hospital for crippled children believe that there is room for many institutions for the care of children.

"And for that reason we are asking the citizens of Alabama, Mississippi and Tennessee to join together in creating another great institution of this kind to serve the children that are still crying for assistance.

"The hospitals already in service, the doctors who have given their skill and time, have done a fine job, but there is still a need that must be answered.

"The Roosevelt Memorial Association has stood quietly by while the immediate needs of other causes were served. We began our movement two years ago and on every side we met encouragement and those who wanted to help.

"But the Red Cross appeal for flood funds was made, the Community Chests of the many cities of the three states interested had to make their call, the Christmas seal campaigns to relieve sufferers from the White Plague had to be put on. We stood by and gave every assistance to these worthwhile drives.

"But now we have an opportunity to bring about the realization of our own service to humanity—an enlarged program for the aid of crippled children.

"We are urging every citizen of Alabama, Mississippi and Tennessee to follow the fine example set by organized labor and state officials and employees in giving to this just and noble cause."

LESPEDEZA A GOOD CROP

1. Q. What is the value of lespedeza?
A. Lespedeza is the most generally grown pasture plant in Alabama. It is valuable for soil improvement particularly on valleys of North Alabama. On badly eroded Piedmont and mountain soils that have been abandoned for cultivation, lespedeza frequently comes in and if allowed to grow a few years restores the fertility of the soil. On fertilized moist soils lespedeza makes large yields of excellent hay.

2. Q. Where will lespedeza grow?
A. Lespedeza will grow on all of the soils of Alabama, except the lime soils of the Black Belt. On moderately fertile soils it makes good grazing but seldom grows late enough to be cut for hay. On poor sandy uplands it makes little growth and sometimes dies during dry weather in late spring or early winter.

3. Q. What fertilizers should be applied to lespedeza?
A. At least 600 pounds of basic slag should be applied broadcast when the soil is prepared. If lespedeza is occupying the land for several years, an application of 1,000 pounds per acre of basic slag would probably be profitable.

4. Q. When should lespedeza be sown?
A. Sow lespedeza the last of February or first of March.

5. Q. How is lespedeza grown for hay?
A. Sow lespedeza on moist fertile soils for hay. It will not grow tall enough for hay on poor soils. Cut for hay when the plants are forming seed. Sow 25 to 50 pounds of seed per acre on well prepared soil or it may be sown on land that was planted the previous fall to one of the small grains. Run a drag harrow over the land after sowing to cover the seeds lightly.

6. Q. How is lespedeza grown for pasture?
A. Sow 25 to 30 pounds of seed per acre on pasture land, disk to scarify the surface of the ground. It furnishes little grazing before the first of June, but after that date it gives abundant grazing. On upland soils the growth is usually small but produces good grazing during part of the season.

7. Q. Is it necessary to inoculate lespedeza?
A. Artificial inoculation of this crop is not necessary.

8. Q. What variety of lespedeza should be grown?
A. For pasture, grow common lespedeza. It always matures enough seed to reseed the land.

For hay, sow Kobe or Tennessee 76. When cut for hay Kobe does not usually reseed. If this variety is grown for hay it should be sown each year.

On moist fertile soil common lespedeza makes good yields of hay.

9. Q. How do you obtain seed?
A. Farmers interested in lespedeza are urged to grow a few acres of this crop for saving a home supply of seed. Seed has been scarce and expensive during the last few years. The seed are easily harvested and instructions for saving them will be furnished all farmers who desire to produce their own seed.

The Mt. Pleasant Home Demonstration Club met Tuesday, March 2, at the home of Mrs. W. H. Gillespie.

The meeting was called to order at 2 o'clock by the president, Mrs. Emmett Smith. A song, "The Little Brown Church In The Wildwood," was sung by the club members. This was followed by roll call and reading of the minutes by the secretary, Mrs. Stanley Kennedy. The attendance totalled 15 with 14 old members and one new member.

Bible reading, the 19th Psalm, was given by Mrs. Emmett Reid. This was followed a song, "Follow The Gleam."

Four very pretty poems were read: "The Trick," by Mrs. Emmett Smith; "A Wayfaring Song," by Mrs. J. B. Parrish, and "If All The Skies," by Mrs. Amos Smith. "No Time," by Mrs. W. H. Kennedy.

The game, "My Father Is A Merchant," created much laughter, and several rounds were played before everyone caught the trick.

Chairmen were elected for the three new objectives as follows: Farm Bureau Chairman, Mrs. Emmett Reid; Scholarship Chairman, Martha Kennedy; Citizenship Chairman, Mrs. Emmett Smith.

It was suggested and adopted that we have a birthday fund to make money for the treasury. Everyone agreed to cooperate 100 per cent to make this a success.

The next meeting is to be held at the home of Mrs. Amos Smith, Tuesday, April 6, 1937.

COWPEA IS WELL KNOWN CROP FOR STATE FARMERS

Auburn, Ala.—The cowpea is a well-known crop which Alabama farmers can use to advantage in 1937 for hay, soil-improvement, grazing, and for cash, advises J. C. Lowery, agronomist for the Alabama Extension Service.

Experiments show that turning under cowpea and soybean stubble after hay is cut increases the succeeding corn crop by four to five bushels per acre on thin land and eight to ten bushels on better soils. If the peas or beans are not cut for hay and are turned under the corn yields should be increased by eight to 20 bushels per acre, depending on the fertility of the soil—the richer the soil the greater the increase.

Cowpeas can be planted in narrow rows or broadcast from cotton planting to July. They need 400 to 600 pounds of basic slag or its equivalent. The Brahman and Iron are the best varieties for the section of the state

BACHELOR CAMPAIGNERS

TODAY'S accepted view of the way to ballyhoo the voter is, broadly speaking, to tell him first one of two things—either the candidate recommended was reared on the farm or he has sold newspapers.

When this has been established the campaign manager next begins to issue a swelling stream of pictures, mostly of the candidate in the bosom of his family. The larger the family, so much better the results, is the political reasoning.

With this in mind it is interesting to reflect that two of the 31 Presidents challenged the accepted political belief that it "couldn't be done," and campaigned for the office successfully while unmarried. They were James Buchanan, and Grover Cleveland.

Cleveland, after little more than a year in the White House, married Frances Polson there on June 2, 1886. Buchanan remained unmarried and was, therefore, the only bachelor President.

Most of our Presidents have performed nobly in lifting the average size of White House families. Theodore Roosevelt customarily is regarded as a pioneer among advocates of large families. The fact is that T. R. was something of a piker in this respect when his record is compared with that of his predecessors.

The Republican Roosevelt married twice, with one child from the first union and five from the second. But John Tyler, also twice married, was father to three sons and four daughters by his first wife and to five sons and two daughters by the second.

Tyler may have taken his cue from William H. Harrison, preceding White House resident, who sired six sons and four daughters. Six Presidents, including the immortal George Washington, were childless. But Rutherford B. Hayes with eight, and Thomas Jefferson and Zachary Taylor, with six children apiece, helped raise the average.

Youngest to marry was Andrew Johnson, a strapping eighteen on May 5, 1827 when he wed Eliza McCordie, the woman who later taught the Tennessee tailor to read.

The World's Most Luxurious Motor Car Is Major Bowes

All the comforts of home, all the conveniences of the best-appointed office and all the luxury of a maharaja's palace are combined in the new Chrysler Airflow recently delivered to Major Bowes, the famous impresario of the radio amateur hour. This is beyond doubt the world's most extraordinary automobile in the variety and magnificence of its fittings. Unlike a trailer, it doesn't include sleeping accommodations, but there is about everything that anyone could need during his waking hours.

The car is a very large one, with a chassis of 146 inches wheelbase and an eight-cylinder engine of 150 horsepower. It is approximately 20 feet in overall length. But size is only one of its many extraordinary features. Ingeniously fitted into the interior are all sorts of devices for serving food and beverages, for writing, for sleeping, for making a hasty toilet and even for shaving—yes, there is an electric razor, which is said to be a great comfort to the Major as in the midst of his many activities he is always well groomed.

The novel interior was designed by F.A. Selje, Chrysler's chief interior body designer. The mechanical work was done by the LeBaron Detroit Company, with John Votypka, chief body engineer in direct operation, under the supervision of Mr. Selje. It is the most elaborate job of refitting the interior of a car ever attempted and it has worked out to the complete satisfaction of the fastidious Major Bowes.

The exterior of the car is painted a Brewster green and the interior upholstery is two shades of green Laidlaw broadcloth named "Major Bowes light" and "Major Bowes dark" in honor of the owner. The front compartment is done in two shades of green leather to match. In fact the whole motif is green and gold, selected by Mr. Selje as appropriate to the early autumn of life because these are the predominant tints in the early autumn of the year. The back of the console and the garnish mouldings are done in Brewster green to match the body.

A glass partition separates the front and rear compartments. This partition is raised and lowered by an electric motor controlled by push buttons in the arm rest of the rear seat.

There is a Venetian blind in the rear window. The inside of the ventilating portion of the rear quarter windows is finished with an amber-colored mirror and the outside is painted to match the body. Bands of Drigold, a non-tarnishable metal resembling gold, are applied above the doors, following the side contours of the room and on the door panels. The door mouldings run into an ornamental design of hand-carved jade plaques depicting the muses of the radio. There are four of these jade plaques, two on each door.

The greatest ingenuity was used in designing the console that is placed on the division between front and rear compartments. At the top center of this console is an instrument grouping that includes barometer, clock, compass and altimeter. Above these are two humidors, a cigar lighter and ash tray all covered by ornamental metal covers. On each side of the instrument grouping are compartments holding bottles and glasses of very handsome design.

Directly below the instrument grouping is a collapsible serving table lined with amber mirrors and having indirect lighting. Here are found two siphon bottles and four modernistic decanters. All of these things, as well as the glass holders found in the other compartments, are of hand-fashioned Drigold with an engraved crest at the bottom of the serving compartment is a drawer constructed of stainless steel. In its center is a thermal compartment for the storage of ice cubes, cold beverages, etc. On either side of this is a compartment for fruit and other food.

There are two flush-type auxiliary seats, equipped with back and arm rest. These are mounted on swivels so that the passenger may face either the rear or side of the car. The footrest is hollow and serves as a storage place for a walking stick and umbrella.

The rear seat is constructed along the lines of a divan, padded to the shoulder line and with a luxuriously upholstered arm rest in normal position. In the right-hand arm rest are the rear compartment radio control, ash receiver and buttons for operating the partition between front and rear compartments. In the left-hand arm rest are a humidior and ash receiver. These arm rest compartments are protected by Dirigold covers. Rear cushions are of the box type construction on which is mounted three down-filled cushions. Behind the folding arm rest in the center is a writing desk with stationery and pen and pencil sets. This desk has a cover that folds down and may be used as a serving tray. Recessed in a compartment behind the arm rest are a thermos bottle and a toilet compartment with an electric razor and plug for attaching it, together with a brush and comb. All hardware in the rear compartment including brackets on auxiliary seats and serving compartment is of Dirigold.

Above the partition separating the two compartments is the radio loud speaker, a modernistic design in Drigold and silver.

Obviously with this magnificent vehicle at his command, the busy Major will not have to waste any time when traveling about New York or between the city and his country home in Ossing. As he has to make very minute count to keep abreast of his tremendous daily program, he was thinking of utility as well as luxury when he ordered this Chrysler Airflow.

That's What I Think

Saul M. Goldstein

A study of the known history of mankind reveals a very interesting process, step by step, from selfish, individual to civilized society. The earliest man probably hunted for his own needs, satisfied them, and lived and died within that narrow circle. As family groups developed, and as protection from common dangers became necessary, certain action had to be taken by a group in behalf of the group. That, in simplest terms, is the foundation of our present society. Naturally, when such steps were found necessary, the individual man had to make certain sacrifices for the common weal. No longer was he entirely and strictly his own boss: he could be called on at any time, from his daily routine of making and spending a living, to fight against a common enemy; he could be drafted for the hunt, to provide food for other mouths than his; he could be commandeered to construct a fortress to protect his group. Our simplest participation in social living then is to give of our time and efforts to promote the common welfare of a group to which we belong.

As families grew into tribes, tribes into states, states into nations, and nations into empires, life on the whole became more complicated. The business of making and spending a living was no longer a matter of hunting for one's own needs and satisfying them; it developed into an involved process which inaugurated simple barter, then trade, with mediums of exchange, such as money, and eventually our complicated system of present-day economics.

But with all this development, there were still certain group needs which had to be satisfied. Protection against common foes was and is still a necessary item in our daily lives; not only the invading enemy from the outside, but the gnawing enemy on the inside—the thief, the murderer, the cheat, Armies, navies, police forces developed. Individuals could not longer give of their time and energy, so they gave of their money to provide for the upkeep of individuals who could give of their time and energy.

It may come up as something of a surprise, but that is taxation. When you either cannot or will not answer to every call which society will make on you for the good of society, you must, as a member of society, provide someone to answer for you: you must pay him; and your share of his pay is your tax. Multiply that by the number of things which society does for the individual and your net result is modern taxes.

Gradually, in its growth, society has found more and more things which it could and should do for the individual, and in doing them it increased the rate of taxation just that much. Fighting, hunting, building were the foundation stones; courts of justice, schools of education, provision for the needy, and the physically helpless, all are functions which society has little by little assumed as necessary items.

If, therefore, you are inclined to grumble about taxes, cheer up, for the worst is yet to come; the story is not yet told. Our development has been one of progress, and that progress, as I have outlined above, has been one of increasing assumption by society of individual needs. As we go further along the pathway of progress, there will be more such assumptions, and naturally and consequently more and higher taxes. You can draw any conclusion you want to from that fact; you might even raise your hands in horror, and point out that at that rate, we will eventually come to a stage where society will tax a man 100 per cent of all he earns and provide him with 100 per cent of all he needs; or you might conclude that when the burden of taxation becomes too high, as it did in France and Russia during the 19th century, the people will rise in revolt, destroy what society is attempting to do for them, and start all over again from scratch. Whatever your conclusion may be, you cannot overlook this item: it is a fact, not an interpretation nor an opinion, but a cold, hard fact, that society is gradually providing more things for the individual; and it is another cold hard fact that it is gradually taking more from him in the form of taxes to pay for those things.

Personally, I think that a government well-operated, and constantly under the vigilant eyes of the governed can do a better job of providing for mankind in the mass than mankind as an individual can do. Some individuals might do a better job, but there would be so many more that would both the whole proposition, that my opinion still stands at that point, and for that reason, I don't protest too strongly.

old. The father, Ed Lee, wrote on the birth certificate that he was born in Kentucky in 1836.

DEMONSTRATIONS

—those amazing exhibitions of hysterical enthusiasm, usually manufactured rather than spontaneous—had their origin in the Republican convention of 1860 in Chicago.

The two leading candidates were William H. Seward of New York and Abraham Lincoln of Illinois. The New York delegation brought along a prize fighter named Tom Hyer and a band which marched about the streets playing martial music.

To match these noise-makers, supporters of "Old Abe" hired a Chicagoan "whose shout could be heard above the most violent tempest on Lake Michigan" and a leather-junged Dr. Ames, who, though a Democrat, also consented to whoop it up for Lincoln. But the real "blow-off" came when Lincoln was nominated on the fourth ballot.

As eye-witness thus described the scene as follows: "The immense multitude rose, and gave round after round of applause; ten thousand voices swelled into a roar so deafening that, for several minutes, every attempt to restore order was hopelessly vain.

A man appeared in the hall bringing a large painting of Mr. Lincoln. The cannon sent forth roar after roar in quick succession. Delegates tore up the sticks and boards bearing the names of several states, and waved them aloft over their heads, and the vast multitude before the platform were waving hats and handkerchiefs.

Another chapter in convention "demonstrations" was added by the Republican convention, also in Chicago, in 1896. Roscoe Conkling of New York led the delegates who had determined to nominate Grant for a third term. At the first mention of Grant's name, a demonstration began which lasted nearly half an hour. Conkling, noted for his "aristocratic coldness," unbent enough to stimulate enthusiasm in the galleries and among the delegates by waving his handkerchief. Then Robert G. Ingersoll started wave after wave of frantic cheering when he grabbed a woman's red shawl and waved it aloft.

Men tore off their coats and used them for handkerchiefs. The delegates seized the standards of their states and started a parade around the hall—thus starting a custom which has been perpetuated to this day.

STATE FARMERS GETTING BETTER PLANTING SEED

Montgomery, Ala.—Because of the effective seed testing work of the State Department of Agriculture, Alabama farmers are receiving much better planting seed this spring than they received a few years ago, reports R. J. Goode, state commissioner of agriculture.

"Alabama ranks second to no state in the equipment as to effectiveness in seed testing and seed control work," states L. N. Allen, state seed analyst, in calling attention to the fact that the seed are tested in the laboratory, in the greenhouse, and on the farm. This is done to assure farmers good planting seed.

"The effectiveness of the Alabama Seed Enforcement work is so well known throughout the United States that seed salesmen often make sales talk of the fact that they can ship seed into Alabama without violating the Alabama Seed Law," says Mr. Allen.

ROTTEN SWEET POTATOES ARE HARMFUL TO LIVESTOCK

Auburn, Ala.—Sweet potatoes make good livestock feed but farmers should be careful not to feed their livestock rotten or moulded potatoes.

"During this period of the year many Alabama farmers have occasion to dispose of old sweet potato residues," says H. W. Nixon, state toxicologist. "Many of these potatoes are rotten or moulded and capable of producing death to livestock. Last winter a large number of valuable cattle died in the state after being fed old, rotten potatoes."

HIGHWAY PATROL IS ORDERED TO ARREST ALL OFFENDERS

New Law Regarding Driving While Under The Influence Of Liquor Will Be Strictly Enforced Say State Officials

Pointing out that for months officers of his department have been making an ever increasing number of arrests for the offense of driving while intoxicated, Chief Walter K. McAdory of the State Highway Patrol, announced yesterday that he intends to enforce "impartially and as rigidly as all the means at my command can accomplish, 24 hours a day every day," the new law approved by Gov. Graves last Wednesday, banning drunken drivers from Alabama's highways.

During the calendar year 1936, according to figures recently made public by Mr. McAdory, collisions and smashups for which drunken drivers were responsible, caused the deaths of 67 persons and the injury of 207 others. Last month, Highway Patrol officers made 128 arrests for the offense of driving while intoxicated—more by a wide margin than were made for the same offense during January. With the heavy penalties provided and the forfeiture of driver's license made mandatory under the new statute, for this violation of the law, it is his intention to see to it, the Highway Patrol chief said, that the decrease of drunken drivers shall begin immediately and continue to the vanishing point as rapidly as he can accomplish that objective.

The new law makes it unlawful for any person, whether licensed or not, who is an habitual user of narcotic drugs, or any person who is intoxicated by liquor or narcotic drugs, to drive any motor vehicle on any highway in Alabama. On their conviction of violation of the law, all such offenders are to be punished by imprisonment in the county or city jail for not more than one year, or by a fine of not less than $100 nor more than $1,000 or both in the discretion of the court trying the case.

As additional punishment, the new law further provides, the court shall have exclusive authority to prohibit "and must prohibit" the person so convicted from driving any motor vehicle on the highways of the State for a period not to exceed one year. On a second or subsequent conviction he must be punished by imprisonment at hard labor for not more than one year or, in the discretion of the court, be required to pay a fine of not less than $100 nor more than $1,000 or both, and in addition, the court trying the case shall have exclusive authority as added punishment, to prohibit the person convicted from driving any motor vehicle on the highways of the State for a period of not less than 30 days nor more than one year.

"The drunken driver is one of the worst and most dangerous menaces to life and property that exists," Chief

Verbena vs. Clanton

Last Wednesday night, March 3rd, the Verbena first and second teams came to Clanton and defeated both teams in two very exciting games. Both games were very exciting and showed great sportsmanship of the four teams. The final score of the second team was 23-21.

Senior Two Play

If you want to see one of the best plays you have ever seen you should come to the auditorium of the High School on Friday night, March 26, and see "Murdered Alive," a mystery comedy in three acts. This play is being put on by the Senior II Class and sponsored by Miss Simpson. Everyone is cordially invited to see this play.

The Tournament

Last Friday at ten o'clock the basketball boys went to Selma to enter the tournament. In drawing for the games they were to play, they drew Ft. Deposit first, one of the best high school teams of the state. Although they drew a fast team they played a fast game and won. The boys took fourth place in the tournament. They were able to do this because they cooperated with each other and demonstrated some splendid pass work. There were eighteen other strong teams they had to play against and it is a good team that can win fourth place in a tournament with so many good teams.

Faculty vs. Girls

The faculty ladies are scheduled to play the girls in basketball Friday night, March 12. This promises to be a real interesting game and everyone is invited to be present and lend their support.

School Talent

There was some splendid talent shown in rendering the program last Friday night. Everyone seemed to enjoy it very much. There was much talent shown in every kind of act being rendered from imitations to pleasing orchestra music and good songs. All this was done by the school students and other amateurs, but it sounded like professionals at work. Those winning prizes in the contest were: First prize, $5—Pearl Henley, a reading.

Second prize, $3.50—Helen Hayes, a song and dance.

Third prize, $2.00—Ella Ruth Walton, a reading.

Those deserving honorable mention were: Bill Hodges, imitations; Betty Hollis, tap dance; Myrtis Baker, song. The Verbena High School is going to have an amateur night next Friday night, March 12. If you wish to enter write Hollis Hiten, Verbena High School.

The Beta Club News

The Beta Club is a new thing in this school, however, since it got its start it has been going fine. In order to belong to this club a person must be a student of high standing, and keep his dues paid. The club has been doing some splendid work and we expect to hear from them before long. We expect them to put on a program in assembly.

Hints for Homemakers

By Jane Rogers

HERE is an idea that comes directly from one of the most famous kitchens in New York: Use ½ canned Hawaiian pineapple juice and ½ water whenever you bake meat. This gives it a new and different keenness of flavor. Try it the next time you roast meat.

Everyone who revels in an evening in the kitchen spent in candy making will want this recipe for Brazil nut fudge to add to her file of special candy recipes. Cut 2 ounces of chocolate into five or six pieces and put with ½ cup cold water into a heavy saucepan. Stir over a low fire until the chocolate is melted. Stir in 2 cups granulated sugar and add ¼ cup milk. Stir over the fire until the sugar is dissolved. Boil over a medium flame until the thermometer reads 225° F. or until a soft ball will form when a little of the candy is dropped into cold water. Place pan in cold water and cool to 110° F. or until lukewarm. Add 1 cup ground Brazil nuts and stir until mixture begins to thicken and loses its shine. Pour into a wet pan upon which 1 cup of cut Brazil nuts have been sprinkled. Cool and cut into squares.

Determine Fertilizer Practice By Cost

In the selection of fertilizers for cotton farmers are faced with the problem of determining what analysis and methods of fertilization will give them the desired amount of plant food at the lowest cost.

Several fertilizer practices are giving satisfactory yields of cotton although the cost of the plant food in each varies to some extent.

The three principal methods of supplying plant food to cotton are (1) all at planting; (2) using a mixture low in nitrogen and high in potash, and adding a nitrogen side application; and (3) a mixture with a medium amount of nitrogen and potash and making a nitrogen-potash side dressing.

In using either method it is important that a least 36 pounds of nitrogen, 48 pounds of phosphorus and 24 pounds of potash per acre be provided for.

The efficiency of side applications of potash or combinations of potash and nitrogen has long been established by experiments and farm practice. Extra potash used alone or with nitrogen as a side dresser will guard against rust, increase growth and fruiting, and yields.

At current fertilizer quotations the average amount of potash used in mixtures can be doubled for the value of approximately four pounds of lint cotton when used at the rate of 400 pounds per acre.

Brief Farm News

The Alabama Kiwanis District Agricultural Committee has recommended to all clubs in the state that they "promote a spirit of mutual understanding between the farmer and the city man" during 1937. The committee is composed of F.W. Burns, chairman, Auburn; C.E. Stapp, Selma; H.J. Carter, Troy; Earl Kelley, Carbon Hill; and J.B. McClure, Florence.

The civic clubs of Anniston, through the Inter-Club Council and Chamber of Commerce, are cooperating in sponsoring a cotton improvement program in Calhoun County.

Evidence pointing to continued improvement in the purchasing power of consumers indicates a generally favorable domestic demand situation for farm products.

Further improvement in world mill activities and cotton consumption, topping the high levels of recent months, is reported by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

Obituaries

In memory of our dear mother and grandmother, Mrs. B.A. Mull, who departed this life January 24, 1936, at the age of 79, after a long period of suffering.

Grandmother, oh, how miss you. Those cheerful loving words you was always give, but we know God in His wisdom and love saw fit to remove from our earthly home to His one. Your going from us has deep grief to our hearts and loneliness and sadness which can relieve.

There is a new made moon, the hill.

Where the white floral wilted still,

The last farewell is said, the chill.

And now you understand, be home without your presence.

Can roses smell as sweet as fair?

Can good or joy be mine to share?

But now, you understand, it has been solved.

The dream made plain, That leads to life in God's more.

Al this you understand.

Granddaughter, Mrs. A.O. Mull

FARLEY LAUDS ROOSEVELT IN GADSDEN TALK

Declares Citizenry Will Support President
In Anything

Gadsden, Ala., March 8.—James A. Farley, postmaster general and Democratic national chairman, forecast "the people will support the President in any program he undertakes" in an address here today to Alabama Democrats at a "victory luncheon."

Farley made no specific mention of the President's Supreme Court proposal, or of other pending matters. However, he said he expected to discuss the court proposal in an address tomorrow at Chapel Hill, N.C.

The postmaster general came here to dedicate Gadsden's new $200,000 postoffice addition.

"Within 48 hours after Franklin D.
Roosevelt's inauguration in 1933, a critical situation in the United States had been checked," he said, "and within 100 days more beneficial legislation had been adopted than in any similar period in the country's history."

"Further legislation proposed by the President will have the support of the great majority of the people if we may judge by the last election."

Gov. Graves and Mrs. Graves, and hundreds of leading party members attended the luncheon.

Farley named Senators Black and Bankhead and Speaker Bankhead as "foremost members" of Congress, and said Black's investigations brought "wholesome reforms" in ocean and air mail subsidies.

Ed Mullins, of the firm of J. R. Mullins & Sons, returned last Friday from relatives.

STATE-WIDE CAMPAIGN WILL ACQUAINT CITIZENS WITH STATE

Alabamians To Learn Of Products Of Their State

Montgomery, Ala., Feb. 12.—Plans for a long-range campaign to acquaint Alabamians with the wide variety of products produced by workers of the State through a series of educational industrial exhibits were announced today by Robert R. Moore, State Commissioner of Labor.

He said his Department immediately would start collecting and classifying the hundreds of miscellaneous manufactured products of the State into a series of permanent exhibits to be held at the State Department of Labor, but displayed in such fashion that can be transported for the use of schools and clubs over the State.

Each exhibit, he said, would contain not only samples of each product, but photographs of manufacturing machines and processes, with detailed explanations of the way they are made. "By showing the actual samples of products, together with explanations and photographs," he said, "we believe the real story of the worth of working men and women to the State's welfare can be most clearly and forcibly shown."

"The exhibits would be of inestimable educational value, particularly to school children, and we feel will fill a long-felt need."

The industrial exhibits, Mr. Moore said, would be part of the Department of Labor's contribution to the present state-wide campaign to bring new industries to the State, and to bring the State's present industries to the attention of the people of the State along with the skill and craftsmanship of its workers.

He asked the cooperation of manufacturers of the State in sending to the Labor Department small samples of their manufactured products, together with pictures, if possible, and descriptions of the steps or processes involved in the making of the articles. Exhibits will include everything possible, from various types of cloth, braid, rope, steel, pipe, paper, coal, boxes, garments, and so on down the long list of Alabama products.

"Full credit will be given to the source of each sample used," Mr. Moore said.

Hints for Homemakers By Jane Rogers

WE'RE sure you've noticed that the most delicious food served on chipped china reposing on a slightly grubby tablecloth arrests your appetite as nothing else will! You're too fastidious a woman to make these mistakes—but your entire dining room should match the sparkle of your china, your linens, your glassware.

For this reason your window shades should not far on your eyesight or that of your guests! Shades should be clean and fresh as a spring daisy! The simplest way to achieve this is to hang good cloth shades at your windows. You can order them in tones to match your spring draperies, and blend in with your curtains.

Whatever color you choose, see to it that you get first quality cloth shades. Then you won't have to worry about April showers—for these shades won't crinkle. You can forget about dust—for good shades help to keep out dust. You can be assured that they're hung on seasoned wood rollers. And if all this isn't enough, you can stop worrying about "pin holes." Cloth shades keep their fine appearance.

Thermon Milford To Represent County In District Oratorical Contest Next Month

On Friday morning, March 12, in the Isabella High School auditorium, two schools competing in the Birmingham News-Age-Herald oratorical contest decided upon the winner to represent this county in the Congressional District. Stanton and Isabella were the only schools in the county participating in the contest.

Isabella's representative, Thermon Milford, spoke on "Jefferson Versus Hamilton." On this subject, a talk descriptive in detail, was given. Milford spoke for approximately six minutes. He had an interesting manner and gave the audience a polite smile when he receded from the stage.

Stanton's representative, William Riddick, had as his subject, "Jefferson and Hamilton As Citizens." His oration was brief but descriptive, giving a narrative of the statesmen's lives. He did well as a young speaker and has a future that is promising if he will apply himself.

The judges, obtained from a different section of the county, decided on Thermon Milford of Isabella as the winner. He will next enter the Congressional District Contest to be held early in April.

Mf. and Mrs. Herman Harris, of Birmingham, spent the past week end here as guests of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Grady Harris.

Twenty-four counties in Alabama voted "yes" on the question and will now have alcoholic beverages sold legally by state-owned and controlled stores, while beer will be sold almost everywhere in those counties.

According to the Beverage Control Act which repealed the age-old Prohibition law in Alabama, citizens of Chilton County and other supposedly "dry" counties may legally possess whiskey, wines and beer, provided these were purchased in "wet" counties and bear the state tax stamp. However, these citizens will not be allowed to sell these beverages in Chilton County. No beer, wine or whiskey will be sold here, although it can be legally purchased in the nearby counties of Jefferson, Montgomery and Dallas and brought into this county without violating the law as soon as the Governor officially proclaims results of the election.

Is The Customer Right?

"The customer is always right," said some merchant prince, we believe it was John Wanamaker to be exact. And since that time merchants large and small have followed this rule. But alas the customer is not always right by any means. On the basis of averages he is quite apt to be wrong, and the cost of maintaining the policy which many customers abuse falls as a substantial burden on the buying public.

In cities the evil is pronounced. People buy garments on approval, wear them to some special social function, and then return them the day afterward as unsuitable. The store accepts the return, cleans and repairs the garment, and the cost thereof must be allocated to the general cost of doing business and making the consuming public pay the bill.

Merchants of Clanton are not complaining about the situation. They have accepted the policy for years and have long ago adopted the policy that the customer is right. But we abuse that have crept into customer-merchandise that the buying public consider the merchant relations as a result. When you return some garment after subjecting it to much use, when you have dealt unfairly with one of your local merchants, stop for a moment and think it over. These practices are costing you money, and this cost can be eliminated or reduced only by realizing that you too owe the merchant a square deal.

There are two sides in every business transaction and it is unreasonable and illogical to believe that you are always and inevitably in the right.

Rural Fire Protection

A lurid glare dances vividly along the horizon against the background of a midnight sky. "Another farm fire," we muse as we watch the spectacle from a distance. Then we look for later reports which may tell of a desperate struggle to save livestock while the flames roared and leaped from building to building, jeopardizing or destroying the results of the work of years. And also the loss was only partially covered by insurance.

Fire is a menace on the farm, a threat far greater than it can be here in Chilton County. Up to the past few years, the average farmer was almost helpless when flames began to roll from a loft of hay or from a stable where a lantern had been accidentally overturned.

Fortunately, fire on the farm today is not quite the menace it once was. There is some slight chance to control the flames if the nearby village or city department will respond in time. Good roads, motorized fire fighting equipment, and now the organization of rural fire departments all play a vital part in reducing the danger and hazard of fire on the farm.

In spite of all which can be done, of course, the fire hazard on the farm will continue to be serious. In spite of organized effort, a considerable amount of time is required to get fire fighters to the scene of the disaster. But the organization of rural fire fighting departments, through the co-operation of nearby cities and villages is of vast importance and value to the average farmer. As this system is improved in equipment and organization, the time may come when the average farmer will enjoy the same fire protection that we here in Clanton today enjoy. This will mean safety for the family. It will mean less hazard of losing everything when the fire breaks out. It will make it possible to secure full and adequate insurance protection at reasonable cost.

We welcome the advent of the rural fire department properly equipped and ready to respond to calls from the farm. May the movement continue to expand.

All Should Pay

While you, Mr. Average Citizen, are struggling with your income tax blank and wondering how to pay the assessment, it may be scant satisfaction to know that there is a big class of salaried workers who pay no tax. While you are wondering how to handle exemptions, whether the business loss is deductible, how your inventory happened to show such an increase, consider this: Several justices in one state receiving salaries of from $15,000 to $22,000 make no return nor pay no tax. As state employees they are exempt from Federal income tax. As constitutional state officers they are exempt from the state tax.

Then take the thousands, yes millions, of state, county and municipal employees. Some earn too little to pay a tax, but others receive substantial salaries. They pay no Federal income tax. Then there are Federal office holders who pay no state income tax.

In the day of expanding government with public payrolls constantly on the increase, a vast amount of wealth escapes all taxation. The family man earning less than $2,500, of course, would pay no tax anyway. Neither would the small salaried individuals in any group. They would merely file returns. They might be assessed a few dollars. But the argument that they should not be taxed because they earn so little, is hardly short of the absurd. They earn what they earn, and if it falls within the taxable brackets, they should pay just as everyone else pays.

Balancing the budget, getting funds to maintain a serious problem. If we would give some thought to those who pay no taxes for reasons which are hard to accept, substantial new tax sources would be opened.

We believe that every citizen should pay his just share of the cost of government.

Easter Finery Is Here

Soon, very soon indeed, Easter will arrive, ushering in the new spring season of flowers, of sunshine, of newly made gardens, of freshly painted homes, and above all of the latest styles. The Easter parade here in Clanton may not be the spectacular show it is along Fifth Avenue or Boul Mich, but still the ladies of our community will make a delightful impression on this occasion nevertheless.

It detracts nothing from the religious or spiritual significance of the occasion for women to make the day one of color and beauty. Even though the bills may come high, we question whether it would be advisable to detract one bit from the pleasant spirited gayety of the time honored custom.

And we are happy to note, in this connection, that the stores of Clanton have made adequate and suitable preparation for the Easter trade. In the display cases and racks of the modern mercantile establishments of Clanton are to be found the latest styles, and all offered at prices which compare well with those of outside competitors.

We advise, therefore, that you plan your Easter shopping now, and pay careful attention to what local merchants have to offer. You can get it here in Clanton and save money at the same time.

Advertising Serves The Consumer

Advertising tells you where you can shop and buy to greatest advantage. It tells you which merchant is offering the best value in the merchandise you desire.

Advertising tells you where you can buy the garment of late style. It tells you about new goods received by the merchants of the community. It tells what the latest designs and models are like.

In other words advertising is news, news of vital importance to the thrifty shopper. More than it provides news of late developments in the business life of the community. New equipment, improved facilities to provide service, new policies—these are among the subjects of ads which provide interesting and valuable reading matter.

In its broad and general influence advertising has been a vital factor in increasing the standard of living. Through advertising we are available.

In its economic influence the consumer has been the beneficiary. Through the use of advertising large scale industry has developed. Large scale industry is efficient, striving generally to open new markets by reducing costs and prices.

For these reasons, and many more we might cite, we urge our readers to pay careful attention to the advertisements in the Chilton County News. They will keep you posted on what is happening in both local and national business circles.

MORALECHOES

D. W. Haskew

On a mission charge the bully of a certain community was converted and soon thereafter he was asked to pass the collection plate for the morning offering. With a degree of solemnity and self importance because of this act of recognition, and realizing too, that he was expected to bring in the cash, the new convert started down the aisle of the church showing the plate under every nose. About the middle of the house he held the plate before a former enemy and the man shook his head. No sooner done than the preacher saw the plate lifted high into the air and it was splintered over the head of the one refusing to give. The nickels and pennies scattered everywhere and the dejected bully turned to the preacher saying, "I beg your pardon parson, it has always been my duty to show a fellow what to do when he refused and for a moment I forgot I was a Christian. Doubtless that man would have made a good steward, Deacon, or Elder. I have sometimes wondered if collectors have not felt like splintering the collection plate over the head of some folks whom they refuse to give."

A country woman came to the village doctor for a plaster to be put over an abscess that had formed on her arm. The doctor contended that she could have no plaster for that would heal over the infected part and drive the poison into her system. "My good woman" said he, "That abscess must be cut out of your heart and you carry with you the infection that will kill you spiritually. To carry hatred in the heart is like carrying a snake in the bosom."

There was an awful train wreck. Many were killed outright and many were groaning under the wreckage. The few who were unhurt were working hard to rescue and care for the suffering. In the midst of all of this action and anxiety a woman was sitting by her suitcase that was crushed and she was here efforts to get over and over to herself, "Oh my sixteen dollar pair of shoes." They had been crushed beyond recognition and this woman was concerned about them in an hour like this. All about her were dying men and women and yet with her there was nothing of more importance than her torn pair of shoes. How often do we find people who should know something about the value of time and service and yet they are crying out, "Oh my sixteen dollar pair of shoes." We are in a world, face to face with the big issues of life, and we should give of our time and effort to the things that are worth while.

One day I was nailing a plank that was sprung at one end and every time I would drive the nail in, the spring in the plank would pull it out. After much worry I saw that I must hold the plank in position after driving the nail until I could clinch it in the brace. When I had done this the spring in the plank did not pull it out. Then I drove in more nails and clinched them and the plank was secure. How about those new year resolutions? You drove it in but your nature was springy. No sooner were they made than you found them slipping out. You resolved to attend Sunday School and church, but already the spring in your nature has caused that resolution to slip. The trouble is in you and not in your resolutions. If you will sit on yourself and clinch your resolution with your will power, you can live up to what you resolve. When you make a resolution clinch it and then drive in more self control and you will be safe.

While riding along the highway I glanced down at the needle that I saw to do with my gas supply and I saw that it was time to refill. Not many yards away there was a filling station and I turned in. On stopping my car I glanced up at the tank and saw a placard that read, "Tank Empty." There I was needing gas and I was standing in position to have my needs supplied, but I was face to face with an empty tank. Many a time on the highway of life have I felt the need of what my fellowman could do for me, and I have inched up to them for help. Thanks to many along the way, they have helped me wonderfully, but occasionally I have inched up to those who had a sign to be discovered. "The tank is empty." An empty tank is rather a harmless thing, but my friends do not forget that it is about as helpless as its harmless. You may be harmless by the roadside of life, but if you do not carry the supplies of life within you do not help the world on to better living.

Crotalaria Valuable Summer Legume Crop
Crotalaria is a valuable summer legume crop for Alabama farmers to use in improving their soil, advises J. C. Lowery, extension agronomist.
Corn following crotalaria produced 40 bushels per acre on the Tennessee Valley Sub-station compared with only 12 bushels per acre of similar land with no legumes. On the Sand Mountain Sub-station the yield was 44 bushels per acre following crotalaria compared with only six bushels on similar land with no legumes.
Early Spectabilis is the most commonly grown crotalaria in most sections of the state. Late Spectabilis, however, is grown in the extreme southern part of the state. It can be planted in alternate rows with corn at corn planting time or broadcast in the corn at laying-by time. Phosphate is probably the best fertilizer to use.

Chapel Visitor
Monday morning we had the Rev. Truett, pastor of the Methodist Church present to give a very interesting talk on "Success Of The School Boy Or Girl." In his talk he stressed character, obedience and honesty. We enjoyed his talk very much and invite him to visit us anytime he wishes.
Short Vacation
School was in session only three days this week owing to the Alabama Educational Association meet being held in Birmingham Thursday and Friday. But, alas! boys, a two-day fishing trip will just get us in the mood to take a long vacation.
School Sick List
We are sorry to hear that Mrs. Coplin is on the sick list this week. There are several students absent due to sickness. We hope that the flu and colds will soon be over and school attendance will be better.
Dr. Kimmey Visits
Dr. Kimmey came to the school last Friday and gave a very interesting talk on the health of the boys. He gave out some literature. He also agreed to come back some other time and give us another talk. We enjoyed his talk very much.
Rehearsals Continue For "Murdered Alive"
Members of the cast of the Senior II class play, "Murdered Alive," continue rehearsals and will present their play March 26, in the High School auditorium.
All sorts of thrills, excitement, mystery and comedy abound in "Murdered Alive." Action Chance, the detective, disappears right in the midst of his investigation of the murder; the inmates of Hillcrest receive threatening letters warning them that they are about to be murdered alive; clocks strike; doorbell and telephone ring; lights go out and many other strange things happen. However, they are all fully explained before the curtain falls at the end of act III.
Members of the cast are:
Tillie Meek, the maid—Geraldine Hollis.
Action Chance, the correspondence school detective—Marshall Lee Ware.
Mrs. Libby Ryder—Anne McCrary.
Arden Ryder, a charming young girl—Dewey Rene Eubanks.
Warner Melton, in love with Arden—Morris Johnson.
Iris Alda, who gets messages from the spirit world—Elizabeth Hogan.
Luverne Speed—Mildred Popwell.
Stella Bachus, who rules the roost—Nell Jones.
Frank Bachus, her weaker half—Guy Alfred.
Otis Marvin, the lawyer—Guy McKee.

STARTENA makes

Come in and See These Startena-Fed Chicks!

AT TIME you're over our way, drop in and see the Startena chicks being grown in our store. Take time while you're in here to compare the weight of these Startena chicks with the United States Government Standard weight for baby chicks. What a difference there is! Unless you see it with your own eyes you can't believe it.
It does more than the average poultryman expects of a feed. Startena brings out the best that breeding has put in a bird... builds out birds in the way no ordinary chick feed possibly do.
Feed with Pur-a-tene, a balanced, blended mixture of many different elements. Startena is to bring out the best in a chick.
Come in and see these chicks, then order your supply of Purina Startena!

Library News
Recently we received a shipment of new books for our library. Among these are books of travel, adventure, fiction, biography and reference.
THE BOOK
By Emily Dickinson
There is no frigate like a book
To take us leagues away,
Nor any couriers like a page
Of prancing poetry.
This traverse may the poorest take Without oppress of toll;
How fragrant is the chariot
That bears a human soul!
Most of the students agree with Emily Dickinson about books. They are reading much more than they did. An average of sixty books are checked out every day.
Girls Win
The teachers may rule in school but it is no reason they should rule on the basketball court. The teachers and girls played a very exciting game here Friday night. Although the teachers played a good, fast game of excitement, thrills and spills, the girls won by a score of 19-3. The outstanding players for the girls were Thelma Arant and Clarice Thornton. Most outstanding players for the teachers were Grace Plyler and all the teachers. Evidently the teachers liked to fall on the court better than run on it as they stayed on the ground a good bit of the time. If ever you hear of the faculty playing the girls come and we promise you that you will enjoy yourself thoroughly.
Thorby vs. Clanton
The C.C.H.S. boys played a very fast and exciting game. The game was a grudge game and this may account for it being so rough. Buckey Armstrong and Morris Woodfin played a very good game. Buckey shot four-point shots and the final score was 30-23 in favor of Clanton. This game ended the season for both first and second teams. We have prospects for a great team next year as no one of the team graduates this year.
Baseball!
Mr. Varnell announced in chapel Friday that if nothing happens we will buy new material for baseball. The boys have started practicing and some good material is on the line this year.

Fruits Need Spraying With Summer Sprays
Auburn, Ala.—Freezing weather during February made it most important for Alabama farmers to use summer sprays in carrying to maturity the fruits which were not killed, advises Prof. L. M. Ware, head of the horticulture and forestry department of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute.
"Effective control of diseases and insects requires that the proper materials be used at the proper time and that the spraying be done thoroughly," he says in advising that "the season for summer sprays is here again."
Plums and early maturing varieties of peaches usually require three applications of sprays, while late-maturing peach varieties require four applications, he states. The first peach spray should be applied when 2-3 of the petals are off and the second when 3-4 of the "shucks" have fallen from the fruit. These first two applications should contain 1 pound of arsenate of lead and 4 pounds of hydrated lime for each 50 gallons of spray.
The third summer spray, applied two weeks after the second spray, should contain 4 to 6 pounds of wettable sulphur per 50 gallons of spray or the standard self-boiled lime sulphur mixture. Several commercial brands of wettable sulphur are now sold. They require no preparation and are easily mixed.
The fourth summer spray, applied 1 month before the fruit ripens, should contain in 50 gallons of spray 1 pound of arsenate of lead, 4 pounds of hydrated lime, and 4 to 6 pounds of wettable sulphur. For varieties ripening before the Carman, the third spray should be omitted and the fourth spray substituted.
"The difference between high society and bum pie," say "is this. In society it's the upper crust that is tough."

COTTON NOW AT HIGHEST LEVELS IN SEVEN YEARS

New Orleans Prices At 14.20; First Time Since 1930

New Orleans, March 14.—New high levels to seven years were reached by cotton prices last week.

Not since 1930 had futures reached the 14.20 cents a pound level touched by March at New Orleans on Saturday and crossed earlier in the week on the New York market.

While the week's aggregate price advance was not as sharp as in the preceding week, 75 cents to $2 a bale was added to the value of cotton futures. The larger gains were scored by the old crop months, while the many uncertainties which still surround the new yield tended to keep price advances to smaller proportions in the new yield division.

The market was helped by many favorable advices. From the spinning end of the trade came word that consumption in February had set a new all-time high for the month. This was accompanied by reports of a huge turnover in cotton cloths in the nation's primary markets. The latter factor was expected to add considerably to the backlog of mill orders, which in turn would indicate an increase in purchases of raw cotton.

Where three weeks ago dire results were predicted for the government's sale of loan holdings, all was changed. Many who vociferously claimed that 500,000 bales of this staple would not be sold, as cheerfully predicted today that 1,000,000 to 1,250,000 bales was infinitely possible.

Inflationary psychology which has gripped other markets for weeks was another development that induced many interests, particularly foreigners, to put money into cotton.

The weather was normal in most sections during the week. Some talk of a late start for Southern Louisiana and Georgia was heard, but seeding and plowing was rapidly progressing in most of the Southern regions of the belt.

People's Outstanding Collection of Many Professional Collectors
When most children are collecting pieces of string, marbles, assorted junk, and, most of all, little Shirley Temple, remarkable starring picture, Twentieth Century-Fox, "Stowaway" Sunday and Monday, and 22, at the Wadesonian already known as a collector Much simpler for America's baby-sweetheart to collect were the hundreds of signatures of the great and near-great, for they have all at one time or another visited Shirley.
Lastly, the Number One actress of the screen points to a miniature menagerie of animal pets sent her by admiring friends from all over the world. "Stowaway" finds Shirley in China, in a delightful role in which she sings and speaks in Chinese to win a Chinese amateur contest. Robert Young and Alice Faye are featured in the cast supporting Shirley, which also includes Eugene Pallette, Helen Westley, Arthur Treacher, J. Edward Bromberg and Astrid Allwyn.
Darryl F. Zanuck, Twentieth Century-Fox Production Chief, selected William A. Seiter to direct with B.G. De Sylva, Earl Carroll and Harold Wilson as associate producers. William Conselman, Arthur Sheekman and Nat Perrin wrote the screen play based on a story by Sam Engel. Mack Gordon and Harry Revel wrote five new tune hits and Irving Caesar composed a happy, topical song for Shirley and Alice to sing.

Martin Johnson's Camera Snaps Wife In Housekeeping Mood on Last Safari

Martin Johnson's life that ended so tragically as the result of an airplane crash on a lonely snow-covered mountainside near Los Angeles on Jan. 12, though full of adventure was an extremely happy one because of the enjoyment he and his wife derived from their experiences while making motion pictures of wild life in the tropics. One of Mrs. Johnson's functions on these trips was to make life home-like and comfortable no matter how far away from civilization their camp might be.

The above photograph, taken by Mr. Johnson toward the end of the expedition in Borneo, where they spent most of last year in the jungles, shows Mr. Johnson in a characteristic scene. The Johnsons lived on a bamboo raft that was moved up and down the Kinabatangan River, where the climate is said to be the hottest in the world. Strange as it may seem, modern refrigeration played a big role in the Borneo expedition. Two Servel Electrolux refrigerators (operated with kerosene) were part of the scientific equipment of the expedition. One of these was installed on the back veranda of the raft. Without the refrigerators, the Johnsons could not have withstood the heat of the jungles, they stated upon their return from Borneo. Mrs. Johnson is telling the little jungle maiden what they do with fruit and vegetables in America and how good the big pineapple will be when it gets cold. The small native boy is laughing at Mr. Johnson's antics in manipulating his motion picture camera.

Bureau Pledges President Support

Favors Plan Of President To Enlarge Supreme Court Of U. S.

The Big Sandy College of the American Farm Bureau Federation, with offices at Tuscaloosa, recently adopted a resolution regarding the proposed plan of President Roosevelt to enlarge the Supreme Court of the United States. Following is the resolution: "We, the Big Sandy College of the American Farm Bureau Federation in a special meeting assembled having taken note of the terrific propaganda by radio, by press and by whispering campaigns of the economic royalists to block our move to rejuvenate our judiciary from the lower to the upper and including the Supreme by allowing retirement of full pay after reaching the age of 70 years, or, in case of Supreme Court, authorizing the president, by and with the consent of the United States Senate, to appoint additional Justice, up to six in number for every Justice who declines to do enthusiastically retire."

"First, that we favor the plan of the Farmer President and urge all farmers, laborers, merchants, as individuals and by organized groups, to publicly declare our desire to wholeheartedly support the President's plan. "Second, that the Court has authority to set aside a law of duly enacted as laid down in constitution, and no law shall be giving the Court any such power. "Done this the 11th day of 1937 by adoption by a unanimous vote of the college."

RA Loans Approved For 8,000 Families

Rehabilitation loans have been approved by the Rehabilitation Division of the Resettlement Administration for approximately 8,000 low-income or destitute farm families in Alabama and it is anticipated that this number will be increased to approximately 12,000 within the next 30 days, reports Julian Brown, state director.

"These loans average about $225 per family. This is slightly more than the average loan for 1936 and this increase is due to our policy of gradually improving the position of the family by enabling them to purchase better work stock and farming tools. Repayments for these families during 1936 were such as to justify our increased faith and the additional loans," he says.

PRISONERS RIOT

6 P.M. to bring supper to the negroes. The prisoners pounced upon the sheriff and Herman, taking the sheriff's pistol and keys to the inner jail doors. During the struggle Herman escaped and ran down the stairs for assistance. Sheriff Stewart said he dropped the key to the outside jail door down the elevator shaft to his wife.

A call was sent out to townspeople and a score of men rushed to the jail. A telephone call to the State Highway Patrol at Montgomery brought a group of officers from Prattmont, less than a mile from here, where they had stopped to report. Sergt. Tom Carlisle, Officers J. B. Wilson, Jake Kreis and C. T. Donaldson were in the group.

Upon arriving at the Prattville jail, citizens said Sergt. Carlisle and Officer Wilson jumped from their motorcycles, rushed into the building and exchanged shots with the Williams negro as the officers advanced up the stairs. Williams had the sheriff's pistol.

Meanwhile Sheriff Stewart said he managed to force his way into another cell behind a steel door. Williams surrendered when his ammunition was exhausted.

About a dozen shots were fired during the encounter, but none by members of the hastily-summoned posse of citizens who had gathered before arrival of the patrolmen.

Sheriff Stewart said two bullets narrowly missed Sergt. Carlisle. The sheriff said he was "shot at once."

There were no casualties and Sheriff Stewart said the prisoners were quiet after the encounter. About 30 minutes elapsed from the time the prisoners attacked the sheriff and Herman until they were subdued by patrolmen.

That's What I Think

—O—O—

Saul M. Goldstein

I am one of the generation which grew up with prohibition. Alabama was a "bone-dry" state before I was old enough to have occasion to imbibe any strong liquors. I can remember but vaguely the existence of the old-time saloons which dotted the corners of my native city of Birmingham, and perhaps for that reason, they do not hold for me the same horrors which are vividly painted by the proponents of prohibition.

But, I repeat, I am one of the generation which grew up with prohibition. For the past fifteen years I have seen seemingly inexhaustible supplies of hard liquors bought, sold and consumed, privately and publicly. I have seen drunkenness disgusting in its display of all the worst characteristics of the human race flagrant in the face of national and state prohibition laws.

During the past four years, I have had occasion to observe at first-hand the effects of the repeal of the eighteenth amendment. During that time I have spent every summer in New York City, where almost every restaurant boasts a bar; and my personal observation has been that there was more public drunkenness in one week in prohibition times than in the summers of 1934, 1935 and 1936 all combined.

I honestly and sincerely believe that

ANNOUNCEMENT

On account of Easter Sunday and the annual singing coming on our preaching day, there will be no preaching on Sunday, but there will be preaching on Saturday and Sunday night at Poplar Spring. The members will please bear this in mind.

Mr. and Mrs. Vernie Teel and children of Lanet, Ala. paid the News office a pleasant visit last Saturday. Mr. Teel was for a number of years connected with the News before accepting a position with The Chambers County News, Lanet.

The great majority of people who drank alcoholic beverages during the prohibition era, and who drank them to excess, did so not for the pleasure of drinking, but for the thrill of thwarting an unpopular piece of legislation; and consequently, I am of the firm opinion that when that thrill was taken away by repeal, the urge to imbibe in quantity disappeared with most people.

For that reason, and only for that reason, I welcomed repeal. I believe that most honest-thinking people would reach the same conclusion on the same observations.

But I don't think that the majority of people who voted on March 10 in the State of Alabama understood fully the nature of the question on which they voted. It was a popular misunderstanding that they were voting to decide whether or not it would be legal to possess liquor in their respective counties. The actual question was whether or not it could be sold in said counties; and I believe that when those same people discover that their so-called "wet" neighbors will be able to buy and consume liquors in wet counties, and bring some home to their dry home county for home consumption, all within the law, they will change their minds about the next vote on the question.

For the question is no longer, "to drink or not to drink." The question voted on last week, boiled down to terms of our and my personal affairs, was, "either to reap locally the profits of the liquor commerce or to turn it over bodily to a neighboring county." I may be wrong, but I believe that when the citizens of Chilton County discover that Chilton County money will be pouring into Dallas, Jefferson and Montgomery counties for legal liquor, on which those counties will receive a handsome revenue, they will be anxious to bring that money back to Chilton County by reversing their decision at the next elections.

As I said above, I may be wrong, but that's what I think.

One of the most outstanding programs of the year in Clanton was given here last week when the Music Appreciation Club entertained at the home of Mrs. E. E. Upchurch, with Mrs. Upchurch, Miss Della Latham and Mrs. Patterson Hicks as joint hostesses.

It Pays To Be From The Country Sometimes

When the fire department had stretched its hose to the fire at the Cooper Lumber Co., last Friday, one motorist failed to stop at the hose line and drove over it—a rather serious offense.

However, when hailed into city court before Mayor Jones, the offender paid a fine of one dollar because he was not a "city" fellow and was not familiar with the fact that it was dangerous to drive over that "pipe" across the street. Mayor Jones warned, however, that this fine was light compared to one that would be placed on a person who should be familiar with this law and then violated it.

Weather Cycles Predicted

"On the basis of its detailed studies and vast accumulation of data, the United States Weather Bureau predicts a severe drought in the major agricultural areas of the Mid-west during the early months of the growing season of 1947."

"Farmers are advised to adjust their production plans accordingly. Dairymen and livestock raisers are advised to increase the acreage of legume crops which will prove resistant to drought and heat, etc., etc."

Yes, friends, this is not merely a figment of the imagination. The time is coming when long range weather forecasts can be made with a reasonable degree of accuracy. Dr. Charles G. Abbot of the Smithsonian Institution of Washington has been studying the weather cycles for years, and several observatories for the accumulation of data are now operating under his supervision in widely separated and remote mountainous areas. As the knowledge of weather accumulates men are learning much about weather cycles, about the varying intensity of the sun's radiation, and about other factors that influence weather.

Think what this will mean to the farmers of America. When a good, wet, production season is ahead the farmer may adjust his plans accordingly. When a dry, poor crop year is forecast he can expand the acreage of those crops which will best resist old Sol's burning rays. And alternating periods of drought and excessive rainfall will not leave his welfare to the mercy of chance.

This is what science can accomplish. Stranger dreams than long time weather forecasts have been converted into realities by men in laboratories and observatories. We have little reason to believe that they are now over confident.

A Salute To The Boys and Girls

The future hope for agriculture in America lies with the boys and girls on the farm today, is the opinion of most informed observers of agricultural problems. Therefore, we take advantage of this occasion to salute the 4-H Clubs and chapters of Future Farmers of America.

The alert young people who comprise the membership of these organizations are continually working on a great variety of interesting and valuable projects which promise great improvement in agriculture in future years.

At the present time 4-H clubs are presenting projects which demonstrate the value and need of rural electrification. The great value and need of electricity on the farm are recognized by the young people and the idea of promoting its extension has captured their imagination. As a consequence they are seeking to demonstrate what electricity means in making farm work easier in eliminating much of the drudgery in the farm home, and in improving the efficiency of farm operations.

But this is merely one, though typical, of many projects which promise to improve the social status of farm life. We take pleasure, therefore, in offering a word of approval of this work and in promising to aid the cause in any way that may fall within the possibilities of our newspaper.

There is one thing that none of us really appreciate. That is advice on how a thing should be done after it has been done the other way.

We've observed that most of those who have a pull, usually get it by having a little push.

These spring days call to mind the fact that there is often more pleasure going fishing than coming back.

What They Deserve

People always get just about the sort of government in the community, the state or the nation that they deserve. The people of the community also have about the type of stores their patronage will justify. And we'll go just another step and say that the town has just about the sort of paper that the loyalty and support of its citizens merit.

If you desire better stores here in Clanton just exhibit greater loyalty and extend your full support and you'll be surprised at how soon the stores will show improvement; how stocks will be enlarged, how service will be improved, how enterprise will be stimulated.

If you would like to have the community represented by a better newspaper than the News just show that you are constructively interested and note the improvements which will follow. Every publisher knows how he could improve his paper. He knows that he might add new news departments, install more modern equipment, and enlarge and strengthen his staff.

But there is always that important matter of patronage and support to be considered. If he did not consider that practical reality he would soon be out of business. He cannot expand his services which cost money unless there is sufficient income and adequate loyal support to justify the improvements. There are examples by the thousands of business men who have plunged ahead with great vision to enlarge and improve service without cautious regard for financial consideration. Their establishments eventually go into the hands of the liquidators. There are other examples by the thousands of business institutions called "dead" which survive financial collapse and depression.

All of this evidence merely emphasizes one thing. The service rendered by an institution must be commensurate with the financial support extended by the public.

Consider this and then ask yourself: "Am I giving my local newspaper the support it deserves? Do I make suggestions on news stories? Do I readily offer tips which will help make the local paper more interesting? Do I give the local newspaper and printing plant first consideration when I need printing? Do I use its columns as my advertising medium?"

Answers to these questions will determine whether you and the other citizens of this community are entitled to a better newspaper.

We will discuss the question at greater detail in the near future. It has a bearing not only on this newspaper but upon the business development of the entire community.

A New System Needed

We enjoy the radio. There are many programs we look forward to each week. We would miss the entertainment, the information and the inspiration it provides. We do not even object to a reasonable amount of advertising with our programs.

But human endurance has its limits. When we hear a radio announcer insulting our intelligence by telling us that our success and happiness in life depends entirely upon the brand of shaving cream we use or the make of coffee that is served in the home, then we become just a bit impatient. When a program is interrupted every few minutes by some advertising announcement that is uninteresting, absurd and long winded then we feel quite disposed to dispense with the entertainment. Even though we may enjoy the entertainment we will not accept it at such a price.

And all this is rapidly leading us to the conclusion that radio might be much more pleasant if it were treated as a public utility. We might even be willing to pay a small tax on our receiving set to secure high class programs without long winded advertising blurbs. This attitude is shared, we believe, by a large proportion of the intelligent people of the country.

This rising wave of resentment and antagonism should be a timely warning. Many people are already beginning to consider the merits of the British system which eliminates all radio advertising.

We might not care to apply this in full to America, but some adaption of the idea is long overdue. Radio advertising probably has its place, but radio advertisers apparently don't know what it is.

It has not been verified yet that the recent earth tremors were due to the sitdown strikes.

Long time weather forecasts are coming soon. But we don't like the idea. Imagine waiting for two months for a 40 below spell

MORALECHOES

D. W. Haskell

There is a story in Church History that says that Martin Luther in the hour of temptation was so certain of the presence of the devil that he picked up a bottle of printer's ink and dashed it at him. The bottle was not stopped by the devil as the Man of God saw him, but continued on its way until it was shattered on a door. We do not affirm the correctness of this story, but we are certain of one thing and that is, "A bottle of printer's ink is one of the most formidable weapons used of God in the conflict with evil." Printer's ink in this United States of ours is the one thing that is moulding sentiment, as nothing else is doing. The whiskey interests took printer's ink and nullified our prohibition laws. May I not add this as a truth that is worth proving: "If the newspapers of our nation should become a unit in hurling printer's ink at the whiskey traffic, we would have national prohibition in less than two years and this time it would come to stay." The press is among, if not the most, powerful influences in American life. May God give us more editors who will hurl bottles of printer's ink at the devil.

Long ago there was a queer shaped, ugly old barge tugboat that ran between London and Portsmouth. This old tug never came into port without colliding with other boats. The sailors to one ship named this vessel "Old Bust-Me-Up" because she never came into port without striking other crafts. One day she rode into port on a straight-line and touched no-one. A sailor standing on the deck of another ship shouted: "How did you do that Old Bust-Me-Up?" Back from the deck of the ship addressed came the reply from one of the crew: "We have got a new skipper aboard." There are many people in society today who have created so much danger and damage to the character of old and young that they can be justly named "Old Bust-Me-Up." There is no hope for us to escape this wreckage from men and women with bad characters until they get a new skipper in the heart. Christ Jesus as the pilot of your soul will make you safe on the sea of life. Safe for you and safe for others. Why not help folks rather than injure them?

In the days of the horse and buggy, my wife and I came once being led by a man driving a mule team and a wagon loaded with hay. The farmer had piled the hay on his wagon, letting it extend far out over the wheels on both sides and then he got on top of the hay and drove his mules down the middle of the road. After we had scrambled by, endangering horse and riders, my companion remarked: "That looks like a lot of hay but if it were packed into bales there would not be a wagon here full of it." My wife at a time have I been forced to sit in an audience and face a man who reminded me very much of that farmer on his pile of hay. The preacher, or the speaker, would seemingly be covering a wide range of things, but should all that is being said, be packed into the real truth that was being delivered, there would be little of it. It is best to "pack your hay" before you ride it off to market.

In the mountain sections of Arabia we are told of a tribe of people who claim that the human race is being destroyed because we are in the possession of too many senses. Men and women are being pulled down because of their senses and they have gone about the destruction of these. They destroy the sight so that nothing that is bad can be seen. They destroy feeling because of feeling. They destroy hearing, so that no one will be led astray by things they fear that they will hear the wrong. Many in this tribe are burned out hells of a human being and they sit and murmur some senseless statement all day. Man's senses are his powers of growth. Learn how to control them and they become a trellis on which soul life can reach the highest peak of elevation and purity. Destroy your senses and you have destroyed the trellis for character elevation.

I met a new man in the town where I was located and true to my custom I first asked him about his church affiliation. The next question was related to his profession or his work in life. He willingly informed me that he was a bridge builder. I could see that man as he went about his daily task. Old bridges were unsafe and he was there to rebuild them and make them safe. New bridges had to be built and he was there to place them in position. Travel would be safer and easier and all because there was a bridge builder in the town. My friend, what is your chief business in life? Are you a bridge builder? Building bridges over the quagmires of sin, over the dangers of bad company, over the quicksands of temptation, over the roaring streams of society—this is a noble business. Blessings on the life of anyone who is a bridge builder for human hearts.

Before sending the clothing her husband had ordered sent to flood refugees, Mrs. L. E. Clapp of Charleston, Ill., examined the suits. In the pocket of one she found $200 in bills which had been overlooked for years.

free flocks, clean brooding quarters, clean feed in feeders that prevent wastes, and clean range—land not used by other chickens during past years—are essential to success with baby chicks, he states.

Each year, more and more farmers are looking for dairy bulls with records which indicate breeding value. And each year the members of the dairy herd improvement association, 3 of which are located in Alabama, are putting more proved bulls on the market.

Excessive moisture in the brooder house contributes to the development of coccidiosis and respiratory diseases in young chicks.

Isabella Club Meets And Discusses Under And Overweights

The Isabella Home Demonstration Club held its regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. D. O. Manning and on account of the cold weather there were only twelve members present.

After a few songs the following program was given:

A poem, "The Conqueror," was read by Mrs. A. L. Smith.

Mrs. Wells gave an interesting and informational talk on "The Home," telling how we, as mothers, can be of the most help to our children, preparing them to be better citizens of tomorrow.

Mrs. Jones, the president, then turned the meeting over to Miss Grace who discussed "overweights and underweights." She also gave us recipes on breadmaking, etc. Those who have tried these recipes think she hasn't praised them a bit too highly.

Now, you folks who are missing these meetings, should enroll with us. If you are fat, don't you want to be normal? If you are skinny, don't you want to be normal? If you are normal, don't you want to remain normal? Meet with us and learn "how" and "why."

The next meeting will be the third Friday in April at the home of Mrs. A. L. Smith. We are planning to be one hundred per cent in attendance. May we count on you? The subject will be "Preparing Dishes For the Sink."

Restaurant patrons have no doubt observed, sometimes with annoyance, how quickly the waiter or waitress grabs the menu card after they have given their order. President Clark of the National Restaurant Association said this is done to keep the diner from changing his mind.

Clanton Young Man Takes Part In College Oratory

John Ezell Wins Place In Coveted Contest With

Address Taken From Bible Study

Wake Forest, N. C., March 25.—John Ezell, son of Dr. and Mrs. S. J. Ezell of Clanton, is one of the four orators who participated this week in the 103rd annual celebration of the founding of Wake Forest College.

Ezell, who in a preliminary contest won the right to participate in Founder's Day as one of the orators representing the Euzelean and Philomathean literary societies, used as his subject, "Dreams."

A junior in the academic school, John is active in extracurricular and religious work on the Baptist campus. He is a member of the Euzelean society, one of the two historic literary organizations which have cradled the forensic efforts of such distinguished men as Governors Bickett and Kitchen, John Charles McNeill, late poet laureate of North Carolina, Thomas Dixon, author of The Clansmen and The Leopard's Spots, and all three of North Carolina's federal judges.

Ezell's speech, which attracted favorable comment, was delivered before an audience consisting of members of the faculty, students, and a number of visitors, including Federal Judge Johnson J. Hayes. His oration, which follows, was a portion of a program featured by forensic fireworks by representatives of both societies.

DREAMS

In the long, long ago, when the inhumanity of man to man had brought chaos into the social relationships of the race, men began to dream of a better state—a state in which justice and love would reign. Each dream of the long ago was the father of other dreams, and these became the quest and the ultimate goal of the race. To these deathless dreamers the Utopian State and the Golden Era were yet to be realized. Century has succeeded century, and the dreams have gone on and on, gathering momentum with the passage of time. The heart of the race became more and more dissatisfied with things as they were, and "set itself to the task of bringing to pass these dreams of the sages which has become the aspirations of the people." The world of tomorrow will be born of the dreams of today.

We stand at the dawn of a new era—nearer to Utopia than any other age of history. Every century—every year—brings us nearer to the fulfillment of the Dream of The Ages. It cannot be that the dreams of better things are forever to remain unfulfilled. They must become the facts and conditions of our near and further future. As we study these dreams, we find that they are the stuff out of which progress and civilizations have been made. Every agitation, every conflict for the betterment of man has grown out of the dreams of men who "dipped into the future far as human eye could see; and saw the vision of the world, and all the wonders that would be."

It is to men like Hamurabi, Moses, Confucius, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Socrates, Mischah, and Joel that we are debtors for our conceptions of Justice, Righteousness and a better world for all men. Their dreams have become the goal of the race. Nineteen hundred years ago, imbued and endowed with their dreams, the Son of Man appeared and proclaimed to the race a new Day unknown to their world. He came as the fulfillment of dreams of a Deliverer—as the Brother of all Men—as the "Champion of the Oppressed" the world over. He spoke with the authority of a divine Dreamer. He declared that He came that all men might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly. He challenged the status quo of men, of institutions, of customs, and of ideals and sat before the race the goal of Brotherhood and The Common good of all men.

As a result of His evaluation of man, as better than sheep and as sons of a common father, it was impossible that slavery could live long. His dreams for men—for society—for civilization, made it impossible for the race to be satisfied with the conditions prevailing in the world of His Age.

John, Barnabas, Luke, Paul, and others caught His vision and dreamed His dreams, so that in the course of three centuries their ideals had literally turned the world upside down. The battles were many—the war is long, but victory after victory has come of His dreams. Men without visions, and young men without dreams could never have seen that Democracy was the "far off divine event upon which the ages were converging." Nor could they have seen that an unchristian society—half slave and half free—must give way to the Dream of brotherhood and freedom. But a Wilberforce dreamed and fought for twenty-five years, and scuttled the last slave ship of England. Thirty years after his death the last slave in America went free by the proclamation of Abraham Lincoln. Slavery is gone out of the world. The dream of Brotherhood and Freedom has become the proud fact in world civilization. Slavery could not live in the blazing light of the dreams of Christianity.

Men are yet having visions, and young men are yet dreaming dreams of a better and more divine social order. Great leaders in both Church and State are dreaming of the more abundant life for the race. They are yet following Isaiah and Mischah, and dreaming of that day when "Nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." A Dream? Yes, a dream. But with a divine significance; for in spite of wars, and rumors of wars, in spite of increased armies and navies, the world will not long tolerate the barbarism of wars. Already we have come to despise the war-profiters and the merchants of death. The voice of our brothers' blood cries from millions of graves that war must go. Civilization must and will wipe out war or be wiped out by war. The world's Christian conscience is moving in unison to end war. The dream will soon be fulfilled of "Peace on earth, good will among men."

Many are the dreamers who are dreaming today of a warless world—a just economic order in which "the laborer will be worthy of his hire"—of a world devoid of poverty, want, and ignorance—of a world of Universal Brotherhood—of a world parliament of men—of a world in which each man shall "find his own in all men's good and all men shall work in nobler brotherhood."

Out of the alley grog shop, and the rich man's saloon come the cry of the slaves of alcohol. Recently paroled and placed on good behavior, John Barleycorn is violating shamefully his few days of freedom. Men and women are dreaming anew of the day when he shall be imprisoned never to be freed again to debauch the race, and to spread crime and poverty among men. The day of shame when states and nations enslave and sell their citizenship for revenue is not for long. This too, shall pass, and another blot of civilization will become but a record of history, to amaze a better age that men should have ever tolerated such a public curse.

The proper succession of civilizations—the upward march of the race—the abundant life of humanity must come from the visions and dreams of men. How imperative it is that the institutions of the ages—the home—the state—the church—and the school must have atmospheres conducive to the visions and dreams of the youth of the world. They must dip into the future and visualize plans, specifications, and materials before they can build a world commonwealth in which every man shall be a brother with the inalienable right to live the abundant life. As in the past—so in the present and future—many will be the battles, with defeats, and with victories—but the war will at last be won; and Utopia will not be a dream but a realization of dreams come true. My friends, we do stand at the dawn of a new and better era, and the deepest passion of the race will not be satisfied until every man becomes a nobleman. Century has succeeded century, but the dreams of men live on and on, and gather momentum and force until satisfied in a happy realization. Sir Thomas Moore found the true commonwealth nowhere, but the nowhere must be at length become where—na, everywhere.

Enlightenment has brought right truth to the front, and even truth be crushed to earth, "it will again—the eternal years of God's her's; but error wounded with pain and dies among her worship. May we not catch the light of dawn of a nobler day—a day of international commonwealth—a compelling plan of God; the dream of brotherhood among men that will peace on earth and good will be all nations? May we as the "all the ages, in the foremost time" have Faith in dreams, and as Edwin Markam reminds us: "Always there shall be visions to heart."

The press of endless passion; goal. A traveler's tavern, whence we depart

On new divine adventures of soul."

Dream on Oh, ye dreamers! that far off divine event—that compelling plan of God shall be happy realization in His World of Peace, brotherhood, and among all men.

"It's pretty hard to beat NATURE"

Mighty Mules Hitched to a dynamometer (a strength testing machine) these powerful mules record their strength for the photographer.

There is a famous pair of mules—mighty creatures the pulling strength of a pair of four-legged giants. At a recent university test, they equaled the world's pulling strength. What makes these mules unique? Mother Nature gave them something—her own natural balance of many elements; strength, staying power, the ability to work. So in actual value, these sturdy mules are out from ordinary mules and are just no comparison. Mother Nature gave a natural balance to Natural Chilean Nitrate—a natural balance of many elements that combine to make this nitrogen fertilizer a reliable food for your crops. Natural Chilean is known for its quick-acting nitrogen, of course. But nitrogen is only one of its vital elements. Because of its natural origin, Chilean Soda also contains, as impurities, such elements as iodine, boron, magnesium, calcium and some 28 others. And always remember that these vital elements are present in Chilean Soda in Mother Nature's own wise balance and blend. For better crops... Natural Chilean Nitrate.

Other Favorable For Boll Weevils

There has been very little cold this winter to kill the cotton weevils that hibernate during the winter in the surface of the soil under leaves around the old cotton bolls in central and south Alabama. It has been favorable for overwintering of weevils, reports J.M. Smith, entomologist at the Alabama Agricultural Experiment Station. The Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine, Washington, reports that conditions in Louisiana and South Carolina have been favorable for overwintering of weevils. It says present prospects in many localities there will show boll weevils early this season.

WITH YOUR HOME Demonstration Agent CONDUCTED BY MISS META GRACE

BAKER CLUB
The Baker Home Demonstration Club met at the home of Mrs. D.G. Baker, Tuesday, March 9, 1937, with 12 members and 2 visitors present.

The meeting was called to order by our president, Mrs. J.A. Marcus, whom we were glad to welcome back to our club after a period of absence. Several pleasant songs were enjoyed by the members, after which the secretary called the roll and read the minutes of the previous meeting, which were approved.

The Club's County Council representatives were elected. Miss Pauline Sisk for the Farm Bureau and cooperative marketing. Mrs. Horace Popwell for Scholarships, and Mrs. George E. Stutz for Citizenship. Miss Sisk will have charge of the program at the next meeting, discussing in full the advantages of the Farm Bureau.

Miss Grace and leaders prepared and served a very tasty breakfast which was enjoyed by all present. The meeting adjourned with the club pledge.

Spring Clean Up Time

Just before Easter is a good time to do the Spring cleaning. Take advantage of the sunshine and this pretty weather. First take the inside. Air and sun all clothing, bedding and linens. Then clean the floors and walls, clean and polish all furniture, and pieces that need to be retouched and painted, put aside. Get out the old brushes and pick up a few small cans of paint, repaint any extra chairs, the breakfast room suite, the porch set, or the worse pieces needing freshening. On the sunning, be sure not to turn the right side of rugs, quilts, drapes and clothes directly to sun rays as the sun will fade the colors. Either turn them inside out or be sure to place something over them, or else just hang them in the shade and let them air. The kitchen usually needs most attention at this time of year. After thoroughly cleaning and if possible repainting see if you can't add some new conveniences. New shelves, cabinets, make a list of articles needed in the kitchen and put in your purse ready for the next trip to town. Now for the outside. The yards should be cleaned, any rubbish burned and destroyed, any old tin cans punctured and carried off. Then the shrubs on correct weight. Each member was weighed and their height was measured to see if their weight was correct. Miss Grace explained the causes of underweight and overweight and how to prevent them. She gave each member some valuable charts to keep as a reminder of what to do in cases there was anyone in the family who needed attention. We adjourned by saying the club pledge.

RATLIFF-CHAPMAN

Easter Parties are SUCH FUN

and Home Made Ice Cream Is Very Appropriate

After the egg rolling contest or the egg hunt there is nothing quite so delightful as a big freezer brimming full of home made ice cream. Good old fashioned home made ice cream can be served at any hour without upsetting the dietetic schedule of growing children. Here is a tested recipe that has proven successful at many parties. Plan a party and make home made ice cream.

CHOCOLATE ICE CREAM
1/2 pint cream, 1 1/2 pints milk
1/2 pound sugar, 3 eggs
3 oz. baker's chocolate (grated)
1/2 tablespoonful vanilla
Scald milk in double boiler. Beat the eggs and sugar together and add to scalded milk. Cook until thickened. Add melted chocolate and beat to blend the mixture. Chill, add flavoring and cream and freeze.

NEW RABIES LAW WILL BE ENFORCED

Montgomery, March 15.—Alabama's new rabies control law, which was approved by Governor Graves on March 2 after being passed by both Houses of the Legislature, was described today by Dr. J.N. Baker, State Health Officer, as a means of bringing about "an earnest beginning" in the control of rabies in the State.

"Since the dog is the chief factor in the spread of rabies, control measures should be instituted against this animal," the State Health Officer observed. "This bill is not designed as a revenue producer. It is merely a regulatory measure. The ultimate aims are: (1) the reduction of the stray dog population of Alabama; (2) the protection of the remaining dogs in so far as possible by vaccination; (3) prevention of the spread of rabies to other livestock (many valuable animals succumb to this disease each year); and (4) of greatest importance, the prevention of spread of rabies to human beings. (Four persons died from rabies in this State last year.)"

The new rabies control bill vests general supervisory powers in county boards of health. These boards, with the approval of the State Health Officer and State Veterinarian, are required to select in every county of the State a rabies inspector whose duty it will be to see that the terms of the act are enforced in his community. The rabies inspectors are to carry on their work under the direction of the county boards of health. These inspectors have the authority to select as many deputies as they may require to assist them in enforcing the new law, and local law enforcement officers are called upon to co-operate with local inspectors in obtaining full enforcement.

The law requires that, on or before a certain date fixed annually by the rabies inspector of a county, with the approval of the State Health Officer, the owner of every dog not confined at all times in an enclosed area or kept muzzled or on leash, shall have his dog properly inoculated against rabies by the local rabies inspector or by some other properly qualified person. After such inoculation, the owner of the dog shall be furnished with a certificate showing the age, sex, and breed of the dog, the name and address of the owner, and the lot or ampule number of the vaccine used and the name of the manufacturer, the date of inoculation, and the signature of the person administering the vaccine. Two other copies of this certificate, which must be filled out in triplicate, must be delivered to the county health officer before the tenth of each month.

The owner of a dog thus inoculated will also receive from the rabies inspector or other person responsible for the inoculation a serially numbered tag bearing the same number and year designated on the certificate. This tag must be kept attached at all times to the collar or harness worn by the dog that has been inoculated. Lost tags may be replaced upon application to the rabies inspector. A fee not exceeding 50 cents may be charged by the rabies inspector or other person performing the inoculation, which amount also includes the cost of the vaccine.

The law provides a penalty of 50 cents for the owner of a dog who permits it to run at large without being able to produce evidence of its having been inoculated against rabies, this penalty being in addition to the fee prescribed for inoculation. Provision is also made for the impounding of unlicensed dogs and for the humane disposal of those whose owners fail to claim and pay the required penalties and fees, including the board of the dog for the period it has been impounded, within a period to be determined by the rabies inspector, which period, however, must not be less than ten days.

Owners of dogs that have been bitten by other dogs or which reveal symptoms of rabies, are required by the new law to report them to the county health officer, county quarantine officer, or rabies inspector, and must keep them confined for at least 30 days, unless specifically authorized, in writing, to reduce the period of confinement. County health officers, quarantine officers and rabies inspectors are required to provide for the immediate confinement of all dogs, believed to be rabid, that have bitten persons. Dog owners are required to co-operate with these officers by reporting incidents of this nature and promptly carrying out all instructions for the confinement of their dogs.

LOANS ARE AVAILABLE FOR DESTITUTE FARMERS

Any deserving Alabama farmer in the low-income or destitute class who cannot secure adequate finances from some other agency on reasonable terms is eligible for assistance from the Alabama Rural Rehabilitation, advises Julian Brown, state director.

Interested farmers should place their applications with farm and home supervisors in their local counties, he advises. After the application is made it is left to a local committee composed of representative citizens of the county to pass on the honesty and integrity of the applicant. If the application is approved by the county committee the RA farm and home supervisors then go to the farm and develop a sound farm and home management program.

Of first consideration in the development of the farm management program is production of sufficient food and feed to meet the home needs, he says in emphasizing that "these families must live at home."

"Next comes the production of cash crops. The loan must be repaid and the income must be sufficient to provide the necessities of living. To do this the farmer must follow the very best known farming practices."

The interest rate on all loans is 5 per cent and the loan is secured by a mortgage on the crop and chattels. The loans are for the purchase of feed, seed, fertilizer, work stock, work tools, and subsistence goods.

During the year 1936 loans were issued to 13,500 families in Alabama, amounting to $2,500,000. Over 70 per cent of the funds loaned have been repaid and the government is adequately secured for the remaining amounts due, he says.

Future of Dairy Herd Depends on How Calves Are Handled

"The future of any milking herd often depends on how calves are handled," says W. R. Arend, dairy authority of the Purina Mills. "This puts a definite responsibility on the shoulders of the man who cares for the calves from the time they are dropped until they become part of the milking herd. It is not only cheaper to raise heifer calves than to buy cows, but by raising one's own heifers a herd can be built just about the way a dairyman wants it."

Feed Highly Important

"The importance of feed for the calf cannot be over-emphasized," Arend says. "Feed must provide the things from which bones, sinews, muscles, and blood are made. A well developed frame, and depth in the middle are determined by what the calf gets to eat. First food for the calf should be the mother's colostrum milk. This milk is inactive and performs the job of setting the digestive system in motion. If it is necessary to take the calf from the cow, the calf may be fed from a pail. But nature has taught the calf to look up for its milk so it should be unwise to stretch its neck out to drink from a pail. As in nursing, the neck should be outstretched so that the opening into the rumen or first stomach is naturally closed, preventing milk from entering. The first stomach in a small calf is dormant. Whenever milk enters, it lies there and ferments. This causes scours."

Milk Alone Will Not Provide All the Things Calves Need for Profitable Growth. Arend points out. "Milk is about 87 percent water, which means that a gallon of milk is really about seven pounds water and one pound solids. As the calf grows and develops its requirements for solid matter increase beyond what milk alone can supply for maximum growth a properly balanced dry feed of are supplied with the nutrients needed."

"After years of research work Purina Research Staff has discovered how to fill calves' needs through complete feed known as calf starter. By feeding a little milk at the time then feeding calf starters with the calf gets exactly what it needs."

Begin Feeding Fourth Day

"The new calf feed is given calves when four days old. It is before then at all times, but never advisable to place in the more than a day's feed at a time, subjecting it to possibilities of being damp."

"The feeding schedule for a worked out by Purina scientists for mother's milk the first three days after which start with two quarts daily at beginning of week. At end of second week calf should be getting five quarts, which should be continued through third week. At beginning of fourth week, cut milk back to three quarts daily at end of fourth week, milk entirely. Along with this milk feeding program, keep calves on hay, and water before they are weaned. These directions are for Holstein-Ayrshire calves. For Guernsey-Jersey calves, the amount of milk slightly reduced."

"By the end of the fourth week calf is used to dry feed on its own. No more milk is needed because calf's complete needs are taken care of in calf starters, hay, and water. With this kind of feeding it isn't before the calf is well on its way to becoming a profitable money-making first-calf heifer."

"YULETIDE" and "Yule log" are terms as familiar to us in connection with Christmas as they were to our ancestors. The word "yule" has had an amazing vitality, for its history stretches back beyond the mists of antiquity. In Medieval England the form of the word was "yol"; in Anglo-Saxon times it was "geol," akin to the Icelandic "jol," the great mid-winter feast of pre-Christian days. It is probable that "jol" is also the ancestor of our word "jolly," and that then as now "Yuletide" meant "jolly time."

Wrong: "You are not as old as him."
Right: "You are not as old as he is."

"He is" is understood—"You are not as old as he is." It is easy to avoid such mistakes in the use of the personal pronoun when making a comparison, if it is remembered that some form of the verb "be" is always understood.

Former Music Devotee And Instructor Here Now Represents Well Known B'ham Firm

During the past week, Clanton has received several pleasant visits from one of its former residents, Mrs. Jadie L. Longshore, widely known for her interest in music and activities in musical circles of the state.

Mrs. Longshore was in Clanton Tuesday visiting friends. She has brought to Clanton many enjoyable musical programs from Birmingham where she now makes her home and where she is recognized as one of the leading authorities on music and musical instruments, especially the piano and organ. Clanton feels indebted to this charming lady for the interest she has created and aided to be fostered in this city in the study and enjoyment of the higher type of musical programs.

She at one time conducted classes in the schools of Clanton and is at present organist for the Handley Memorial Presbyterian Church of Birmingham and has a studio at the E. Forbes Piano Co. of that city. She appears often before civic clubs of Birmingham and takes an active part in many other programs demanding music of the strains loved by the masters of earlier time.

Mrs. Longshore is now connected with the Forbes Piano Company of Birmingham and visits in this city every week in the interest of her work.

She is especially interested in seeing anyone who may be interested in piano or organ installation in their homes. She is considered one of the outstanding demonstrators of the state for the well known Hammond organ.

Don't Take Chances—Feed Startena!

THERE'S no question in the minds of more than a quarter of a million poultry raisers as to what starting feed they will use this spring. The results these folks got last year with the new Startena containing Pur-a-tene exceeded even their fondest hopes. They know what Startena will do so they're taking no chances this year.

Purina Startena for years has been the country's finest starting feed. Now, through the addition of Pur-a-tene, it is made even better. Poultry raisers who fed Startena last year had chicks weighing as much as a pound and a quarter and even more at six weeks.

See us today... have Startena on hand when your chicks arrive!

Verbena Girl Leads Class With Best Essay On "What I Can Do To Make Verbena Safer"

The fifth grade class of Verbena has just completed a very interesting unit on "Securing Safety." I offered at the end of unit to have the best essay written by any member of the class published in your paper. The class worked diligently at it and a number of splendid essays were given the Elementary school faculty to act as judges selecting the best one.

Points considered were form, subject matter, and penmanship. After much consideration this essay, written by Levis Bullard, 12-year-old daughter of C. D. Bullard, Verbena, was selected to be sent you for publication.

Levis led her class last month by making straight A's. She was closely pursued by her twin sister, Evis, Myrtle Cooper, Margaret McGalliard, Katherine Pratt and Hazel Taylor, who had their report cards marred with one B. The essay is enclosed.—Mrs. A. B. Stanley, teacher.

"What I Can Do To Make Verbena Safer"

Long ago people had to look to themselves for safety. They had to fight the wild beasts of the forest. They had to overcome the danger of fire and flood.

Nowadays we do not have to depend upon ourselves alone to protect us, we have a great part in protecting ourselves and other people too. We children have as big a part to play in the safety game as any older person.

You would wonder how we can have such a big part. We are so small. By abiding by these safety rules we can make Verbena a safer place:

Never throw fruit skins, broken glass, nails, or any rubbish in the streets.

Do not play in the street or on the railroad track.

On a rainy day, do not cover your face with an umbrella.

Do not run across a railroad track or street, you might fall and get hurt.

Look both ways before crossing the street.

Never steal rides.

Help those in need.

When walking on a road, keep to the left to meet oncoming vehicles.

Play on the playground, not in the street or on the railroad track.

Never run in front of an oncoming vehicle.

Never stand in the street when waiting for someone.

Never push anyone in front of a moving vehicle.

Never play rough with anyone in the water if they cannot swim.

Keep to the right when riding a car.

When you catch a car, catch it with a right hand clasp. Step up with the left foot first. When you leave a car catch hold with left hand and hold firmly.

Step with the right foot first to the ground. Wait until a car comes to a dead halt before you leave it or catch it.

Do not play with matches or a sharp knife.

Treat a cut with the greatest of care.

Do not play with a sling-shot.

Do not run downstairs from an upper room—you might trip and fall.

Do not play with gasoline oil or kerosene.

If you would only heed to these and many other safety rules you can help to make Verbena a safer place to live.

MANY TESTS USED FOR DETERMINING QUALITY OF EGGS

Things to Look for When Breaking Out Eggs.

Most people decide whether an egg is good or bad by its odor. Some discriminate further between eggs on the way they "break out." The grocer makes his decision on egg quality by what he sees when he holds them against a light. He distinguishes between fresh eggs and old ones by the size of the air space in the blunt end. The larger the air cell the older the egg. The grocer also throws out eggs that show most spots or internal discolorations.
But the hotel chef uses all these tests, and others. He usually serves eggs in pairs. To make an attractive plate of ham and eggs to sell at 80 cents to $1.25, the two yolks must be nearly the same color. He knows that the attractiveness of food is one of the best ways of bringing business to his establishment.

Eggs Should Look Alike
When the waiter sings out "Two up, with the eyes open," the chef wants to be able to send out two eggs as nearly alike as possible. He doesn't want eggs with deep yellow or reddish yellow yolks, for besides being unattractive in appearance he knows they are likely to have a strong flavor. Eggs with whitish yolks are just as displeasing. What the chef really hopes for when he cracks the egg is one with a light lemon-yellow yolk, plenty of thick white, and a slightly tart taste. Premiums are paid for such eggs because they can be served to the most discriminating patrons with the expectation of "repeat" orders.

As alike as when the shell is on.

Perhaps the most exacting test of an egg is its appearance after poaching. An egg should stand up well, and should hold together. Because the white of a high quality egg is thicker and stands up higher on the yolk there is very little white lost in the water. Every chef or cook knows this. They know also there will be no big pieces of white floating around when a quality egg is poached. With an ordinary egg, as much as 25 percent of the white may be lost in the cooking.

Other Quality Tests Made

In the Research Laboratories of the Purina Mills several additional tests have been devised for checking egg quality. Breakage strength of the shell is tested with a specially constructed apparatus. The white is drawn from the egg by means of a small glass pipette and both the thick and thin white measured in a graduated cylinder.

As unlike as this when cooked.

Yolks are measured for both height and diameter. The yolk of a good egg is firm and stands up well. Stale eggs or eggs of poor quality contain yolks that flatten out, break easily, and are not firm. Quality egg yolks have a wholesome, slightly acid or tart flavor. A stale egg has a flat taste.

'Control Feeding' Recommended

But a more important problem from the poultryman's and consumer's point of view is how to produce eggs that measure up to these tests—how to build eggs that look good, stand up well when cooked, have a tart delicious taste, and contain more food value than ordinary eggs.

Feeding for "controlled interiors" is the answer both science and practical poultry raisers give. Through a control plan of feeding, hens can be made to produce exactly the kind of eggs the housewife wants.

In the Purina Research Laboratories an all-in-one laying wash that gives "controlled interiors" has been developed. Hens fed on this complete feed produce uniformly high-quality eggs, each with an invariable vitamin and food value content. Uniformity of yolk color, thick white, and correct taste are all features of eggs produced on this control feeding program. More about this plan of producing "controlled interiors" of eggs can be learned at any store selling checker board feeds.

FARMERS' CHAMPION
OF ALL the leaders of third party movements, probably no one has caused the two major parties more concern than did Gen. James B. Weaver of Iowa. For he was the nominee of two new parties which, at two different periods in our history, capitalized on the unrest of the farm vote and in one case he definitely contributed to the overthrow of the party in power.

Weaver was first the standard-bearer for the Greenbackers, a party which came into existence in 1868 because of the dissatisfaction of the farmers with the financial policies of Grant's administration. They were inflationists who demanded that a large amount of paper money be issued without regard to specie payment. They received their name from the fact that legal-tender notes were printed in green and called greenbacks. In the campaign of 1876 they nominated Peter Cooper, the New York philanthropist, but he polled only 80,000 popular votes and did not receive a single electoral vote. In the congressional elections of 1878 the Greenbackers cast a million votes and the Republicans in power looked apprehensively to the presidential campaign of 1880, especially when the Greenbackers nominated a man from the agricultural West. But their fears were groundless, for the Greenbackers could muster only a little more than 300,000 votes and, although Garfield won over Hancock by less than 10,000 popular votes, he got 214 electoral votes to his opponent's 155.

Twelve years later the Republicans had much more to worry over when Weaver bobbed up again, this time as the nominee of the Populist or People's party which declared for free silver, public ownership of monopolies, postal savings banks and an income tax. In the state and congressional elections of 1890 they carried the legislatures of Kansas and Nebraska, elected nine members of congress and forced 34 others, Democrats and Republicans, to pledge themselves to carry out Populist ideas. In the presidential campaign of 1892 Weaver polled more than 1,000,000 votes in the West and South and corralled 22 electoral votes. The Populists also carried several state legislatures and sent five senators to Washington.

KENNETH MILLER IS DEAD AT 31; ILL FOR WEEKS

Former Newspaperman And Conservation Editor

Kenneth A. Miller, 31, veteran newspaper man, editor of publications of the State Department of Conservation, and treasurer of the Alabama Wildlife Federation, died at St. Margaret's Hospital yesterday at 12:45 P.M., following an illness of several weeks. Surviving are his mother, Mrs. Gavin Miller, 1042 South Hull Street, and other relatives.

Born in June, 1905, at May, Oklahoma, Mr. Miller after attending the public schools at that place where he spent his early boyhood, graduated from high school at Fort Smith, Ark. Later he attended the College of the Ozarks at Clarksville, Ark. There he distinguished himself in athletics as a three-sports star—playing end on the football team, guard in basketball and in the infield in baseball. In addition to being an outstanding athlete, he was also editor of the college newspaper.

Immediately after finishing college, he entered newspaper and magazine work and came to Alabama as a member of the staff of the Associated Press with which he was connected for five years. He was first attached to the Birmingham bureau of the Associated Press. Later he was with the Montgomery bureau for three years, and after that served as State capital reporter for The Alabama Journal of Montgomery.

On Jan. 1, 1937, Mr. Miller was appointed by Commissioner of Conservation I.T. Quinn, editor of publications. Thereafter, and up until his last illness, he edited the Alabama Game and Fish News, published by the State Department of Conservation. He was also head of the Research and Statistics Division of the Department. On Feb. 15, this year, he was elected treasurer of the Alabama Wildlife Federation.

A newspaper man of exceptional talent and ability, Mr. Miller is said to have obtained through his enterprise, courage and determination, the first eye-witness account given to the public, of the flood that in the Spring of 1929, inundated the town of Elba, and for a time threatened its complete destruction.

After swimming and wading some seven miles, at night, he reached the National Guard emergency camp that had been established in the flood area, where he was permitted to use the only telephone left in operation within a radius of 25 miles. Using that telephone, he transmitted the first news story of the catastrophe to reach the outside world. He had started for his goal in a boat, but abandoned it after it had twice capsized.

Quiet and unassuming, Mr. Miller, who had a peculiarly attractive personality, made many friends in Mont-

Her heart kept racing, and she may recover. Lauritz Melchior, born tenor of the Metropolitan Opera—has only one complaint to America—he is bothered by people who want his autograph. He obliges as many as possible, but he is absent-mindedly signed. "With best wishes to the choir," the checked book.

John Franks, a beggar in Texas, was fined $25 because he was a man who gave him comfort.

Funeral conducted by Dr. MacGuire, pastor of the Presbyterian Church of which Mr. Miller was a member, was conducted at 3 P.M. at Diffly's Funeral Home. Burial will be in Greenwood cemetery and elsewhere.

Cotton Prices Expected If Farmers Increase Production

Small increase in cotton acreage could easily place cotton in a position similar to that they found themselves when bringing about 5 cents per pound cotton seed about 38 years ago. C.A. Cobb, director, Southern, AAA, in a letter to P.O.

HORSES & MULES

W. LOWE
South Clanton

Davis, director of Alabama Extension Service.

Some of the things which farmers should seriously consider before increasing their cotton acreage this year are listed by Mr. Cobb as follows:

- (1) That we again face low-priced cotton unless we continue to maintain a balanced production;
- (2) Conservation payments at 5 cents a pound for the average yield on the diverted acres are sure and certain;
- (3) The cost of producing cotton on diverted acres is saved;
- (4) Cotton that is produced will cost less per pound to grow;
- (5) The Diverted acres produce conserving crops, some of which may be used for food and feedstuffs;
- (6) Soil fertility is conserved;
- (7) A better price for cotton is assured if production is kept within reasonable limits.

"Despite the fact that the burdensome surplus of American cotton has been reduced, our carry-over of approximately 7 million bales is still two million bales above normal," he says. "The estimated world supply of all cotton for the present season was over 42 million bales. In only one other year, 1933, has the supply equaled or exceeded this. The world supply and demand for cotton largely determine the price American growers receive."

University Head

Here is the latest picture of Dr. Richard C. Foster, new president of the University of Alabama, who on January 1 ascended to the presidency occupied for 25 years by Dr. George H. Denny.

That's What I Think

Saul M. Goldstein

Many, many long years ago a Man of God rose up among the people of God, and wondered at what He saw. Thousands of people linked together by a common ancestry foreign to that of their neighbors in whose country they lived, and by common ideals of religion entirely different from those of their neighbors, toiled in slavery and oppression under cruel taskmasters appointed by the ruler of the country.

And the Man of God rose up among his brethren and set about to right the wrongs he saw and felt, and believed. It was not an easy task, for the people in those days, even as people in these days, were prone to be content with things as they were and not bother to do any more than long for things as they should be. But the Man of God was persistent, and in this He had the guidance of the Almighty Himself.

So it came to pass, after much travail, and even after miracles which the Almighty Himself caused to happen, that the ruler of the country lifted the yoke of bondage from the people of God, and permitted them to go forth a free and unoppressed nation.

And the people remembered this deliverance from slavery and the miracles which preceded them, and they made this occasion the foundation stone of their structure, as the beginning of their creed, "I Am The Lord Thy God Who Brought Thee Out Of The Land Of Egypt And Out Of The House Of Bondage."

They told the story to their children and to their children's children, to be handed down from generation to generation even to this day; they even prescribed the manner and custom of observing the anniversary of this deliverance, making a special ritual to be observed as part of a special festival which they named, in our language, the Passover, because in the miracle by which the Almighty had caused to fall the first born of every family in Egypt, the Angel of Death had passed over the homes of the people of Israel.

Tomorrow night, Friday, March 26, 1937, at sunset, begins the celebration of the anniversary of this great event in the history of a nation and in the history of the world: tomorrow night at sunset millions of descendants of the Egyptian slaves will sit down to tables set marvelously alike, and will recite the same old story of the deliverance and will eat foods fashioned to remind them of incidents in that deliverance.

It is no mere coincidence that this takes place in the spring of the year, when all life and all nature undergoes a rebirth: in spirit and in form the world becomes young again, and rebels from the slavery of the cold winter months when the land is hard and the trees are barren.

It is no mere coincidence that another man of God rose up at another time, at the same time of the year, among his brethren and set about to right the wrongs he saw, and felt, and believed. Nor was it as easy task then, for people in those days, even as people in these days, were prone to be content with things as they were and not bother to do any more than long for things as they should be. But this Man of God was persistent, also, and in this He, too, had the guidance of the Almighty Himself.

So it came to pass, after much travail, and even after miracles which the Almighty Himself caused to happen, that the people who suffered the wrongs which the Man of God saw and set about to right, once again were permitted to lift up their heads and go forth a free and unoppressed nation.

So it is also no mere coincidence that next Sunday, March 28, 1937, millions of descendants of those people who were sufferers many years ago will join together in services marvelously alike, and will listen to the same story of the resurrection, and will taste of food and drink fashioned to remind

Miss Gladys Wyatt spent the night with her sister, Mrs. Bill Foshee, last Saturday night.

Mrs. Myrtle Scott spent Sunday afternoon with her sister, Mrs. Mable Leach.

Mr. D.C. Scott and brother, Cecil, went to Fates Chapel Sunday afternoon to the singing and reported a good singing, which they enjoyed very

Of all the millions of people who have bought used cars from Chevrolet dealers, probably few are so well satisfied with their purchase as Roy Kootz of Bloomington, Ind., who recently bought a used car for $150 from the University Chevrolet Company of this city. After getting his car home, he happened to find a dime that had fallen down behind the seat cushion. Kootz was only mildly pleased by this lucky find, but his interest picked up when he noticed that the coin was dated 1821. That was a bit unusual. A friend of his happened to be somewhat of a coin specialist and he mentioned the fact to him.

The payoff time came when the specialist, after a bit of investigation, informed him that the coin had a rare coin market value of $450. So now Mr. Kootz is firmly convinced that Chevrolet dealers truly offer more for your money.

SCHOOLS

Keller, state superintendent of education, who was asked to "so advise your several superintendents."

Some educators had expressed the fear there would not be sufficient money available for full terms this year. Additional revenues were provided for public schools through the two per cent luxury tax passed by the recent special session of the Legislature which became effective March 1. School finances were further augmented by enlargement of the educational trust fund. Schools receive three-fourths of the net revenue from the sales or luxury tax.

The text of the Governor's letter to Dr. Keller follows:

"Confirming our conversation, this is to advise that I am assured that there will be sufficient revenue during the current fiscal year to pay educational appropriations in full, and I wish that you would so advise your several superintendents."

"Therefore, the schools must run the seven months for grammar schools and nine months for high schools."

the plans of the legion in Alabama to aid in the subscription campaign, said:

"You are familiar with the great work President Roosevelt has been doing in behalf of the crippled children, and we are sure you want a part in honoring that great humanitarian who has through the years manifested a great interest in the rehabilitation of the victims of infantile paralysis."

"The American Legion, Department of Alabama, at its annual convention, held in Huntsville last August, unanimously adopted a resolution endorsing the movement for the erection of the hospital for crippled children, and to dedicate it as a living memorial to President Roosevelt. We are enclosing a copy of this resolution and ask that you present it to your membership and give them a chance to contribute to this worthy cause."

Department Adjutant D. Trotter Jones, under whose direction the legion campaign will be conducted declared:

"The movement to honor President Roosevelt through the medium of a hospital to help the afflicted child is the greatest monument that could be conceived in my opinion. The President has done much towards aiding the unfortunate victims of infantile paralysis and nothing would please him more than the realization of this great hospital in Alabama such as is planned to help the crippled child. I hope that the name of every legionnaire in Alabama will be found on the enrollment blank and that a 100 per cent subscription will be recorded."

The letter also enclosed enrollment sheets to list every donor and the amount contributed. The forwarded to Department Jones and made payable to Velt Memorial Association.

Organized labor is already working in its subscription of Alabama, according to R. H. director-general of the rotary W. O. Hare of the State Federation of labor organizations active in the State has appointed to solicit funds for the hospital.

Under the direction of the Commission, a committee of Governor Bibb Graves is soliciting contributions from playmates for the hospital.

Various county organizations the State are also pressing a "drive to the finish" quotas, according to Mr. S.

Local Young Man To Leave Soon For Tour Of Europe And Six Weeks Study In Germany

June 13th of this year will be a red-letter day for Joe Hall Johnson, of Clanton. He leaves New York City on that date on the steamer "Hansa" for an extended tour of European countries and a six weeks stay and study in Germany. He is the son of Mrs. Arthur Johnson and the late Dr. Arthur Johnson.

At present Joe Hall is a pre-medical student at the Vanderbilt University in Nashville, Tenn. Mrs. Johnson spent several days at the University recently to discuss the proposed tour with Dr. Franks, German professor there, and who will conduct the tour carrying twenty-five of the college students.

The main feature of the trip will be a six weeks stay in Germany. They will visit France, Belgium, England and Switzerland. The return trip to the states will be made on the "Bremen," the flagship of the North German Line. The party will arrive back in New York on August 18th.

The itinerary calls for one of the most interesting and educational visits ever made by a group of Southern students.

LAY DAM PREPARING FOR GOOD BASEBALL TEAM THIS YEAR

According to business manager R. D. Woodson, Lay Dam is preparing to put another first rate baseball team on the field this year. The field out at Lay Dam has been graded and leveled, and it is now one of the prettiest parks anywhere around. And if ever one of the boys hits a long one over the dump around the edge of the outfield, somebody can get on his bicycle and go after the ball—it'll go a mile.

Mr. Woodson stated that negotiations are underway to secure some of the best baseball talent in the state, including several star players from college teams. He did not know just when their season would open, officially, but said that practice would begin in the very near future. And advanced information on all games this season will be given full advertisement in the county papers.

YOUTH VICTIM OF GUN LAST SUNDAY HERE

Wilton Gillespie, Age 16, Used Shotgun To End Own Life Instantly

Wilton Gillespie, age 16, was Chilton County's second suicide victim within a month, when he ended his life last Sunday night at the home of his grandfather, J. Dudley Collins, just east of Clanton on the Lay Dam road.

The body of young Gillespie was found in a bedroom of the home by his sister, Wilma, who heard the gunshot and rushed to see what the trouble was. A double-barreled twelve gauge shotgun was used, with a stick to push the trigger. Only one barrel was discharged, the entire load taking effect in the chest.

Coroner J. Mell Martin, who investigated, pronounced it suicide. Young Gillespie is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James B. Gillespie and a student at the local high school. He is also a grandson of W. H. Gillespie, former (Continued to Back Page)

Mitchell Dam Is Now Attracting Many Visitors

Chilton County's main beauty spot, Mitchell Dam, on the Coosa River, is rapidly taking on its spring dress as visitors are already marveling at the beauty of that place.

Immediately upon entering the grounds, one sees the scene change from wooded sections to one of beauty brought about by a combination of the wooded section and the diffusion of flowers and shrubbery.

Azaleas are in full bloom over the village and the yards of the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Hollis are a treat to see and a rare pleasure to visit. The view from the front porch and yard of the Hollis home, overlooking the huge power dam and the river, brings exclamations of wonder from those who visit there.

In a few weeks more, Mitchell Dam will take on more colors and beauty through the arrangement of the beautiful flowers of many kinds that have been planted at spots throughout the village and around the attractive homes there.

Mr. Hollis, superintendent of the dam, extends a cordial invitation to visitors to drive through the village during the summer months.

County Cooperating With State To Complete Hard Surface

The work of hard surfacing the highway from Clanton to Selma will go forward without delay, according to a statement issued this week by Judge J. Lee Smith, who stated that a trade had been completed with the State Highway Department to complete this road.

The Commissioners Court with Judge Smith recently called on the officials of the highway department in regard to this matter and the nine and two-tenths miles which is now the only unpaved link in the road, will be completed.

Representative C. B. Cox stated that the highway department informed him they were pleased to cooperate with this county in this work and that it would go forward as rapidly as possible.

When this link is hard-surfaced, the entire highway to Selma will be hard surfaced as Dallas County has already paved to their county line.

Baby Is Abandoned At Conway Home

A fine, eight and one-half pound baby boy was found Saturday morning about six o'clock on the front porch of the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Conway, in the Isabella community.

Unclothed and wrapped only in a towel, a blanket, the baby was in a pasteboard box. Mr. Conway stated he remembers hearing a car or truck stop in front of his home about one o'clock Saturday morning but gave it no thought until he found the baby. He brought it to the Central Alabama Hospital here where it died after, apparently of exposure.

The body was carried to the funeral parlors of Martin & Sons, where it was embalmed and held for several days. Hospital attaches stated the baby was about a day old and in sound health other than the exposure it suffered during the cold night.

Mr. Martin, of Martin & Sons, funeral directors, stated the child would receive a decent burial if no one claimed the body.

He Outlived His Fame

"Rear Admiral Richmond Pearson Hobson, Spanish-American war hero, was buried with high naval honors in Arlington National Cemetery today."

This brief press notice, inconspicuously located, appeared in the daily press of the nation recently. To most citizens whose years are less than forty it meant little. But to our readers of middle age and beyond it brought back vivid recollections of a deed of heroism which captured the imaginations of the American people 40 years ago.

Curvera's fleet was under siege in the harbor of Santiago, Hobson, a youthful naval officer, conceived the idea of obstructing passage of the harbor by sinking a ship in the channel. Accompanied by seven heroic followers he directed the collier Merrimac into the harbor under the shadow of a land battery. The Merrimac was sunk and it partially closed the harbor. Hobson and his men made their escape from what looked in advance like almost certain death. Praise of this amazing exhibition of personal heroism, this dramatic expression of patriotism which so captures the imagination, rolled forth from press, from stage, from pulpit and political platform. He became the hero of his day.

And now a later age has forgotten his desperate and highly patriotic achievement. As briefly as they can put it, the news writers refer to him as the Spanish-American war hero.

It makes us wonder about this thing called fame.

O-O-O

Handbill Con'trol

An interesting controversy arose in a small city like Clanton where the approach of spring made home owners conscious of the handbill nuisance. First a rigid handbill ordinance prohibiting the distribution of all circulars from house to house was considered.

But a few merchants and several distributing agencies from a nearby city of larger population raised a protest. Their issue was finally met by compromise. Handbill distribution was permitted at homes where owners placed a suitable receptacle at the door. This plan eliminated the general nuisance created when handbills are left on porches and at doorsteps and allowed to blow promiscuously throughout the residential district with every wind.

There remained some objection to the plan. Those distributing agencies and promoters of handbill advertising realized that it would deprive them of the opportunity to claim full, 100 per cent coverage. But most advertisers recognize that this argument is specious anyway.

They see piles of dirty, rain soaked handbills lying on lawns and porches too frequently not to realize that the best of circulars is read only by a small proportion of the citizens of the community. They know that some plan of controlling handbill distribution would meet with popular endorsement, and would bring no injury to any legitimate business.

O-O-O

Let's Try It Now

"There is one way to encourage the 'buy at home' idea," observes one of our friends. "It is up to those who advocate such a policy to practice what they preach."

Example is more convincing than argument. If the business people of Clanton will demonstrate their interest and loyalty to the community by patronizing home institutions whenever possible, the general public will quickly follow suit.

Let's heed this suggestion now. It involves no sacrifice. In nine cases out of ten the home institution can serve your needs much better.

The Spirit Of The Constitution

Approximately a century and a half ago a delegation numbering many of the greatest minds of all time assembled in Philadelphia ostensibly to revise the Articles of Confederation. A dismal future faced the nation they had fought and worked so gallantly to bring into being. The thirteen states were rapidly assuming the character of independent sovereignities, and all the animosities that arose between citizens of one commonwealth and those of a neighboring state threatened the very life of the young nation.

The Articles of Confederation under which they were loosely bound proved to be quite inadequate to prevent a reign of interstate anarchy. So sitting in secret session throughout a summer they drafted the Constitution of the United States in order to create a government with power to serve the people. They recognized the necessity of a strong centralized state. To accomplish this they managed to win some powers formerly held by the independent states.

They took one of the greatest forward steps ever taken in all history. They were the liberals of their time. They were men who saw the need of a government of power and authority to preserve the blessings of liberty and democracy.

The motives that prompted their action and the purposes to which they adhered with steadfast courage, are identical to the motives which prompt the Administration of President Roosevelt in asking for a more liberal Supreme Court and an application of the spirit rather than the letter of the constitution to our present day problems.

The very men, we firmly believe, who oppose the President's program today and laud the framers of the constitution are of the same type and mind as the conservatives of the earlier days who denounced the constitution because it robbed the states of their rights and powers.

When we analyze this constitutional issue and when we endeavor to apply the sayings of men long dead to issues before us now, we fall into a serious error. The economic and social structure of our nation has changed so materially during the life of the constitution that a new application of the letter of the document must be made to preserve its spirit.

The editor of this paper is among those who approve the President's program because we believe that the political philosophy of the founders of our government would view present day problems and issues in the light of conditions that now exist. For it must be realized that they, too, were men who were ready and willing to depart from dead tradition when the welfare of the nation hung in the balance.

O-O-O

The Lives Of School Children

The ghastly disaster in New London, Texas, which claimed the lives of about 700 school pupils has stunned the entire nation. Scarcely a normal individual can read of that appalling loss of happy, young lives without a mist in the eyes or a huskiness in the throat.

But hideous as the disaster proved to be, the tragedy was small in proportion to the continuous toll of youthful lives on the streets and highways of the nation. The seriousness of the traffic death rate, however, has never been impressed upon us with equal dramatic force because it spreads across a greater range of time and space.

A young life is crushed beneath the wheels of a rapidly moving truck in one city, a school girl is run down by a reckless driver in another location, a vivacious boy riding on a sled or coaster wagon becomes the victim of another accident in some place remote from the one recorded a few hours before. And frequently and regularly of such tragedies have made our sensibilities calloused.

These so-called unavoidable accidents will, of course, continue to take place regardless of the volume of editorial space devoted to the subject. But careful education of boys and girls on the elements of safety and effective enforcement of traffic regulations plus the inculcation of an interest in safety among automobile and truck drivers will save the lives of thousands of school pupils every year.

There is little we can do about such unexplainable disasters as the New London, Texas tragedy. There is something we can all do about the greater tragedy, namely the accident toll on our highways.

O-O-O

Fortunately the people of this country, now know how to win a war. That is to stay out of it.

MORAL ECHOES

D. W. Haskew

One day an Irishman visited the circus and while strolling about over the grounds he came upon a giraffe as he stood with uplifted head. In wonder and amazement the Irishman looked the giraffe over and then said to himself: "And by faith, there ain't no such animal." Once in a while I hear people talking about automobile manners. I am by that like the Irishman was by the giraffe; "There just ain't no such eyes and yet he could not see. Hundreds of folks gather at wrecks along our highways; they look upon battered cars and bruised humanity, all caused from a drunken driver and yet they say: "I see no harm in whiskey." When will folks see the harm of whiskey and stop the flow of it. No harm in whiskey, then, there is no harm in a rattlesnake.

It is said that in Asia Minor before the days of matches the women of the village would get up at daybreak and look out over the housetops in the community and see where smoke was coming from a chimney. Where this was seen they would know that fire was there and they would rush to that building to light their torches and bring fire back to their own hearth. They only went to the homes where fire could be found. When people are in search of light and sympathy, when they want their own hearts warmed and lighted, they never fail to look abroad for someone in whom they have confidence. They are looking for a life that is on fire with the Christian light and to them they go for help. When we keep the Christian fire burning in our own hearts people will come from near and far to have their own fires rekindled from the light of our lives. If they are not coming to you, better examine your own heart. Your light may have gone out.

It is said of a certain minister that he was taken suddenly ill. His condition was rather serious and the doctor called in a nurse who had but a little experience. Her ignorance caused her to be a novice at her trade. In order to keep her chart as instructed by the physician, she went about taking the preacher's temperature. Not knowing the difference between a thermometer and a barometer, she took the latter and after much effort finally got it located in the preacher's mouth. She waited for a period and then took the instrument from the minister's lips and proceeded to read, "dry and windy." One day I was sitting in the pew and while a certain Divine was in the pulpit, I applied the barometer to the preacher's message and it read "dry and windy." That is one reason why some folks do not attend church; they do not like dust storms.

A Jew and a Scotchman went to church together. Not either one had a strong inclination to face a collection plate and so they agreed to enter the church just a half-hour late. They were sure that the collection would be over at that time. The house being well filled they were ushered down to the front seat to enjoy the sermon of the pastor. When the message was over the preacher announced that they had deferred the collection to the close of the service. He made an appeal for a silver collection for a very worthy cause and asked that each one donate a silver dollar if possible. Both the Jew and the Scotchman saw that they were in the bad, being on the front row and all eyes were on them to start the silver dollars rolling. Their heads went close together in a consultation and when the private conference was over the Scotchman fainted and the Jew picked him up and ran out of the church with him in his arms. Thus they escaped the collection. For all I know when folks come to church late it is that they may escape the collection plate, and sometimes I like to take up a collection at the close of the service just to see them keel over.

While on my vacation I entered a hotel on the top of a beautiful mountain peak. I went into the parlor to gain a view of the distant hills and valleys. Sitting there was a man and I remarked to him how beautiful was the scenery upon which I was gazing. The man remarked to me: "It may be beautiful, my friend, but I am blind and cannot see it." Of course my sympathy went out to him as he sat there in the presence of untold beauty and yet he could not see it. While in a man's place of business I remarked about the curse of whiskey and this fellow replied: "You preachers are all the time ranting about the curse of whiskey but I see no harm in it." There was another poor blinded man. His blindness was more pitiful than if he had been physically blind. He had

FARM SEEDBEDS GIVE BEST COTTON STANDS

Fertilizers should not come in contact with the planting seed, warns J.C. Lowery, extension agronomist, in advising that a firm seedbed is important in getting a good stand of cotton.

"Many farmers are losing money on their cotton crop through bad stands, due in part to planting on loose seedbeds and allowing seed and fertilizer materials to come in contact," he says.

"The House With Nobody In It"
I go by a poor old farmhouse with Whenever I walk to Sufferin along the Erie track
I go by a poor old farmhouse with its shingles broken and black. I suppose I've passed it a hundred times but I always stop for a minute
And look at the house, the tragic house with nobody in it. I never have seen a haunted house, but I hear there are such things: That they hold the talk of spirits, their mirth and sorrowings. I know this house isn't haunted, and I wish it were, I do; For it wouldn't be so lonely if it had a ghost or two.

This house on the road to Sufferin needs a dozen panes of glass. And somebody ought to weed the walk and take a scythe to the grass. It needs new paint and shingles, and the vines should be trimmed and tied; But what it needs the most of all is some people living inside. If I had a lot of money and all my debts were paid I'd put a gang of men to work with brush and saw and spade. I'd buy that place and fix it up the way it used to be, And I'd find some people who wanted a home and give it to them free. Now a new house standing empty with staring windows and door, Looks idle, perhaps, and foolish, like a hat on its block in the store. But there's nothing mournful about it; it cannot be sad and lone. For the lack of something within it that it has never known. But a house that has done what a house should do, a house that has sheltered life, That has put its living wooden arms around a man and his wife. A house that has echoed a baby's laugh and held up his stumbling feet Is the saddest sight, when it's left alone, that ever your eyes could meet. So, whenever I go to Sufferin along the Erie track I never go by the empty house without stopping and looking back: Yet it hurts me to look at the crumbling roof and the shutters fallen apart For I can't help thinking the poor old house is a house with a broken heart. Don't let your house be a house with nobody in it.

The Club stood and repeated the 4-H pledge and sang. Mr. Ivey gave out some project record books and papers on caring and feeding of animals. He also told about the kinds of fertilizer for cotton and corn and explained different things on feeding hogs and cattle. We took up too much time in explanations to have a program. Method Of Applying Fertilizer Important Frequently cotton planting is delayed in the spring by inability to obtain fertilizer or by the time required to make the fertilizer application, and the delay often results in a late crop and reduced yield.

When fertilizer is applied just previous to planting germination of the seed may be destroyed or delayed if it is applied in a narrow stream two or three inches directly beneath the seed.

Results from investigations made at southern experiment stations in recent years show that the efficiency of fertilizer in cotton production is determined largely by the method of application and the position of the fertilizer with reference to the seed.

When fertilizer was placed in narrow bands directly beneath the seed, germination was reduced, resulting in poor stands and lowered yield. No injury to seed occurred when fertilizer was placed about two inches to each side of the seed and slightly below the seed level.

Farmers can avoid fertilizer injury to germination by applying the fertilizer 10 days to two weeks previous to planting and thoroughly mixing it with the soil.

Experiments have shown that the nitrogen-potash side dressing should be made immediately after churning for best results.

AAA CITES REGULATION ON STATUS OF TENANTS

The Agricultural Adjustment Administration may withhold any 1937 benefit payment if the landlord or landowner makes any changes in the status of tenants for the purpose of diverting any payment to which tenants or sharecroppers would be entitled if the 1936 leasing or cropping arrangements were in effect in 1937.

In calling this to the attention of landlords and landowners, C.A. Cobb, director, Southern Division, cites the following paragraph in the regulations for the cotton Division:

"If the Secretary, upon the basis of an investigation by the State Committee, finds that any person has for 1937 made any change from the 1936 leasing or cropping arrangement for the farm or has adopted any other device for the purpose of, or which would have the effect of, diverting to such person any payment to which tenants or sharecroppers would be entitled if the 1936 leasing or cropping arrangement were in effect for 1937, the amount of any payment which otherwise would be made to such person may be withheld in whole or in part."

Tales and Traditions from American Political History

FRANK E. HAGEN and ELMO SCOTT WATSON

AN EARLY "BLACK LEGION" ON TREES were posted mysteriously squares of paper, black, or white or red, summoning men to midnight meetings. At these meetings there were oaths and grips and pass-words.

That was more than three-quarters of a century ago, but members of the "Black Legion," who created such a furore early in 1936, would have felt pretty much at home in those meetings back in the forties and fifties. There they would have fraternized with members of "The Supreme Order of the Star-Spangled Banner," a secret society which grew into a political party, the Native Americans, with a platform of opposition to foreigners, the papacy, infidelity and socialism.

Later they became known as the Know Nothings because, when a member was questioned about the order, he invariably answered "I don't know." In New York and Pennsylvania they elected several men to congress and in 1847 they held a national convention at Philadelphia. There they nominated Gen. Henry Dearborn for vice-president and recommended, but did not formally nominate, Gen. Zachary Taylor, the Whig candidate for President.

In 1854-55 the Know Nothings carried Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New Hampshire, Kentucky and California and looked forward to the election of 1856 with high hopes. Soon the party threw off its secret character and it became apparent that they were mostly Whigs. In February they held another convention in Philadelphia at which they formally renamed their party the American party. They nominated for President Millard Fillmore, the Whig vice-president who had served all but one month of the term to which Zachary Taylor had been elected, and gave him for a running mate Andrew Donelson of Tennessee, the ward of "Old Hickory" Jackson. Fillmore carried only one state in the election which sent James Buchanan, the Democratic candidate, to the White House and the Know Nothings passed out of the political picture soon afterwards.

Farmers Urged Grow Plenty Feed Crops

Since feed costs represent approximately 50 per cent of the cost of producing milk, farmers should make a sincere effort to reduce production costs during 1937 by producing as much feed as possible at home, advises F. W. Burns, livestock specialist of the Alabama Extension service.

"Each dairy cow will require two tons of legume hay, such as alfalfa, soybeans or peavine per year," he says.

"If silage is available, 3 tons of ensilage and 1 ton of legume hay will make a more economical and satisfactory ration."

"In addition to the above roughage, each dairyman should provide 15 bushels of corn and either 15 bushels of oats or 500 pounds of velvet beans and 500 pounds of cottonseed meal per cow."

"This will furnish sufficient feed for a cow producing 250 to 300 pounds of butterfat per year if 2 acres of good pasture are furnished to supply roughage during the spring, summer and fall."

OLD COUNTY FAIR IDEA URGED AGAIN FOR COUNTY IN LETTER

Dr. V. J. Gragg Writes On Interesting Subject For This County

Following is a letter from Dr. V. J. Gragg to the editor of the News in which he touches on one of the interesting subjects of the county and a letter which will no doubt bring back memories of the old county fair ground here:

"In the good old times when our farmers were, maybe, more free and independent; we used to have a county fair, in Clanton, every fall. J. N. Dennis, Dudley Collins, W. T. Bean and some others, I believe, obligated themselves to finance the project and put it over, without loss to themselves and with a great benefit to both our farmers and business men, especially the farmers.

"I have been saying for years that this should be revived. I believe that it would help our farmers in many ways as individuals, and would help to advertise our town, our county, and the central section of our state.

"It would help to make our farmers better farmers, they would have a chance to check on themselves and compare their products with that of others. They and their wives, and their boys and girls, could have a chance to "show off" their handi-work without the expense, time, and inconvenience, necessary to go farther away. Then, if they so desired, this fair could be a kind of "clearing house" where they could select the "very best" to be "carried on" to larger fairs later in the season. This one should be held rather early so its best exhibits might be shown elsewhere later if desired.

"Now, since our farmers are so "rich" and live in such "luxury," and help to

KEEP YOUR PROFITS Growing

Use POTASH IN YOUR COTTON TOP-DRESSER

WITH careful seedbed preparation, fertilization, and selection of seed, you have planned a cotton crop which will carry through to profits in 1937. Keep those profits growing. Only vigorous, healthy plants will withstand rust and wilt and mature a full crop. COTTON RUST IS POTASH HUNGER. Results at the South Carolina Experiment Station show that where cotton rusts, extra potash is needed. The Arkansas and Mississippi stations report that liberal potash applications not only control rust but reduce the amount of wilt. If your fertilizer at planting time did not contain ample potash, use 50-100 pounds of muriate of potash per acre in your nitrogen-potash top-dresser. It is important that the top-dresser be applied immediately after chopping.

Consult your county agent or experiment station on your soil requirements. See your fertilizer manufacturer or dealer about nitrogen-potash top-dressers. Write us for further information.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our appreciation to our many friends for their kindness and sympathy shown during the illness and death of my husband, T. C. Hawkins, also for the beautiful floral offerings.

LETTER OF THANKS

Dear Father:

The writer desires a small space in your paper to express his unexpressed gratitude for the contribution of the good citizens of Clanton for the vault expense of Mrs. Mollie Scott's grave. It was a sad day and there were so many more bills to pay that her son had no means of buying the material. The writer proceeded to raise the amount from the good people of Clanton. I called on thirty-three men for help and thirty of them responded. We can never forget their kindness and I am sincerely proud that I was born and reared in Chilton County—in the midst of a friendly people.

We can't find words to express our thanks for the kindness that was manifested. We thank Brother Jeff Best for his service in erecting the vault.

The names of those who contributed are as follows:

S. A. Jones, Walter Popwell, Mr. Barger, Charlie Cox, Mr. Bean, G. C. Armstrong, Willie Culp, Mrs. Robert Popwell, Murray-Bell Hardware, S. N. Davis, Dick Hayes, J. B. Tiffin, Sheriff J. R. Hardy, Monroe Parrish, Morris Williams.

Mr. Dickinson, Mr. Kliner, William Billingsley, Bill Fiquette, Chas. Ward, Erion Chasteen, Grady Reynolds, Mr. Teel, Marvin Marcus, J. Z. Mims, Chas. Raspberry, Marvin Durbin, Mr. Levine.

Sincerely,

N. H. CULP.

Local Citizen Writes About Sales

Editor, Chilton County News: As the sales tax question has been the subject of much writing in full swing, and as I am a merchant who is trying to collect as required by law, I would like to let the public know what I think of this law.

The law, as passed by the Legislature and approved by Bibb Graves, the merchants to collect the tax, keep a complete record of his sales without compensation, in penalty of five hundred dollars for six months in prison, if the merchant fail or refuse to collect said tax.

This law, as I see it, places the merchant directly into involuntary servitude, which our constitution says not exist within the United States.

The constitution says, neither any involuntary servitude as a punishment for crime where the party shall have been duly convicted shall exist within the United States. Notice the language, says, "neither any involuntary servitude." I understand this language, in involuntary servitude has the same strength as it does slavery.

Is not the merchant forced upon penalty and without pay to collect tax, and does not that put him directly into servitude?

If this tax law will stand a constitutional test, why not have another session of the legislature, and the Negroes of Alabama back slavery. I think one will be just a constitutional as the other.

What has our Chilton County merchants to say on this question? We submit to this service as a Negroes to slavery back in the colonial days? I would like to hear the merchants on this important question.

Respectfully,

A. A. JACKSON

Among the things Mrs. Helen Ak of Chicago told a judge here last week was to take her for a ride just so he could toss her wearing in the water in her presence.

Geo. C. Polk Attends Big International Motor Truck Meeting

Mr. Geo. C. Polk, of the Polk Bros. Motor Company has just returned from Birmingham where he was guest at a big dealer meeting of the International Harvester motor truck organization. The occasion was the announcement of an entirely new line of international motor trucks.

Mr. Polk is most enthusiastic about various improvements incorporated in the new Internationals. The complete new line consists of twenty-six models in seventy-seven wheelbases, with gross vehicle weights ranging from 4,400 to 62,000 pounds. They include conventional four-wheel units, six-wheelers, with both dual drive and trailing axle, and cab-over-engine types. Powerful truck engines, numerous wheel-bases, a variety of rear axle ratios, two-speed rear axles, and multiple-speed transmissions, especially in the heavy-duty models, permit accurate selection to satisfy many special hauling needs.

Mr. Polk also stated that much was said at the meeting about International Harvester's expansion of research, engineering laboratory, manufacturing and proving ground facilities. The two big truck works in Fort Wayne, Indiana, and Springfield, Ohio, were enlarged by addition of new buildings and new, modern machine equipment. At Fort Wayne, an axle manufacturing unit with 125,000 square feet of floor space was built. Engine production departments were also enlarged. At Springfield Works, where light-duty International trucks are manufactured, new buildings totaling more than 300,000 square feet of floor space were erected. These include a new assembly unit, one of the most modern in the automotive industry. There are three parallel assembly lines, each almost 1,200 feet long. Other new buildings provide greatly increased cab, body, and sheet-metal parts production and painting facilities.

"Which Is The Best Nitrate Of Soda?" Is Discussed At Dinner Meeting At Hotel Here

This question was discussed at a dinner meeting at the Thompson Hotel in Clanton, Thursday night, with about forty local business men and farmers and representatives of the Bureau of Chemistry. Mr. J. C. Priddy, of Columbia, S. C., was the principal speaker. To answer the question he made a blackboard talk and gave results of four Southern experiment stations that had made many field tests of all three kinds of soda, to see which is best.

The Georgia Experiment Station, Mr. Priddy stated, had made tests covering four years and reported that Arcadian produced 1,034 pounds of seed cotton per acre, while Old Style produced an average of 1,013 under identical the same conditions.

The Delta Experiment Station, Stoneville, Miss., reports having made thirty-six comparisons over a period of eight years. Mr. Priddy said, during which Arcadian produced an average of 1,274 pounds of seed cotton per acre, while Champion and Old Style Soda, used interchangeably, gave an average of 1,266 pounds, under the same conditions exactly.

In tests covering seven years at the Northeast Louisiana Station, at St. Joseph, sole source experiments gave identical yields with Arcadian and Champion. Both produced 2,988 lbs. per acre. As a result of four years side dressing tests at this station, Arcadian gave 2,103 lbs. seed cotton per acre, while the Chilean Soda gave 2,094 pounds.

In side dressing tests at the Pee Dee Station in South Carolina, Arcadian gave 1,911.3 lbs. of seed cotton per acre, while Champion produced 1,915.7 lbs. per acre. Old Style gave 1,883 lbs. per acre, during the same period.

It should be pointed out, in this connection, that the nitrogen content of Arcadian and Champion is identical. Each contains 16 per cent nitrogen, according to guarantees of the producers. Old Style contained 15.25 per cent when used in these tests. Due to the difference in the nitrogen content, it was necessary to apply 105 lbs. Old Style to provide the same amount of nitrogen standard to 100 lbs. Arcadian and Champion.

While this difference may seem small, it means in final analysis that the farmer applying soda to his crops, must use 2100 lbs. Old Style to give them as much nitrogen as 2000 lbs. Arcadian or Champion will give. Twenty tons Arcadian or Champion supplies as much nitrogen as 21 tons Old Style. When this adjustment is made an analysis the experiment stations all conclude that one nitrate of soda is as good as another, from a crop producing standpoint.

The basis of choice must be made upon the source from which the materials come. Arcadian is a domestic product and is produced in Hopewell, Va. The others are foreign and must be imported.

Hogs Offer Market For Home-Grown Feed

"According to present indications, a ton of pork will be worth as much as 4 bales of lint cotton this fall," says F. W. Burns, extension livestock specialist, in a letter to county agents urging that farmers in every county of the state produce a few litters of pigs for exhibit at hog shows and sales in either Montgomery on September 2-3 or at Birmingham on September 8-9 this year.

"One of the main purposes of the state shows is to provide a market for the litters at prices in line with their value," he says. "The packers have given us their cooperation by promising to pay Chicago prices for all hogs that qualify."

Troop One celebrated its second birthday last Friday night in the form of a banquet. Each Scout invited his girl friend for the event. The Scout Committee and their wives were also present. The tables were decorated with three colors of crepe paper, representing the three parts of the Scout oath. Mrs. Stanley made our birthday cake; many thanks to her. Sandwiches, cake, and cocoa were served. Speeches were made by the Scoutmaster, Mr. Stanley, the Committee men, Mr. Maddox, Mr. Suttive and Mr. Williams. Also Mrs. Maddox and Mrs. Suttive made speeches. Then the Assistant Scoutmaster and Patrol leaders made their talks. Everyone had a fine time.

Thorsby Scouts will give an entertainment next April 9 at the Thorsby Jr. High School. Watch this section next week for details.

Troop One will meet next Friday night at the City Hall at 6:30. —Phares Raybon, Asst. Scoutmaster.

IN MEMORY

On Wednesday, March 10, the death angel carried our dear and loving uncle, T. C. Hawkins, to the great beyond. Clarence was a very ambitious young man, only 32 years of age. He was such a kind, generous person. It being in his power he would befriend anyone he came in contact with. He leaves a sad vacancy in his home in this world but fills a bright one above.

He leaves to mourn his death, his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Hawkins of Clanton; eight sisters, Mrs. J. A. Lewis, Mrs. G. W. Smith, Mrs. O. L. Camp of Birmingham, Mrs. J. W. Cooper, Mrs. J. G. Blankenship, Mrs. Mack Stephens, Miss Rena Hawkins of Clanton, Mrs. John Farmer of Central and one brother, Mr. Deason Hawkins, formerly of Birmingham and now of Clanton and a host of friends and relatives. He was laid to rest in the Poplar Springs cemetery with Martin & Sons in charge. The Rev. W. P. Lowery conducted the funeral service. —His Niece, Callie Cooper.

CCC CAMP

Walker, who serves in the capacity of Educational Advisor. Lieut. Walker needs no introduction to the people of this section. He was for a number of years Coach in the local High School where he was rated as one of the most efficient men ever to serve on the faculty of this school.

Under the supervision of these men a most important work is being carried on. Farmers are being aided in the control of erosion through the Soil Conservation Department. The Camp grounds have been improved and lights have been installed at the entrance to the grounds.

To Hold Open House April 5

Commemorating the fourth anniversary of the CCC the local camp will hold Open House on April 5. On this day the public is being extended a cordial invitation by the officials and enrollees to visit their camp and inspect the various departments and view the work that is being carried on. "We want the people to fully understand the work and purpose of the CCC," said Lieut. Graham. "We want them to realize that the purpose of these camps is to train young men so that they will be better fitted to accept their discharge," he concluded. Reports show that an average of four people are receiving benefits from the salary of each enrollee at this camp.

Many Interesting Departments

At Camp Headquarters, accurate reports are made out on the work being carried on and sent to Washington. A large chart showing number of enrollees in camp and those with leave of absence is kept by Lieut. Graham.

Another interesting department is the Camp Exchange, where candy, cigars, cigarettes, cold drinks, ice cream and other small items may be purchased by enrollees. This department is managed by one of the boys who is allowed a certain percent of the profits made from the sales, besides his regular salary. Coupons are issued assigned by Lieut. Walker. This library contains at present 43 different kinds of magazines and over 400 volumes of books of various kinds.

In the reading room one finds a well kept library where enrollees may go to read or study lessons assigned by Lieut. Walker. This library contains at present 43 different kinds of magazines and over 400 volumes of books of various kinds.

On through the recreation room, where games of various kinds are provided, including pool, checkers, etc., we come to the exhibit case, where articles made by the enrollees in the manual training department are placed. Any enrollee in the camp may make any item of furniture he may desire, as long as he furnishes the material. He is allowed to sell these articles, or send them home to relatives or friends as he may desire. Several nice cedar chests have been made by the boys in recent weeks. It is interesting to note that practically all furniture—chairs, tables, book cases, etc., in each building was made by the boys of the camp. Although not as comfortable and pleasing to the eye as that purchased from a furniture store, they serve their purpose well, and the boys have the satisfaction and pleasure of knowing they were made by their own hands.

The supply house where clothing for the enrollees and linens for the barracks are kept is well managed. Through the man in charge these items are checked out when needed. The barracks are well kept and spotlessly clean. Prizes are often given to the ones having the most orderly barracks.

Upon the walls of almost every building can be seen portraits of the man who is the idol of every enrollee of this camp—the man who made this great work possible—President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Soil Conservation Department

In the office of the Soil Conservation Department, a map of each field is treated for soil erosion is drafted by a young engineer. He is at present working on a map of the entire county which, when completed, will aid greatly in this work. The camp has at its disposal 13 trucks and other equipment necessary in this work. A modern blacksmith shop for repairing and sharpening tools is maintained. A well trained mechanic, whose duty it is to see that the trucks are in top running condition, is on hand at all times.

Nursery

Some time ago thirty-five acres of rich land were leased by the Government for an up-to-date nursery, and already several kinds of young pine trees are growing. After one year's growth in this nursery these pine trees are shipped to different sections of the country where they are transplanted for reforestation and erosion control. At the time of this writer's visit plum seeds were being planted. These plum trees will be shipped to the Wildlife Conservation, Department of Agriculture, where they will furnish food and shelter for wild birds. This nursery is located just south of the camp.

An hour's tour of this camp and its projects will be well spent and will leave with the visitor a clearer vision of the work and purpose of the CCC.

Miss Mamie Truett recently returned to her studies at Huntington College in Montgomery after spending some time here with her parents.

WORK OF LOCAL CCC CAMP GETS FINE RESULTS

Local Erosion Camp Brings Aid To Farmers; Helps Save Farm Lands

Trees—the long-time remedy for erosion—have been planted. 28 acres of steep and badly eroded land as one phase of the erosion-control program in the Soil Conservation Service area near Clanton, Ala.

During the planting season just ended 452,000 trees seedlings were set out on the farms of cooperators, bringing the total planted in the area to 1,067,175. Black locust and pine were the principal species used.

Although control of erosion is the main purpose of these plantings, the black locust will provide valuable fence-post material within a few years.

Other species will furnish a continuing supply of fuel and farm lumber through.

MAN FATALLY STABBED HERE

Odis Wilson Held Charged With Murder Of His Brother-In-Law

Odis Wilson, of Clanton, is being held in the county jail here on a charge of murder in the fatal stabbing and cutting of his brother-in-law, Noah Chadwick, age 38, last Sunday night at Chadwick's home in the Gowan Addition.

Wilson and Chadwick are said to have engaged in a fight in the home and Chadwick received deep cuts about the body causing his death within a short time after he was rushed to the hospital here. A young daughter of Chadwick's was also cut on the arm when she attempted to stop the fight.

Wilson waited at Chadwick's home until an officer arrived and Deputy Sheriff J.A. Nivens brought him to jail. No preliminary hearing for Wilson has been set, as it is understood the case will be turned over to the grand jury of the county.

Funeral services for Chadwick were held Tuesday morning at Shiloh Church with the Rev. J.W. Lowery officiating and Spigener Funeral Home in charge of burial.

He is survived by his widow, five children, Tommy, J.B., Mary Esther, Pauline and Emma. His father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. G.M. Chadwick; Polly Shaver and Miss P. one brother, E.L.; four sisters, Mrs. Dovie Price, Mrs. Cora Lee Lockhart, Mrs. Polly Shaver and Miss Jessie Chadwick.

Judge and Mrs. J. Lee Smith motored to Montgomery Sunday to meet their daughter, Lillian, who spent the week end in Andalusia with Miss Barbara Brooks.

1,850 Persons File Past Body Of Abandoned Baby Saturday; Funeral May Be Held Today

Although his parents did not seem to want him and tried in a most unreasonable manner to dispose of him, the little abandoned baby boy had one thousand eight hundred and fifty visitors last Saturday—while he slept the everlasting sleep in his little casket at the funeral parlors of Martin & Sons here. His handsome little face, his well groomed dark hair and his well developed body which was clothed in a white dress, brought sorrow, sympathy and silence as the 1,850 persons passed by his casket during the day.

The little fellow, his name is not known, was found in a crude pasteboard box, poorly wrapped, on the front porch of the home of Mr. and Mrs. J.D. Conway, in the Isabella community, two weeks ago. He died after being rushed to the Central Alabama Hospital here—apparently frozen to death.

J. M. Martin, of Martin & Sons, funeral director, took the body, embalmed it, dressed it and placed it in a little casket. It was being held with the hope that someone would claim it.

The little fellow, even though he will never know, will be given a decent burial—funeral services, flowers and all. Mr. Martin stated if the weather permitted, the funeral will be held today, this afternoon, at two o'clock at the grave in the city cemetery. Dr. S.J. Ezell, pastor of the Clanton Baptist Church, and the Rev. J.M. Truett, pastor of the Clanton Methodist Church, will conduct the brief services.

ALBERT DAVIS DRIES CAR IN COOSA RIVER

Was Popular Clerk In Well Known Drug Store In Clanton

CAR AND BODY FOUND LATE LAST TUESDAY

Tragedy stalked again in Clanton Tuesday when Albert Davis, age 32, well known and popular young business man, drove his automobile off the ferry on the Rockford road and was drowned.

Davis had his job to go to lunch at his usual hour Tuesday and must have driven right on down to the ferry, which is about fifteen miles from Clanton, just below Mitchell Dam.

R.H. Guyse, operator of the ferry, and other witnesses who saw the car on the ferry. A representative of a wholesale drug house who knew Davis, and who had just driven off the ferry stated that Davis apparently intended driving into the river, judging from a remark he made just as he drove onto the ferry. Without halting his car, witnesses say, Davis drove right on into the guard chain on the ferry breaking it.

He was well known and liked in Clanton, having been employed at the Aired Drug Company for a number of years, and comes from a well known Clanton family.

Volunteer crews in motor boats dragged the river for several hours Tuesday afternoon and about six-thirty o'clock hooked the car which had landed a short distance from the ferry. The body of Davis was found between the front and back seats of the sedan. Spigener Funeral Home brought the body to Clanton to be prepared for burial.

While no note was reported left by Davis, Coroner J. M. Martin, who made a careful investigation, rendered a verdict of suicide and the ferry operators exonerated of any blame for the car going off the ferry which carries a strong guard chain.

Funeral services were announced Tuesday night by Spigener Funeral Home and were held yesterday afternoon at two o'clock at Bethel Church near the home of Davis. The Rev. J. S. Kelley officiated.

Davis is survived by his widow, the former Nina Gillespie, daughter of former Sheriff W.H. Gillespie, and children, Nina, Mary, and John. Shelley Davis of the Enterprise community and other relatives.

'Ginger' Jane
Only Honorary
Air Hostette
Title Is Conferred During Christening Program Of "California"
Jane Withers, whose new Twentieth Century-Fox picture, "Can This Be Dixie?" opens Thursday at the Wadesonian Theatre, is probably the most air-minded young star in all Hollywood. This because of the honors which have been showered on her, literally "from the skies!"
Recently, at the christening of the new giant aluminum air flagship, "California," "Ginger" Jane was made honorary chief air hostette, the only person to hold such a title in the whole world.
It was from no other person than President C.R. Smith of the American Air Lines that the youthful star received her title, accompanied by the customary insignia of silver wings and a hostess uniform. An engraved certificate, attesting to the diminutive star's new honors, was also handed her. President Smith announced that he was having her title copyrighted so that Jane would be the only person to enjoy it.
Immediately following the ceremony Jane entered upon her official duties—the first tickets she accepted being from the youngest member of Parliament, Mr. Roland Robinson, and his wife. Needless to say the Robinsons extended an invitation to their air hostette to visit them, whenever she should be in London.
"Ginger" Jane's air honors did not end here, for a few days later, she received notification from the Women's International Association of Aeronautics that she had been made a full-fledged "Zoomer" in that organization. She received her membership card in the Junior Division of this noted association from its president, Mrs. Ulysses Grant McQueen.

GOOD PICTURE COMING TO WADESONIAN THEATRE
One of the motion picture stars of the season, "Can This Be Dixie?" is Slim Sumner. He will be shown at the New Wadesonian Theatre in Clanton tonight. The picture stars little Jane Withers, the most popular juvenile stars on screen. Slim Summerville will be supporting cast.

MEMORY OF G. W. WILSON has gone to rest, voice will hear no more, enter that home so blessed the golden shore. Oh, how we'll miss you on our fireside at home, has left earthly care and sorrow, sweet paradise to roam, joyful eyes and aching hearts break the last good bye, in will meet to never part pleasure never dies, always patient and kind and true, our Saviour thought it best to let him home in glory, we the weary all find rest, Oh, how we'll miss you as assemble as of yore, leaving voice no more to greet us, we enter your door, you one from us has gone, voice we loved is stilled; is vacant in our home, never can be filled, Oh, how we miss him,

Each hour of the day, Oh, how our hearts do ache Since Jesus took his soul away. God loved Daddy, So he called him home To be an angel, Around the great white throne. We miss him here, We miss him there, We miss him about the place, We miss him everywhere— And God will give him grace. —Written by his daughter, Mattie Lou.

Less Monthly Discomfort

Many women, who formerly suffered from a weak, run-down condition as a result of poor assimilation of food, say they benefited by taking CARDUL, a special medicine for women. They found it helped to increase the appetite and improve digestion, thereby bringing them more strength from their food.

Naturally there is less discomfort at monthly periods when the system has been strengthened and the various functions restored and regulated.

Cardul, praised by thousands of women, is well worth trying. Of course, if not benefited, consult a physician.

Our Life's Work." Those present were especially interested in discussing the question of whether or not a Christian can enter and remain in just any occupation. Inez Duke of Randolph was the leader.

Sunday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock an Executive Council meeting of the Christian Endeavor was held in the Social Room of the Congregational Church. Reports of the meetings and work of the various committees were given by the committee chairmen. Suggestions as to how the work of these committees could be more easily and efficiently done were given by the President and Pastor.

Last Saturday night at the Thorsby Institute auditorium was held the last meeting of the Helen Keller Literary Society. President Wants Permanent CCC

Washington, April 5.—President Roosevelt asked Congress today to authorize a permanent Civilian Conservation Corps of 300,000 men.

Immediately, some legislators demanded that provisions be made for a larger enrollment.

Representative Johnson (D), Oklahoma, said he would make a "tremendous effort" to keep the CCC personnel at its present authorized strength of 350,000.

He said a House Democratic steering committee, of which he is chairman, would meet tomorrow to discuss the President's suggestion.

Mr. Roosevelt asserted, in a special message to the Congress, that with "improved business conditions" 300,000 was the maximum enrollment that could be expected.

"To go beyond this at this time," the President said, "would open new and difficult classifications of enrollment, and the additional cost would seriously affect the financial position of the Treasury."

Representative Rayburn of Texas, the Democratic leader, agreed with the President that money for 350,000 might be hard to find.

Johnson expressed belief the President was not "determined" to keep the enrollment at 300,000.

Chevrolet Finds Many Interesting Facts In Developing Cars; Sounds Unusual To Layman

In a business the size of the Chevrolet Motor Company, many interesting facts are developed and through the Chevrolet Co. local dealers are made known to the public. These facts are: Chevrolet is the only car in the world that has a total amount of material moved by the car, out of the traffic lanes? So is the battery cover?

The radiator core of the new 1937 Chevrolet is removable without the removal of the radiator grille—an innovation?

If a whole year's traffic were loaded in one train of box cars, with you standing by the engine, and the train started ahead and kept moving constantly at average freight train speed of 15.9 m.p.h., you would have to stand there more than 12 days and nights before the end of the train was in sight.

Chevrolet shattered all previous records in truck sales for six consecutive months in 1936, delivering more than 20,000 trucks per month during that period and making a total of 205,000 trucks placed into owners' hands during the model year?

Not one bolt, rivet, screw or nail is used in the construction of the new Chevrolet bodies? The solid steel turret top, steel double cowl, steel body panels, and steel floors are formed into an integral steel structure by the new unisteel construction? The body is assembled entirely by welding?

If all the cars that the Chevrolet traffic department alone delivered to dealers in 1936 were loaded on standard highway trailers, and these trailers were lined up bumper to bumper along the Lincoln Highway, they would reach from New York to Salt Lake City with

Rural Rehabilitation Is Help To Farmers

Rehabilitation loans and debt adjustment of Chilton County's distressed farm families is playing an important part in halting the rapid increase in number of tenant farms, says Marvin Durbin, county rehabilitation supervisor, Resettlement Administration, Clanton, Alabama.

More than one-fifth of the 153 farm families under the rehabilitation program in the county are progressing toward full ownership of their farms through the aid of a farm plan and loan and debt adjustment. Restoring these farms to a productive basis enables continuance of purchase contracts and gradual liquidation of mortgaged indebtedness.

While four-fifths of the rehabilitation families in the county are on a cash rental, lease or share-crop basis, the assistance being provided through rehabilitation is laying the foundation for placing tenant farmers on a self-sustaining basis. This constitutes the first step up the ladder to farm ownership.

Now opportunities for the 2,237 tenant farmers reported in Chilton County in the 1935 agricultural census, to start the climb toward ownership is expected to result from tenancy legislation now before Congress.

Seriousness of the tenancy situation in the nation as a whole is seen in the fact that less than half of the farmers own the farms they operate and tenant farms are increasing at the rate of about 40,000 a year.

Farmers Are Testing Phosphate Fertilizers

Asburn, Ala. — A total of 15,000 farmers in the seven Tennessee River Valley States, Alabama included, are cooperating with Land-Grant Colleges in testing the value of experimental phosphate fertilizers in an improved land use program on 2,233,556 acres of land, according to reports received by the Alabama Extension Service.

These fertilizers are being produced for test purposes by the Tennessee Valley Authority at Muscle Shoals, and are available for application only on sod forming pastures, hay and cover crops.

Work And Progress Of Local Citizen In The CCC Camp Here Is Praised By His Office

There are few Chilton County young men enrolled in the local Civilian Conservation Camp, and one of them has made much progress while there, he has brought praise from other enrollees and officers of the Camp.

He is W. J. Cummings, who comes from one of this county's well known families. He enrolled in the CCC on April 15, 1936, and after going through the conditioning period, whereby he was prepared for real service and work, Cummings was turned over to Mr. James H. Wood, Project Superintendent of the Company. His duties were to work in the field.

In this work, Cummings has proved to be a successful leader among the men and on August 15th of last year, he was appointed to the grade of Assistant Leader. And, in addition to his regular duties as Assistant Leader, he is the leading barber of the local Camp.

His record in that organization has been an excellent one, according to his superior officers and his rise to the place of Assistant Leader and camp barber has been a rapid one. Officers of the Camp deem it most gratifying to have men of the calibre of Cummings as members of the local Civilian Conservation Camp.

TRAFFIC DECENTRALIZATION PROMOTES HIGHWAY SAFETY

It is popularly thought that wide highways are the answer to highway safety. But that is not necessarily so, Earl M. Hearne, Secretary of the Alabama Petroleum Industries Commission, pointing to a recent report of the traffic engineer of New Jersey, found that the accident rate per mile on the main highways of that state was four times that for the secondary roads and that the wider the road the greater was the accident peril.

"Highway safety engineers throughout the United States are coming to the conclusion that the way to highway safety lies in the decentralization of traffic," said Mr. Hearne. Many have concentrated their available funds in building expensive superhighways on five or ten per cent of road mileage of the state, but neglecting to improve the secondary roads. The effect has been to concentrate traffic on only a small part of the mileage of the state. Such concentration of traffic, it is believed, is in a part responsible for the growing number of highway accidents in the States.

The experience of New Jersey and other states shows that the policy of confining road improvement to a small part of the mileage not only increases accidents on the roads because of traffic congestion but the accident rate on the secondary roads is increased because neglect causes many road hazards. The money spent on the secondary roads goes a long way in making safer.

Since five or six miles of secondary roads can be built for what one mile of the so-called super-highway costs, it is possible to give a more choice of several roads to drive with no increase in the road cost. Motorists have several roads to reach their destination, instead of being crowded on a single road. By decentralization highway safety is promoted.

WORK WITH CRIPPLED CHILDREN IN COUNTY HAS GOOD RESULTS

1936 Work Report Is Given; Other Cases Await Treatment

The work that is being done for the crippled children of this county is bringing about some fine results, according to the local committee in charge of this splendid program, and as is shown by the 1936 report.

This work is supported by the sale of seals at Easter time and these seals were sold here this year. Following is a summary of activities of this committee for 1936:

CASE A—This child has tuberculosis of the hip. She is 9 years of age.

CASE B—This is an 8-year-old girl. She has had infantile paralysis and is receiving treatment for this. At the December 1936 clinic in November, Dr. Skinner reported that she was walking very well—continue same treatment.

CASE C—This boy has received a period of hospitalization but our records are not complete on him.

CASE D—This is a 9-year-old boy. The father of this boy works in the spinning room of the Alabama Mills. Boy has club foot, right, and has received an operation recently for this trouble. Condition satisfactory at present.

CASE E—This is a 6-months-old baby with congenital club foot, right. She has received treatment and is progressing nicely.

CASE F—This six-months-old baby has a congenital deformity of the lower and of right tibia. Has had x-ray and is receiving treatment at present.

CASE G—This is a 9-year-old boy whose father is a farmer. This boy has an abscess on hip of six months standing. He has recently been receiving treatment for this condition.

F.F.A. Meeting

There will be a district F.F.A. meeting held at Clanton Friday, April 16. There are a number of schools that are going to attend. They are as follows: Shelby County High, Clanton; Weogufka, Goodwater, Marbury and Jemison. One boy from each place will make a speech on any agricultural topic. The winner of the district meeting will enter the state meeting this summer.

Bad Weather

Owing to the rainy weather the big game of the season was called off. We were sorry to hear this because we were expecting to see a real game of class and speed.

There will be a game here Friday afternoon at 3:15 o'clock—Clanton High and Montevallo High. Both teams seem to have had some stiff practice and it is expected to be a good game. Clanton and Montevallo are strong rivals. Last year one of the best games of the season was played by them. Clanton has good prospects of giving a good fight. Don't miss it.

Track Meet

There is going to be a track meet here soon. Mr. Duncan is working on it, and we feel sure if any one can get it worked out he can. You will hear more about it later. There will probably be several different contests to enter—you should try your luck.

Well, boys we hate to admit it but it looks like we're in for a full term of school. This information comes from the higher-ups.

Mr. W. C. Lester has resigned his position as history teacher of this school. His successor has not yet been named.

Monday morning of this week we had as a chapel speaker, Dr. S. J. Ezell. Everyone seemed to enjoy his speech, "Successful Living" We cordially invite Dr. Ezell as well as any other speakers, to visit us any time they wish.

Mr. Evans spent last week end in Birmingham.

High School News

Last Friday several high school students were excused to see "As You Like It," a play written by Shakespeare in early days. Some students have been studying this in literature. It was decided that it would be very educational for the students to see the picture.

The students wish to thank Mr. Wade for his kindness shown at this time.

As You Like It

This may seem like an April fool but it isn't. By some reason there happened to be about 20 pupils absent April 1st. We can not say if all had legal excuses, but we are sure some of them have and probably some of them haven't. This is what causes people to talk about our school and teachers. May we ask—how can teachers control the students when the parents don't themselves.

Program in Chapel

The Junior Three Class put on a very interesting program in chapel. Monday and most everyone enjoyed it very much.

The program was demonstrations of how much some of the teachers had taught the students. Mr. Duncan must be popular with the students and from the demonstration given he doesn't seem to be able to teach them much.

The Thorsby Public School will receive one-half of the money. Please don't forget the time and place.

Saul M. Goldstein

The little aluminum discs with the hole in the center have become part and parcel of our lives already. Hardly a day passes but that someone has another story to tell about them, a joke which involves their use, or a new name for them. Hardly had they been on the street an hour when some wag had nicknamed them "bibbies." Our suburban newspaper, The Birmingham News reported that a Talladega woman had discovered an excellent use for them—in paying off contract bridge debts at a tenth of a cent a point. My own experience tells me (but of course, I'm no Culbertson) that he who plays contract bridge for a tenth of a cent a point doesn't have to pay off in tokens. Another inventive mind discovered they would produce paper cups when inserted in the penny slots on railroad trains; and still another master mind informed me that they would phone as a genuine quarter of a dollar. Then again, they make excellent poker chips: for where, may I ask, can one find poker chips sold as cheaply as one thousand for a dollar? Little children who have acquired the habit of playing with nickels or pennies may be bought off with tokens. Salesmen have approached me with devices for holding them in such a way as to make it easy to make change with them. Yes, they have come to stay, and have made themselves quite at home.

I had expected a different outcome. The popular feeling against the sales tax at the time of its passage was such that one would naturally expect each little token to arouse a lot of resentment in the citizen who had to handle it. But instead, Mr. Average Citizen makes a joke about it; and no matter how bad a thing may hurt, nobody can get worked up over it when he is cracking a joke about it. If you laugh at something, sooner or later you will like it.

Now that we have it with us, it isn't such a terrible thing after all. It does confuse a cashier on a busy day; and sometimes it does take a combination Philadelphia lawyer and Certified Public Accountant to figure out the change due a customer whose tax includes tokens; but we get used to things like that and psychology teachers always did tell me that the continuance of any pain has an anesthetic effect on the pain itself.

Two years ago next Tuesday, on the occasion of Thomas Jefferson's birthday, the Democrats of the City of Henderson, where I resided previous to coming to Clanton, got together for a general party celebration, and invited as the guest speaker, the Hon. Ruby Laffoon, then governor of Kentucky, and the first state governor (by his own admission) to have introduced the general retail sales tax into government economies. The primaries were approaching, and Mr. Laffoon was sponsoring a colleague of his who supported the sales tax, against the candidacy of his lieutenant-governor, "Happy" Chandler, who opposed it. He made one telling argument which I have never yet found any one to refute: he asked, in his booming oratorical voice, "Under what other system of taxation can you make out your own tax bill?"

There isn't any other yet. With property taxation, a government assessor makes out your bill; even income tax piles high against your will. But the sales tax is up to you: if you don't want to pay a high tax bill, you

ALABAMIANS MAKE GOOD

In view of the political news of the past few months, the question arises, what would Oklahoma do if it weren't for Alabama?

Josh Lee, the new United States senator from that State, is a native of Childersburg, Ala. The new Federal district judge at Oklahoma City, Alfred Murray, is a Jenison, Ala., boy, and the Oklahoma gentleman appointed by the President to the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals is a former Methodist circuit rider from Pike County, Ala., named Robert Lee Williams.

These names happen to have been in the news lately, and how many other Alabamians have made good in Oklahoma in less publicized fields than politics we don't know.

Were Horace Greely advising Alabama youth today, doubtless he would say, "Young man, go to Oklahoma."—Birmingham Post.

Nitrate Of Soda; Facts About This Disputed Fertilizer Important

From Cobb County Times, Marietta, Ga.
In view of the present controversy raging around the merits of certain brands of nitrate of soda and because this type of fertilizer is extremely important in aiding the farmers of Cobb County to get the most for the money they spend, The Times believes it pertinent to cite some facts in the case, for the guidance of those who are purchasing their year's supply now.
A press bulletin from the Georgia Experiment Station, signed by R.P.
Bledsoe, of the Department of Agronomy, discloses some valuable information thereon. Because Mr. Bledsoe is one of the leading Southern experts on the subject of fertilizer and is an unbiased authority, his statements should be of a type on which the farmers can rely.
He writes,
"The Georgia Experiment Station has over a four-year period conducted tests comparing Old Style Chilean nitrate of soda with Arcadian nitrate of soda. Based on the guaranteed analysis of the soda was applied at the rate of 32 pounds of nitrogen per acre, or 206 pounds of Old Style Chilean compared with 200 pounds of Arcadian.
"The average yields over the four-year period were 1034 pounds of seed cotton per acre from the Arcadian nitrate of soda plots as compared with 1013 pounds from the Old Style Chilean nitrate. The difference in yield was only 21 pounds of seed cotton per acre in favor of the Arcadian nitrate of soda. This small difference is attributed to experimental error.

Is Nature's Way Best?

SCIENCE OFTEN BETTERS NATURE
It's natural for houses to get struck by lightning —
It's natural to get sick —
It's natural for plants to grow wild —
It's natural for cropped land to grow poorer —
BUT — modern science helps you solve these problems.

SCIENCE MAKES BETTER NITRATE OF SODA THAN NATURE— SCIENCE GIVES YOU MORE FOR YOUR MONEY IN ARCADIAN, THE AMERICAN NITRATE OF SODA.

Every farmer knows that just because a thing is natural doesn't mean it is the best that can be.
That very thing is also true about nitrate of soda.
Some years ago, American scientists set about for a way to improve on nature and make a better nitrate of soda. They knew that the reason farmers bought nitrate of soda was for the nitrogen in it, and they figured that if they could make one that would have more nitrogen in it, they would do a service to the farmer.
Millions of dollars were spent, and finally they produced a "soda" right here in the South that was more perfect than any that had ever been produced before by Nature or by Man.
That product is known as Arcadian, The American Nitrate of Soda.
It gives more nitrogen for the money than any other "soda". And Nitrogen is what your crops need from nitrate of soda.
So, you see, Science has once again improved on Nature for your benefit.
When fertilizer makers buy nitrate of soda for their mixed goods these days, they buy Arcadian because they know nitrogen is what "soda" gives them, and they want the most for their money.

So why don't you do the same?
When you buy Arcadian, you not only buy wisely, but you are buying an all-Southern product—made in the South, by Southerners, for Southern crops.

A Statement by Dr. H. H. Zimmerley
Director, Virginia Truck Experiment Station, Norfolk, Va.
"To the already heavy load of the American farmer there has been added the fear of deficiency diseases caused by lack of minor elements. Secondary elements... except in specific cases, are either supplied abundantly by the ingredients commonly used in compounding mixed goods, or are present in sufficient quantities in the soil."
From a paper delivered before the National Fertilizer Association, June, 1935

ARCADIAN THE AMERICAN NITRATE OF SODA

MADE IN THE SOUTH

Station reports a similar experiment conducted at the Pea Dee Experiment Station. In this experiment the yields were practically identical, the difference being only 4.6 pounds in favor of the Chilean nitrate of soda.
The Mississippi Delta Experiment Station has also conducted experiments with different sources of sodium nitrate. Here the difference in yield was 9 pounds of seed cotton per acre in favor of the Arcadian nitrate of soda. Again this slight difference may be attributed to experimental error.
The New Jersey Experiment Station has conducted experiments comparing the Old Style Chilean nitrate of soda and chemically pure nitrate of soda. Moving pictures of these experiments have been shown in this state. These experiments were conducted in water cultures or sand cultures and the results do not apply to field conditions.
"Except for the fact that the Arcadian nitrate of soda contains about one-half per cent more nitrogen, the above results show that the two sources of nitrate of soda are of equal value under field conditions for growing cotton."
Extravagant claims, thus, of any great difference between the foreign (imported) Chilean nitrate of soda and the American (Arcadian) brand are not based on fact. The experiments, if anything, give a slight edge to the American brand (manufactured by a secret process from the nitrogen contained in air).
More important than any argument as to the merits of various sodas is another group of findings reported by Mr. Bledsoe and his associates in a bulletin issued this year from the experiment station and entitled "Cotton Fertilizers for Georgia Soils."
In 1928, the Georgia Experiment Station and the United States Department of Agriculture started extensive experiments on cotton fertilizers in this state. There are now a total of five locations at which tests are being regularly conducted. A summary of the results of these tests thus far is found in the bulletin named above.
Farmers should be interested to learn quoting from page 8 of the bulletin, that:
"By adding 3 per cent nitrogen to a fertilizer, profits from the fertilizer were increased 367 per cent and when 6 per cent nitrogen was added, profits were increased 719 per cent."
If there is any ingredient which seemingly adds magic powers to a fertilizer it appears to be nitrogen, which is obtained in almost pure form from commercial nitrate of soda. Other ingredients help, but not in the proportion that nitrogen does. On page 13 of the bulletin this is borne out by this statement:
"The investment in nitrogen returned a profit of 345 per cent on the investment as compared with an 8 per cent return on phosphoric acid and 167 per cent on the potash investment" in one experiment conducted.

In still another series of tests the report declares that:
"When an additional amount of nitrogen is added to a fertilizer, the return on phosphoric acid and potash is increased only $9.31 per acre, there is no question as to what investment would be made."
The data further show that water-soluble fertilizer was used approximately 81 per cent of the time and was due to the nitrogen, 9 per cent to phosphoric acid, and 10 per cent to potash.
Scientific investigation and the use of facts found in this manner by the farmer in producing better paying crops is the only salvation of agriculture. The discovery of the value of nitrogen in boosting cotton yield is an outstanding example of how the farmer may profit from science.
This final paragraph, taken from page 16 of the bulletin quoted above, sums up the case for nitrogen:
"Nitrogen in the natural organic form costs from three to four times as much as soluble but non-leaching forms from inorganic and synthetic sources and is no more efficient pound for pound of nitrogen. Cottonseed meal, tankage, fish scrap, etc., in fertilizers cost the Georgia farmer over $1,000,000 and for most crops could be replaced by mineral nitrogen costing $300,000."

pert legal authority, but was the first official word regarding possession in dry counties.

No liquor may be manufactured or sold in dry counties. This is specifically prohibited by the Alcoholic Beverage Control act under which the A. B. C. Board will establish State liquor stores in the counties which have been declared dry.

On March 10, 1934, the state-wide local option election was held. Asst. Atty. Gen. Garrett, as follows:

1. Alcoholic beverages, including liquor, legally purchased in a wet county in Alabama, can be legally possessed in a dry county in Alabama.

2. Since the act places no limit on the amount of alcoholic beverages, including liquor, that can be legally purchased in a wet county, there is no limit, so far as provisions of such beverages, so purchased that may be legally possessed in a dry county in Alabama, so long as the same are not possessed for the purposes of sale or distribution.

The control act provides that no liquors, wines, rums, gins or other "hard" drinks may be purchased from sources other than State stores and qualified hotels, clubs and restaurants.

The board may license clubs, hotels and restaurants to retail liquor and wine for "on premises" consumption in wet counties but the beverages must be purchased from State stores. These establishments may buy at 10 per cent discount from the regular store prices.

Carmichael's official opinion said that while the control act prohibited sale, manufacture and distribution in dry counties "nowhere in the act is there any prohibition against the possession of legally purchased alcoholic beverages."

"It was very clearly the intention of the Legislature," said the opinion, "that alcoholic beverages, including liquor, legally purchased in a wet county in the State of Alabama could be legally possessed in a dry county . . ."

periodic removal of deformed, diseased, slow-growing, and other undesirable trees. With proper management, the woodland will yield a cash crop of timber.

Either permanent hay crops or trees can be effectively used for erosion control on land too steep or too severely eroded for cultivation. James H. Wood, superintendent, pointed out. Other things being equal, the choice usually depends on the farmer's needs for additional hay or woods to balance his farm program.

Such woodland plantings afford a good illustration of how, though proper and use, erosion can be controlled and a more balanced farm program attained by making each acre serve the purpose for which it is best adapted, Mr. Wood said.

He said that if any heavy drinking is done that it would be wise to stay at home and do it, or find a place to stay in, as officials say they will not tolerate any drunkenness in public places.

Investigation Of Road Department Is Asked

Commissioners Court Passes Resolution Last Week Asking Circuit Judge To Call Special Grand Jury Session Here

A resolution, requesting Hon. Arthur Glover, judge of the Nineteenth Judicial Circuit, to call a special session of the grand jury of Chilton County to "investigate and ascertain the truth" regarding "certain acts and certain matters in reference to the conduct" of T. J. Arledge as road supervisor of Chilton County, was read and adopted by members of the Commissioners Court at a meeting last Thursday.

The resolution, which follows, apparently seeks some method by which Mr. Arledge may be removed from office. Following is the resolution:

"Whereas, the Court of County Commissioners of Chilton County, Alabama, is of the opinion that certain acts of T. J. Arledge, County Road Supervisor of Chilton County, Alabama, and certain matters in reference to the conduct of his affairs in office and of his actions, as a county official, should be investigated by the Grand Jury of Chilton County, Alabama, looking to the removal or impeachment of said official as said body may determine.

"BE IT, THEREFORE, RESOLVED, by the Court of County Commissioners of Chilton County, Alabama, that the Hon. Arthur Glover, Judge of the Circuit Court of Chilton County, Alabama, be and he is hereby impudently and petitioned by the Commissioners Court of Chilton County, Alabama, to call a special session of said Grand Jury to investigate and ascertain the truth of any of such charges and of the acts and doings of said supervisor to determine whether or not impeachment proceedings should be ordered by said Grand Jury, as provided by law, of said County Road Supervisor; he it further resolved that a copy of this resolution be mailed to Hon. Arthur Glover, Wetumpka, Ala.

Members of the Commissioners Court and Judge Lee Smith, had no further comment to make on the matter, other than that they regretted to see steps of this kind necessary.

When asked for a statement, Mr. Arledge said he had no intention of resigning as he had been rumored at one time. Friends and attorneys for Mr. Arledge are welcoming the proposed investigation, it is generally understood.

It is also understood that the proposed investigation as set out in the above resolution grew out of certain irregularities purported to surround a recent tractor purchase deal of the county.

The News was unable to reach Judge Glover or Solicitor Winston Huddleston by telephone Tuesday or Wednesday to secure a statement from them as to whether a special session of the grand jury would be called.

For A Community Of Beautiful Homes

It may not be one of those architectural master works which would harmonize with the estates in Chicago's north shore district or the fine residential sections of New York or Cleveland or any other metropolitan center. It may not attract visitors who will pronounce it one of the finest homes in the entire state.

But you can be proud of your own home, nevertheless, and can well afford to lavish time, thought and care in its beautification. Even a humble home setting back of a hedge of evergreens can be a place of modest beauty and a joy to the eye of every observer, as well as a source of great pleasure to you and your family.

We drove along the streets of Clanton the other day with an eye for the beauty that our community offers. We were elated to realize that our town may well be called a place of beautiful and attractive homes. But there is room for improvement. Some citizens evidently have never given the subject careful attention. The effective use of shrubbery, the correct placing of hedges, the care of lawns and gardens has not yet aroused their interest and enthusiasm.

And to these people we offer a suggestion. Drive about Clanton within the next few days or weeks at the most. Note what many of our citizens have accomplished in the way of home beautification at but trivial expense. See what possibilities lie in the humble home setting gracefully and modestly in an attractive frame of flowers and shrubbery.

Then look your own place over and permit your imagination to soar. Visualize the possibilities of a more carefully planned flower garden, of the effective use of shrubbery around the doorway, of the restful beauty that a new hedge may impart to the entire effect.

You too can have a home of beauty. Now is the time to make your plans.

Creating Mass Consumption

Mass production and mass consumption must go hand in hand. A society which is definitely committed to large scale industry and high speed, mechanized production demands ways an means of encouraging and stimulating mass consumption.

This is where and why advertising plays such a vital part in the modern economic order. It is advertising that raises the standards of living, that teaches people to desire new goods, new services, and a higher level of living.

It is well enough to argue that people will buy everything that modern industry produces if they have the means. But we question that statement. We know of countless numbers of people who are satisfied with out-of-date goods and furnishings and obsolete equipment even when they can afford something better. This number would be multiplied many thousands of times if it were not for the influence of advertising.

Some of these radical thinkers who pronounce advertising nothing more than an economic waste should take another view of conditions about them. The doctrine that the world will beat a path to your door if you build a better mouse trap may sound well in literature, but it does not square with the facts.

Advertising's greatest service is the influence it has exerted to elevate the standard of living, to make people conscious of the pleasure that may be derived from owning the many new things that come from our modern industries.

Advertising, we hold, helps to maintain employment in our major, mass production industries.

The fellow who tries to get everything out of life usually ends up by getting nothing more than high blood pressure.

Democracies Are Successful

Frequently we have heard it said: "What this nation needs is a dictator. It's the one man system that gets results."

But as we read of the trend of events abroad and as we attempt to analyze recent history, we cannot consider this statement as anything but a ready fallacy that goes unchallenged for want of careful consideration.

Dictators may be able to pronounce edicts and secure general and immediate acquiescence. The one man rule, at rare intervals, may be most effective. But the verdict of history is all against dictatorial government.

The efficient nations of the modern world are the nations of democratic or popular government. Great Britain with an empire on which the sun never sets and the United States occupying the first rank among the great powers of the modern age could never have attained such an enviable station in the world without the benefit of popular government and human freedom.

Dictatorships may appear to be efficient on the surface. But popular government and democratic doctrines lead to a release of energy, of ambition, and ingenuity among the great mass of the people. In a land where men have an opportunity to climb steadily to higher levels through their own efforts, there exists a spirit of enterprise of ambition and of initiative that carries the nation rapidly forward along the way of civilization.

Where opportunity is hampered, where men are put into exile or confined in concentration camps for mere political utterances, the spirit of enterprise is suppressed. Men do not dare to go ahead and use their own brains and ability in a land where personal freedom is considered a vice rather than a virtue.

It may be that some of the nations of the old world were forced to accept dictatorship by the remorseless pressure of circumstances. It may be that they feel better under dictatorship than under incompetent and ineffective popular government.

But the history of our time fairly shouts the truth—that dictatorship is not as efficient as democracy; that the successful nations of our time are those which enjoy the benefits of popular rule.

Regular Fellows

After many years of observing people from the point of view of the editorial office, we have concluded that those whose company we enjoy most, who can be counted upon in times of emergency and who are easy to get along with are persons with a well developed sense of humor.

And we might add that this sense of humor goes beyond a mere cheerful disposition or the ability to pass out witty remarks. Our test of an individual's sense of humor is very simple. "Can he take a joke on himself?" we ask ourselves when we seek to measure his qualities.

The person who can laugh with gusto over a joke directed his way, who can take it as well as hand it out, in other words, usually proves to be a pretty good sort of person with a well developed sense of values and the capacity to make judgments with discrimination.

If you wish to have it said of you: "He is a regular fellow with a well developed sense of humor" apply the above formula to your conduct. Can you take it as well as hand 't out.

Patriotism like charity begins at home. To be a good, loyal citizen of our great nation and state you must first be a good citizen of Chilton County.

In a great nation like ours there is little that the average, ordinary citizen can do for the general welfare. In a small community like ours there is much that he can do.

If you are the sort of person who is ready to back and support every worthwhile local project; if you are ardently interested in the future of your community; if you desire to see it a more prosperous and more desirable center in which to live, then you will rank well as a patriotic citizen.

Hence when we seek to preach the doctrine of community loyalty we are in reality talking about something important and something significant. We are talking about good citizenship.

Common sense is never easily recognized. Probably because the person who possesses it doesn't go around with a high hat or a stiff neck.

We are the posterity about which our forefathers talked and worried. As we look about us now we agree that they had reason for concern.

D. W. Haskew

My neighbor had a Canary that would not sing until it had been given its bath. Should its bath be delayed until noon that bird would sit on its perch and sulk as if it had nothing for which to sing. After its bath it would sing all of its notes in a delightful manner. It must have felt clean and refreshed and it could sing with a glad heart. We should have a heart like that. Before our hearts are bathed in the cleansing power of God's fountain of life, we are so defiled, so impure that we have nothing for which to sing. When we are washed clean from sin, from hate, from all selfishness, from all that defiles the soul, then we have cause to sing. A Christian who has been washed and made clean should lift his song on high.

The Organist sat before me and I observed that she was a bundle of action. At every touch the pipes would quiver with melody and music that charmed the soul. She was following the written music before her and the machine was giving expression to every note. All at once she became rigid, motionless, silent and for a moment not a sound could be heard. I did not understand why the period of silence, but later I could understand why. It was a time when music was in the making. The pause prepared the organist and the listeners for the finer music that was to follow. There was a momentary pause and then following this more beautiful music had gone before. It is possible for those pauses in our lives—times when we must be still, to be turned into music in the making. Our Master spent eighteen years making yokes and all this time He was yearning for action. During this time the music of His life was in the making. If you meet a period in your life when you must stop, be still, it is the period in which finer music is being made and you may expect the finale to follow.

One day a lady came to my study for a conference. She was all broken up because of criticism that had come to her ears. The more she talked the more hysterical she became. For a few moments I tried to wedge in a word but soon gave up, seeing that nothing I said mattered. I hushed and heard her through. She told me all deep down in my heart I thought that the criticism was true for it was generally known that she assumed the place of a dictator in the church. While she was wiping her eyes and regaining her breath I ventured to ask "My good woman, how much of that criticism is true? Did you not do those things that you have related to me?" She dried her tears and looking me in the eye she said, "Doctor, I never thought of it in that way—all of that criticism is true." That ended the conference and I never heard another knock from that sister's bell. When you are criticized it is a good thing for you to sit down and see how much of that criticism is true before you start kicking off the roof. You may be what folks think and say you are.

One day a little girl was sitting at the table with the grown up. Her mother gave her a glass of ice tea and the little trick started stirring and tasting the tea. After some time she began to cry and her mother asked, "Darling, what is the matter?" She replied, "Mudder, I stir and stir my tea and the sweet will not come up." Then the mother replied, "No wonder my child, your tea has no sugar in it." It was useless for the child to stir for sweetness to come up when there was no sugar in the glass. If you want your life to become sweet as you live it, it will pay you to first of all put a lot of sweetness deep down into your heart. The reason why so many people never have a sweet disposition is because they have never put any sweetness into their inner life. If you have sweetness in your heart as you go into action that sweetness will come into sight.

Well do I remember the days of the old Ford cars. We had one and our car knew all the tricks of the highway in those days. We were making a trip through a beautiful country and I was so anxious to see the beauty of nature, but my car held my attention and effort all the time. Every few miles the engine would sputter and stop, spark plugs would gum up, tires would blow out, the carburetor would flood, the wheel would mire. The old Ford held my attention so completely that I did not even see a dogwood bloom. Our lives through this old world should be a travel where we can see God and a thousand beautiful things, but the most of us are traveling in a way so as to have all of our time and attention absorbed. Life becomes so involved in problems, we have so many blow outs, so many punctures, so many gummed spark plugs, so many mired wheels, that we never see anything that is beautiful and fine. We wear ourselves to a frazzle as we go along and never really get the joy of living. Better get you a better machine for travel than an old model T. Ford, if you want to get joy out of living.

At the height of the recent flood, a 7-year boy was born to Mrs. Carson Haley in a hospital for refugees at Kenowa, W. Va. He was appropriately christened "Noah," because he survived the disastrous flood.

DEATH OF BOWLIN LA MAR RAWLINS

On April 1 at dawn Bowlin La Mar Rawlins died of pneumonia at the Bessemer General Hospital. At his bedside were his devoted wife, Mrs. Zettie Rawlins, his brother, Talmadge, and three of his sisters, Mrs. Willie Lee, Mrs. Paula Smith and Miss Ruth Rawlins.

Gently the angel of death came and carried his loving spirit back to the Father whom he had learned to love and trust when a boy in his teens.

Not mourning as those without hopes but with broken hearts because we will miss him so.

He was laid to rest at Mulberry Baptist Church, of which he was a member. Six nephews acted as pallbearers and services were conducted by the Rev. M. Yates, assisted by the Rev. Tingle of Bessemer.

Those besides his many friends to mourn his going are his wife, one daughter, Mrs. Grady Payne, who was unable to attend because of illness; three sons, Francis Jean, Talmadge C., and Bowlin La Mar, Jr.; one brother, Talmadge C. Rawlins and six sisters, Mrs. Polis Abrams, Mrs. Eugene McCary, Mrs. Paula Smith, Miss Ruth Rawlins, Mrs. Willie Lee of Tuscaloosa and Mrs. Lissie Lee.

Local Men Visit Toy Fair Held In New York

New York City, April 13--With fifteen thousand new toys that will delight the nation's youngsters on display and with an extraordinary large outpouring of buyers from every section of the country, including W.I. Smith and O.M. Webb, of V.J. Elmore 5c, 10c & $1.00 Stores, Inc., of Clanton, Ala., the American Toy Fair is in full swing at the Hotel McAlpin here.

Seven acres of exhibits--the largest display of playthings ever shown in one place--include countless practical things designed to teach youngsters up-to-date developments in various fields. There is a strong trend toward scientific playthings, but toys that suggest the military are remarkably scarce. Prices on an average are 10 per cent ahead of 1936, with buyers eager to place orders to escape a further upswing in prices.

CARD OF THANKS

We gratefully thank our friends and neighbors for their kindness and sympathy shown us during the illness and death of our wife and mother, Mrs. Margaret Ann Howard. We also express our thanks for the beautiful floral offerings. May God's richest blessings reward each one of you.--T. N. Howard and Children.

Summer Tours At Very Low Prices

Roy Brown Tours Offers Selection Of Trips During Summer Months

During the years of the depression people did little or no traveling, but the summer of 1936 saw a large increase in this method of enjoying a summer vacation, and the coming summer bids fair to be a record breaker along this line.

In this issue appears an advertisement of the Roy Brown Tours which offers a number of exceptionally low priced trips. Mr. Brown has made a very unusual invitation in that he is offering trips of the very best at prices far below any heretofore. He is counting on mass movement rather than small parties, and is able to make the prices low because large numbers in the parties make it possible to get lower rates.

Last summer The Alabama Press Association made a trip to Havana, Cuba, and many people took advantage of exceptionally low prices to make the trip. Virtually the same trip is again offered in the Roy Brown Tours for this summer, except that three dates instead of the one afford an opportunity to participate to these whose vacations come at different times. The trips to New York, the circle tour of the West and the trip to Mexico City will all attract much interest. Complete minutes of time devoted to certain items in the Birmingham and the Birmingham Age which have been appearing frequently during the past months would prove both in and profitable to the citizens of Chilton County.

What I Think

not boosting circulation for both of these distinguished items I refer to are executed advertisements selling; and that something is of Birmingham. The advertisements are designed to sell Birmingham to Birminghamians, and to convince them that Birmingham is worthwhile. Birmingham is good, Birmingham is a residence in the last word quarters.

is a convincing air of confidence in these advertisements. The advertisements are backing their belief in arguments. They are fully in hard cold cash, in dollars and cents, to devote that time, space and energy to those advertisements, they wouldn't keep it up. They must be producing results.

Sometimes I wonder if Chilton County folks are sold on their own home territory. Here we have a centrally located county, rich in natural resources, growing faster than any other locality in Alabama. If we think that, believe it, the next step is to preach it, to advertise it and build further on the basis of past progress.

We ought to set ourselves definite goals of achievement, and strive toward them. We have certain needs which can be outlined in no uncertain terms. We need additional housing, modern, up-to-date and solidly constructed, to provide for the increase in population which the community has enjoyed during the past four years. We need new industries to provide more and larger payrolls for future growth. We need an east-west highway to make Clanton the crossroads of Alabama. We need a Public Library to furnish our old and young with cultural food.

Given all these things, there is no stopping the growth of Clanton, and with it the growth of Chilton County. At least, that's what I think.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank all who helped us during the death and burial of our son, Albert.

May God shower his choicest blessings upon each of you, is our prayer.—Mr. and Mrs. J.S. Davis.

MARGARET ANN HOWARD An Appreciation

There are some people who seem to come from the hands of their Creator, especially endowed with those qualities that make up a lovable personality—patience, tenderness, kindness—qualities that produce character which make the world a brighter, happier place in which to live and home a haven of quiet peace and rest. The world is always richer and better when people of this type pass through.

One such person was Margaret Ann Howard (nee Hull) who passed away at her home in Verbena on April 8, 1937. She was a good housekeeper and an ideal homemaker. She was 66 years of age. Her home was her kingdom; her husband, a man whom she could deeply love and respect; her children, their loyal, loving subjects. Her scepter was love and Christ was Lord of all. In her serene, calm, Christian way she made home a fit type of Heaven and her greatest ambition was that her children shall take their places in the family circle at the roll call in the heavenly home. Home meant so much to her that her last words, "I can't stay here, I must go home," revealed her longing for that place of rest and freedom from the torturing pain she suffered.

If I should go looking for Mother Howard in heaven, I would go first to the nursery for she loved children most dearly and was unusually gifted in making them love her. I should expect to find her among God's little folks. If she were not there for the moment, I would go out into God's flower garden and look for her among the blossoming flowers. She loved bright colors. They seemed a natural complement to her happy and sunny nature.

She is lost to us for a while, yet she lives for her family and in the memory of those who knew her. While the nearest and dearest to her sorrow because of her going, they rejoice because of the beautiful life she lived, and the Christian heritage she left and most of all because they expect to meet her again.

She is survived by her husband, T. N. Howard; four daughters, Mrs. Etta Mims, Mrs. Emma Mims, Misses Anna-bell and Edna; four sons, O. L. J. W. and D. I.; two sisters, Miss Ellen Hull and Mrs. Mollie B. Powell; one brother, John L. Hull; twelve grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Funeral services were held at the Methodist Church, of which she was a member. The services were conducted by the Rev. H. C. Bass, her pastor, assisted by Rev. C. M. Ellis and Dr. T. C. Cassidy. Interment was in the Verbena cemetery with Martin & Sons in charge.

After singing "Dixie" the club opened with business session by Mrs. Freeman. It was suggested that our club adopt three chairmen to serve fifteen minutes each with objectives of citizenship, Scholarship and Farm Bureau. Those elected were:

Mrs. E. H. Freeman, Citizenship.
Mrs. Frank Hudson, Farm Bureau.
Mrs. A. A. Culver, Scholarship.

The meeting was then turned over to Miss Grace for demonstrations. Our demonstrator handled very efficiently the subject of canning by the club for extra money, or group canning for the good of the club members.

From this subject she went to the subject of weight, normal and abnormal, also diets being a mother's responsibility along this line, this subject was most interesting and educationally discussed.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. D. B. Johnson on April 14.

So much did Hans Buss of Hendersonville, N. C., think of his collic, Peggy, that when she died he called the undertaker and bought her a costly white coffin with chromium fittings and a plate with name inscribed.

Homesteads Exempt From Taxes This Year

Under a recent act of the legislature homesteads in Alabama up to the amount of $200.00 are now exempt from all State Ad Valorem taxes. The law is in effect on taxes now assessed which will become due on October 1, 1937. An order to this effect from the Governor was directed to the Comptroller Friday and he passed the instructions on to the Tax Assessors and Tax Collectors in a letter which reads as follows:

Dear Sir:

Governor Graves has instructed me to notify you officially that the homestead Exemptions, as defined by the constitution and statutes of Alabama and provided for in Senate Bill No. 5, Governor's No. 107, goes into effect on taxes due and payable on October 1, 1937.

A letter with full instructions will be mailed to you within the next few days.

Yours truly,
CHAS. W. LEE,
State Comptroller.

This simply means that each taxpayer who lives in his own home will be relieved of all State taxes on that home if its assessed value is not over $200.00. If his property is assessed at $200.00 or more he will get $100.00 off on his taxes this year.

The telephone, on your farm, can pay for itself.

Remember: In selling farm products, it is easier to sell at the right time—by telephoning buyers and keeping in close touch with the market.

In securing parts and repairs for machinery, hours and even days can be saved by telephoning.

When sickness threatens your family or your livestock, the doctor and veterinarian can be summoned quickly.

Fire hazards, too, are less dangerous when your neighbors or a nearby fire department can be speedily called upon for help.

More valuable than money is the pleasure it gives the family to keep in friendly touch with neighbors and relatives.

On the farm, you really can't afford to be without a telephone. For information, visit, write or call your nearby telephone office.

FIDDLERS CONVENTION

I've always heard that what happens twice will happen three times. The Editor of our News has been very nice to me lately in filling my requests (two of them). But here I come the third time and want him to announce for me the Fiddlers Convention at Randolph next Friday night, April 16, 1937.

Whether he makes this old adage come true this third time or not depends if I always try to console him by telling him much good he has been in telling the public and by telling him the receipts—which were around $35.00 last Friday night from The District School of Fifty Years Ago. Now, when one fellow can help another that much, I should think both could justly feel proud. If our Editor will just tell the public that there will be a prize for the best fiddler, one for the best guitar picker, one for the best buck dancer and one for the best tap dancer and that the admission will be only ten and twenty cents (performer's admission returned), I say if our Editor will tell these facts to the public and thereby expand this ten and twenty cent admission to $35.00 or $40.00 (for Randolph School, of course), he shall have more stars in his crown because he helped a poor soul who stayed in bed for three weeks with mumps and got behind with his fun. I believe an Editor who could be instrumental in helping a poor soul like me should be given a complimentary ticket together with a load of his friends. His friends, however, need to be people of good conduct, so they won't conduct themselves into the mumps, but everybody's out of danger now, except those who have not had it, or them.

This subject of conduct is a big one, isn't it, Mr. Editor? It always pays one to conduct himself right whether he expects to take the mumps or not. That's the kind of people we want at our convention Friday night, April 16, 1937, at Randolph. Admission—ten and twenty cents.

Yours very truly,
J. HUDSON WILLIAMS.

PROGRAMS OF AMATEURS ARE INTERESTING

County-Wide Winners Will Be Selected Friday Night At High School

The eighteen winners in the preliminary amateur contests which have been recently staged in the county will soon have an opportunity to compete with each other for county prizes, according to those in charge of these tests.

These amateur contests are creating wide interest in this section and are being sponsored in behalf of a most worthy cause, the crippled children of the county. All proceeds go to this work.

Radio Engagements

The winners of the final contest will be able to secure radio or theatrical engagements provided these can be arranged for. In addition to this, cash awards have already been secured and will be made at the final contest.

On Friday night of this week, April 23, the county-wide amateur contest will be held at the Clanton County High School auditorium beginning at eight o'clock. This promises to be one of the most outstanding entertainments ever to be held in the county from local talent of all kinds.

The three prize winners to be selected Friday night from the group of eighteen winners in the county will receive the cash awards. Winners Friday night in the county-wide contests are to be selected by ballots. Each person in the audience may vote.

Local Young Men Enroll Last Saturday For CC Camps

On Saturday, April 17, thirty-six Chilton County boys were enrolled in CC Camp. This is the largest number of boys to be enrolled from this county at any one time since the organization of the Department of Public Welfare in October, 1935; and we feel that this fact is worthy of note.

Only one boy was recommended for enrollment and rejected because of failure to pass the physical examination.
This, we feel, is due largely to the fine spirit of cooperation shown by our County Health office and physicians in the county. These physicians have provided treatment for boys formerly rejected which enabled them to enroll this time. Locating and treating cases of trench mouth, decayed teeth, pyorrhea, etc., which might otherwise be neglected, are valuable services irrespective of whether the boy is actually enrolled in camp; and the Department of Public Welfare wishes to take this means of publicly thanking the Health office and doctors who have helped in clearing these cases.

Each of these boys sends $25.00 per

MAKING PLANS FOR CLEAN-UP DRIVE HERE

Proposed Plans To Offer Prizes For Best Job Of Beautifying

With Spring definitely here and the minds of most housekeepers turning to Spring housecleaning, there appears in the formative stage a big cleanup campaign for the entire city to be pushed by Clanton's two newspapers and others interested institutions.

Business houses of the city are expected to come into the campaign and cooperate with property owners of the city in placing special low prices on material needed for the campaign such as paints, mops, brooms, lumber, etc.

Prizes Offered

A feature of the proposed campaign will be the offering of cash prizes to the most outstanding job done during the period set out. The City of Clanton is expected to contribute largely to the drive to make Clanton a more beautiful city this summer.

Great Possibilities

With the continued growth of Clanton and the civic mindedness of its citizens, there can be seen some splendid possibilities to make a good showing during this clean-up program. The citizens of the city are expected to fall in line with the idea and make Clanton one of the brightest little cities in the state.

More definite information will be given in next week's issue of the News regarding this plan.

MEETING HELD THURSDAY FOR REGISTRARS

Health Representative Is Speaker At Kiwanis Club Luncheon

A meeting of the local registrars of vital statistics of Chilton County was held in the office of the County Health Unit on Thursday afternoon of last week. This meeting was presided over by Mr. Leonard V. Phelps, State Registrar of Vital Statistics. The purpose of the meeting was to discuss with the local registrars the various duties connected with their offices, and to impress upon them the importance of having all birth and death certificates filed with them, and of having the certificates filled out correctly.

On Thursday evening Mr. Phelps was guest speaker at the meeting of the Kiwanis Club. In the course of his speech Mr. Phelps emphasized the importance of registering every birth and death that occurred in the county.
He stated that on many occasions persons attempting to legally establish their age were caused much inconvenience and delay due to the fact that a certificate of their birth was never recorded.

Mr. Phelps is Director of the Bureau of Vital Statistics, a Bureau of the State Health Department. In this capacity he also serves as State Registrar of Vital Statistics.

FAIR PRICES ARE EXPECTED FOR THIS CROP

First Car Left Clanton Last Munday Going To Detroit

RAIN WOULD AID CROP THIS WEEK, REPORT

Chilton County is showing off big this season in the shipping of strawberries, being slightly ahead of south Alabama's famed crop. While the picking and shipping of berries is not yet in full swing, Clanton has already shipped one car by rail to Detroit. This car was loaded Monday and officials of the local berry association state they expect the car to net approximately $3.50 to $3.65 per crate for the growers.
Clanton also shipped the first quart crate of this entire section this season.

During last week, approximately 200 crates were trucked into Birmingham for marketing there. Buyers are on the grounds here and officials of the
A&P Stores stated they expect to buy Chilton County berries to some extent this year.

It was hoped that two more cars will be loaded here today. This is not definite as the News goes to press.
Thorsby will get underway with shipping this week also, it is understood.

Crops May Be Good

Local growers are anticipating a good crop of berries this season as with a little more rain this week the berries are expected to start rolling in rapidly. The only drawback to this that can be seen now is that other berry growing sections may start full shipping at the same time, flooding the market and lowering prices.

ANOTHER GETS FINED FOR PARKING NEAR FIRE HOUSE

Another person was arrested and fined one dollar in city court for parking in front of the fire truck station at the city hall this week, according to Mayor Jones.

Mayor Jones stated that sufficient warning had been given against parking in front of the fire truck station and that each offender hereafter would be subject to heavier fines.

other articles. Players are invited. Admission will be ten cents.

View The Brighter Side

"Nothing will ever be accomplished if all possible objections must first be overcome," declared Dr. Samuel Johnson, noted wit and sage of the Eighteenth Century.
Nothing will be accomplished by an individual in his own activities when fear of unpleasant possibilities stifles initiative. Nothing will be accomplished in any community for the welfare of all of the citizens of Chilton County if we focus attention only upon the difficulties which must be surmounted and the complexities which must be simplified.
It is not intelligent, of course, to turn from all realities and difficulties which may lie ahead, but to consider only the objections leads to stagnation and we would not call that the highest expression of intelligence.
Many a worth while enterprise proposed here in Chilton County has died at birth because some citizens insist that all possible objections must first be overcome.

This Handbill Nuisance

You have put in a lot of work this spring cleaning and trimming your lawn, removing dirt and rubbish from your premises, and, taking care of miscellaneous other jobs to make your home as attractive as possible. During the course of this work you have been compelled to rake a lot of sodden paper out of your lawn and away from your shrubbery. Most of this came to your place in the form of hand bill advertising.
We assume, therefore, that you are vitally interested in this subject of handbill distribution and the value of handbill advertising. Is it worth the trouble it causes? Can you retain its benefits without the nuisance which inevitably accompanies it?
We all agree that retail advertising is of great value. It helps you buy to greater advantage. It tells where to get the merchandise you want. It directs you to bargain which make possible many substantial savings.
But in our opinion most of this information can be conveyed to you through the columns of your local newspaper. The newspaper is not left on the doorstep to fly hither and yon throughout the residential area with every gust of wind.
Our first suggestion, therefore, is that merchants distribute their sales messages through the columns of the newspaper. Our second suggestion favors the adoption of some ordinance which eliminates the nuisance.

In hundreds of communities anti-handbill measures are being adopted. Most of them are very drastic. They prohibit the distribution of circulars of any kind under any circumstances. They have been enacted upon the insistent demand of home owners.
But we have no desire to advocate such extreme measures. To forestall such action we submit a moderate course which meets the standards of common sense.
Let there be an ordinance permitting handbill distribution only to homes where a suitable receptacle is provided. This eliminates the nuisance which follows the promiscuous distribution of circulars. It provides every citizen who desires to get such advertising the opportunity to receive it. It leads to no loss to merchants because advertising matter which is not wanted is of doubtful value.
We suggest that those citizens of Clanton who are exasperated over the handbill nuisance urge the adoption of such a plan.

We All Owe Something

"Why should I trade at home. I do not get my living from the merchants of Chilton County. I do not feel that I owe this community anything. I can buy where I will."
This remark, typical of many statements we hear from time to time, is not difficult to answer. Those who express such notions have never paused to consider just what they do owe the community in which they live.
Though your business may be such that you are not directly dependent upon the community, you derive a thousand and one benefits made possible by the existence of a prosperous community supported by loyal citizens.
The schools in which your children are educated are maintained by the community as a whole. The merchants to whom you feel you owe nothing contribute heavily to their operation.
Our churches which provide not only mental and spiritual stimulation but offer you many delightful social contacts, are maintained by the citizens of the community and the merchants of Chilton County are ever ready to do their part.
Our local government which protects your person and property, which regulates traffic in our streets, which fights the spread of fire, which curbs lawlessness is maintained by the community as a whole, and our local merchants contribute a substantial part toward the cost of this service.
Our social and service clubs which provide you with many delightful social contacts are maintained by the citizens of the community and especially by its merchants.
My good friend, we could continue this indefinitely. We trust, however, that you are now convinced that you are a part of our community, that you owe something to its development, and that the support you extend its business houses is certainly nothing more than a fair and just contribution in return for the many favors and benefits which you receive.

The Way Of The World

"Ingratitude more strong than traitors' arms," has vanquished the enthusiasm, the altruism, and the optimism of countless thousands of people since Shakespeare penned that immortal oration which he attributes to Mark Anthony.
Newspaper men encounter it almost daily and become cynical. Lawyers, merchants, and doctors, we assume, also will tell you that favors once performed and never expected again cannot be listed among the good will assets.
The merchant extends credit when it is greatly needed. The customer deserts him forthwith and diverts his cash business to those who were not so kind in his hour of need. The doctor carries a patient through a dangerous sickness. Great is the praise from the patient and his family until the bill falls due. Then deep is the silence and soon the services of another physician are required when illness strikes again.
And the newspaper man, much as we dislike to air our own troubles, has had many experiences which make him wonder whether there is any appreciation felt for all that he has done in behalf of his friends, for the organizations in which they are interested, and for the community with which all should be vitally concerned.
An organization is formed. At one of its first meetings a publicity committee is named. This committee endeavors to acquaint the public with the aims and ideals of the group through the medium of newspaper publicity. The editor, of course, always provides many a glowing writeup, but says to relate when business is passed around his contribution of effort and space is not always considered.
A celebration is scheduled. The editor freely throws his news columns open to publicize the event. It meets with success, and brings much benefit to the community and its business men. But soon, all too soon in fact, the part played by the newspaper is forgotten, especially if business favors might be returned.
Fifty per cent of the effort of the average editor is expended in promoting community enterprises and organization activities through the columns of his paper. This should be considered when business is passed around.
But we started out to say that human beings are just naturally ungrateful. We realize that we are not the only ones to whom this has been forcibly demonstrated.
Public opinion is a great force for good when it happens to be on that side.
It's a good time to remind some people that Easy and Wall aren't two names for one street.

Graves Speaks Out For President's Proposed Court Changes

Following is an address delivered recently by Hon. Bibb Graves, Governor of Alabama, on a radio hook-up:
"AMERICANS:
"I am glad to join with some of my fellow Governors in a plea for efficient functioning governments in the States and in the Nation.
"The crux of our President's plan for Judicial Reform is 'Shall Government function or fail?'
"Last November, we, the people of the United States, went over the top in the greatest drive ever made to insure domestic tranquility, to promote the general welfare and secure the blessing of liberty to ourselves and posterity.
"The gains made then must be secured and consolidated now or they will be lost.
"Those who believe that the rights of persons come ahead of the rights of things fear this loss through division among the friends of human welfare. On the other side are all of those who put the rights of things ahead of the rights of persons. These hope for a total loss of all those gains and a more apparent reason hope to accomplish their end and nullify the thrice repeated mandate of the people of the United States by disrupting our 'All American Team' by egging each member of the team to abandon all team play and carry the ball himself.
"They don't miss a trick of their trade. They even insult our intelligence by trying to do the dirty work of the rights. Let me tell them that the Christ fore-warned us of the hypocrisy of wolves in sheep's clothing.
"These same wolves have successfully defeated the greatest efforts of the States to exercise their sovereign rights to protect the womanhood, the motherhood and the childhood and the human rights of citizens to have something to live on and something to live for when ever any of these efforts jeopardize the so-called vested interest in 'things'.
"These wolves would have me believe that I can protect the rights of the sovereign State that has made me its Governor by joining with them in ceding away any part of the sovereignty we still have.
"These wolves would defeat, not effect governmental efficiency. They would give us nihilism.
"Let me warn those who were so lately in sack-cloth, and who have been revived by the New Deal too quickly for their own good, that when Samson pulled the temple down the great giant himself was first to go.
"Let me say that there is not enough patriotism in America left over after the last debacle to carry this generation through another such spree.
"These wolves really believe in the good old rule and simple plan that 'He who has the power has the right' and should keep who can. That doctrine is as pleasing to them today as it was to the original Robin Hood, but they are not so knightly as was the great brigand. He never preyed upon the weak in his 'no man's land' between the highlanders and the lowlanders.
"In our country there is an ever growing unpoliced 'no man's land' where neither State nor Nation is permitted to function. When a State enters this lawless area it is to right a wrong within its borders, if perchance this lawlessness effects something across the State line then it is void because of interstate inhibition. If the Nation enacts a law to right a wrong, if perchance this law effects something in a State then it is void because it invades the right of the State.
"This twiddle-dum and twiddle-dee between inter-state and intra-state is bringing nihilism. A State cannot shoot a wolf in 'no man's land' if that wolf is in range of a Nation gun. Neither can the Nation shoot that or any other wolf in 'no man's land' if within the range of a State gun. All government guns are silenced and the Rob-in Hoods are undisturbed.
"There is nothing that is not both inter-state and intra-state, and as to governmental regulations it is 'king's excuse' to do anything in this 'no man's land'. This non-user of the powers of government is destroying government. The Master in the parable of the talents, put the greatest earthly curse upon NON-USER.
"It is worthy of note that the wisest thing in the recent statement of our Chief Justice is 'in protracted litigation the advantage is with those who command the long purse'.
"May we not ask how many of those so effective in dealing all government matters were trained in the school where this wisdom is thoroughly imbued?
"Since this great Justice, great man, great American, and no mean politician, has again entered the political arena in which he has shown so brightly so long, believing that he has enough sportsmanship to 'take it on the chin,' I say to him and to his that it ill becomes any of them to mention politics in connection with the Great Bench.
"He was twice elected Governor of New York, which place he resigned to be Justice on the Supreme Court, and while on that highest Court was nominated for President by his Party, a political coup unique in the annals of time, and now he is Chief Justice.
"This cry of politics from that side recalls the old fable in the Blue Back Spelling Book, the illustrated question, 'Whose ox is gored?'
"He said that the Constitution is what the Judges say it is. If this be true then our Supreme Court has become ALL SUPREME and NO COURT.
"It was fundamental law, not economic predilection of Constitution making judges, the people of the United States ordained as our Constitution.
"This illuminating statement of the Chief Justice showing such remarkable dispatch of business makes one wonder why the delay in the important cases concerning people compared with the dispatch in so many cases concerning 'things'.
"Five years ago in Chicago the American People, under Democratic leadership, assumed to discharge 'The continuous responsibility of government for human welfare'.
"Last year in Philadelphia this same people, in the Democratic Platform, pledged our Nation that it would 'keep on keeping on' and pledged specifically that 'We will continue to seek to meet these problems through legislation within Constitution'. The President's plan is within the Constitution and is in this Platform.
"Technical hair-splitters that strain at gnats will find no alibi for deserting the team in either the letter or the spirit of the Platform.
"In a nut-shell, the issue now is 'Shall government, both in States and in Nation, keep on keeping on' discharging their responsibilities for 'human welfare,' or 'shall we let the Neros get us 'fiddling around while Rome burns'.'
"We are not surprised when a lion of Idaho roars that in cases like the railroad cases this Court becomes the economic dictator in the United States, yet, true to form, in the pinch, stays put in the Republican pen. But it sorely hurts the hearts of millions of us who love and revere him to see a Wheeler lined against the human side. Oh, Senator, keep up the stop gap, if you please, to save disaster now, then in time build a bulwark as you will. I really pray that God will give it to you to see our pressing need and that you may yet answer our Macedonian cry 'Help us, and help us now.'
"The candid citizen must confess that if the policy of the Government upon vital questions affecting the whole people is to be irrevocably fixed by decisions of the Supreme Court the instant they are made in ordinary litigation between parties in personal actions, the people will have ceased to be their own rulers, having to that extent practically resigned their Government into the hands of that eminent tribunal.
"You know the people of America did not cease to be their own rulers and did not resign their government into the hands of that eminent tribunal, but at what cost.
"Let me beg the doubting Thomases to put their fingers in these nail holes of the past and not chance a crucifixion as hand-washing Pontius Pilates. Have the courage to do the duty of citizens and do it now. Have faith in that people that made you, even as they had faith to entrust their welfare and domestic tranquility and the liberty of themselves and their off-spring to you.
"We plead that Congress do its duty and do it now.
"It is the now supreme duty of Congress to save the Court from itself and thus save the Constitution and American government. Those who made, ordained and established these knew there were no Brobdingnagian men to dilute the trust. They entrusted Government to human agencies in which they believed. They established a co-equal trinity of legislative executive and judicial departments imparting to each the power to check and balance the others. They excluded absolutism everywhere.
"Under the Constitution the Court has acquired the power to keep the other departments within the Constitu-

"PENNIES ARE MONEY"
We've always counted on you. We'd say we hadn't any. If in our purses all alone. Was a little old copper penny.
But now it's money we've got. And I hold to a penny. That's all the children used to. But now they don't get any.
They cry and beg so pitiful. My heart is almost broken. I'm going to be better to you. And give each one a token. We buy a nickel's worth of it. They'll ask for another penny. But, oh! my gosh, look at this. It's just as good as any.

MEMORY OF A. B. FRITH

Morning of April 13, the death of A. B. Frith of Selma, Ala., and his sweet spirit to its heaven. He was for several years a member of New Harmony and Pleasant Hill communities and was loved by all who knew him. Later he was buried at Alpine community and Superintendent of Alpine Sunday School, where much lasting good was accomplished through his services. Yes, he is dead, yet he lives in the lives of others who gained knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ through his service. At the time of his death he was a resident of Selma where he had spent several of his last years.

INSURGENTS

FORMATION of the Union party for this year's campaign and its nomination of Representative William Lemke of North Dakota for President recalls some of the other "insurgent" parties which have played their part in our political history. The first of these was the Peace party of 1812-15, composed of Democrat-Republicans and Federalists, mostly in New England, who opposed the War of 1812.

In 1824 there was a People's party, composed of Democrat-Republicans, who favored choosing electors by the people and in 1825 there was a Coalition party, so-called from the union of the supporters of Henry Clay with those of John Quincy Adams to elect Adams. There was an Anti-Masonic party in the field from 1827 to 1834 and in 1840-41 the Abolitionists formed the Liberty party. The Free Soil party, which later became the modern Republican party, was formed of Liberty party members, Whigs and Democrats, who opposed slavery.

The American party, popularly known as the "Know-Nothing" party, was formed from members of other parties who became dissatisfied with the influx of foreigners and first raised the cry of "America for Americans!" In 1860 it was merged with the Constitutional party.

In this same year there were two Democratic parties—the Douglas Democrats (Northern) and the Breckinridge Democrats (Southern). In 1872 dissatisfied Republicans and pro-war Democrats formed the Liberal Republican party and nominated Horace Greeley for President. Other Democrats who wouldn't vote for Greeley formed the "Straight Out" or "Tap Root" Democratic party, which nominated Charles O'Connor.

In 1884 there was an Anti-Monopoly party which nominated Benjamin F. Butler of Massachusetts but which died a-borning. In that same year "bolters" from the Republican party who refused to support Blaine, the nominee, became the "Mugwumps" and supported Cleveland, the Democratic nominee. In 1896 there were "bolters" from both parties. Free silver advocates, led by Senator Teller of Colorado, left the Republican party, and "gold Democrats" deserted that party and its nominee, William J. Bryan, formed a "National Democrat" party and nominated John M. Palmer of Illinois for President and Simon B. Buckner of Kentucky for vice-president.

Last but not least was the split in the Republican party in 1912 which resulted in the formation of the Progressive party under the leadership of Theodore Roosevelt and the consequent victory of Wilson over Taft.

When water runs off the land more is brought back by the clouds, but when soil and the plant food it contains is washed off the land it is gone for good, says M. E. Pruett, Engineer of the Soil Conservation Service.

Realizing this, more farmers than ever before on the Clanton, Alabama demonstration area this spring are planting close-growing crops in strips across the slopes between the row crops.

Close-growing crops catch run-off water from the strips above, slow it down, and strain from it the particles of soil it carries from the clean cultivated strips.

This is one of the easiest methods whereby soil-depleting row crops such as cotton and corn can be grown on sloping land without enormous soil losses Mr. Pruett says, adding that spring planting time is one of the best times for farmers to start this erosion control practice.

Mr. Pruett says that the proportion of close-growing crops to clean-tilled crops is determined by the slope and the degree of erosion. The steeper the slope, the closer the strips are spaced.

In some instances strips straddle the terrace, reinforcing the terrace and partially protecting two terraces instead of one.

Another method provides for every other terrace to be stripped and the intervening terrace planted to a row crop. It is necessary to increase the proportion of close-growing crops as the slope increases, since erosion takes place much faster on the steeper slopes.

Strips rotation, says Mr. Pruett, slow up flow of water, increase absorption, reinforce terraces, minimize sheet erosion, and are the most systematic and rotations to follow once they have been established.

Interest In Evening School Being Shown

Chilton County Exchange, Thompson & Gamble Give Prizes

During the past few months at Isabella, Mr. A. L. Smith, teacher of Vocational Agriculture, has conducted an evening school for the men of this community.

The general subject taught during this series of lessons was "Improved Farm Practices," which consists of poultry, home beautification, crops, fertilizers, varieties and soil improvements.

A great deal of interest has been shown by those attending these meetings, and this interest has manifested itself in some of the following ways. Most of the men have done some constructive terracing and planted cover crops. One of the most beneficial practices has been the beginning of the establishment of a one-variety cotton community.

The outstanding home beautification project has been accomplished by Mr. E. C. Grooms. He has completed his home, painted it inside and out, arranged shrubs; leveled and sod his yard. In addition to this he has set out a home orchard.

At the beginning of this series of meetings Mr. Smith offered prizes to be given at the completion of the school on the following basis: He must be perfect in attendance, produce an original form for keeping farm records and make a collection of a number of suggested bulletins. The first prize of a hundred chicks was offered by Chilton Co. Exchange. The second prize of 200 pounds of fertilizer was offered by Thompson & Gamble. Mr. E. C. Grooms and Mr. G. T. Calfee were winners of these prizes—both were 100 per cent in attendance.

Mr. Smith and the men of the Isabella community wish to express their thanks to the Chilton Co. Exchange and to Thompson & Gamble for the interest they have shown by so generously giving the chicks and the fertilizer.

The Size of Your ACRES

POTASH Makes Cotton ACRES BIGGER

WE HAVE decided on the number of acres wanted to cotton this year. The "size" of those depends upon the yield and quality of the produce and the profits which they return. Cotton rust and wilt decrease the size of a acre. There was more cotton rust in the last year than ever before reported. Cotton potash hunger. To control rust and also to wilt, apply 50-100 pounds of muriate of potash a nitrogen-potash top-dresser immediately chopping if your fertilizer at planting did contain enough potash. Consult your county or experiment station on your soil requirements. See your fertilizer manufacturer or dealer for further information.

Lecroy-Cummings Wedding Solemnized At Lovely Church Ceremony Last Sunday

Of much interest to Chilton County and other points of the state was the marriage of Miss Fannie Lee Lecroy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Lecroy, to W. J. Cummings. The wedding was solemnized Sunday morning at Mulberry Baptist Church before a large number of friends and relatives with Rev. Charlie Haggard officiating.

The church was decorated with Southern smilax, tulips and bridal wreath. A screen of cornus florida served as a background for the altar. Large white baskets of bridal wreath, and branched candelabras holding lighted tapers graced each side of the altar. Mendelssohn's and Lohengrin's wedding marches were rendered by Mrs. C. J. Coburn. The vocalists were Edmund Green, who sang "I Love You Truly," accompanied by Mrs. Howard Bookholdt, and Mrs. S. C. Porch sang "I Love You," accompanied by Mrs. C. J. Coburn. The bride was lovely in a costume of thistle crepe with tiny rhinestone buttons extending from the neck to the waist in front. Her peddle straw hat and other accessories were of blue; her corsage was made of talisman roses.

The maid of honor, Miss Lorene Lecroy, sister of the bride, was dressed in a blue and yellow French crepe with navy blue accessories and a corsage of yellow rosebuds.

The flower girls were Marcelle Davenport and Virginia Bell, nieces of the bride. They wore princess dresses of pink organza and carried large baskets of rose petals. The ring-bearer was "Buddy" Bell.

The groom chose his brother, Casey, to attend him as best man. Ushers were Jack Tucker and Braxton Lecroy. The couple left in the afternoon for a short bridal trip. Mrs. Cummings month back home to his family, which means that Chilton County will be enriched by $900.00 per month steady cash income during the period of enrollment of these boys, in addition to the clothing, food and opportunities for vocational training afforded the boys themselves. A number of these boys were enrolled from families who had been forced to ask for and receive public assistance in order to live. The enrollment of the boys will enable these families to live independently. It will no longer be necessary for them to come to the Welfare office seeking aid. Other boys have agreed to send their allotment to relatives who have applied for assistance but who, because of lack of adequate funds, the Department has been unable to assist. In some instances the allotments are coming back to families who have not applied for public assistance but who will be able, through this allotment, to care for their family or other necessities. We feel very proud of these boys of which they would be otherwise depressed who are willing to apply the major part of their earnings toward helping their families to become financially independent.

The local CC Camp very generously provided transportation to the enrollment center for these boys. This Camp has demonstrated very clearly to Chilton County the value of services rendered to boys by CCC enrollment as well as the services rendered by Camps to the communities in which they are located.

Arledge Speaks
Thomas J. Arledge, road supervisor made a statement to the News this week as follows:

April 19, 1937

"Attention being called to the published information regarding the action of the Commissioner's Court of Chilton County to the effect that the Honorable Judge Arthur Glover has been petitioned to call a special session of the Grand Jury for the purpose of investigating acts and activities of the Road Supervisor in connection with the duties coming under his office. The Road Supervisor welcomes such an investigation, and in fact, such action has been desired for several months by the Supervisor in his efforts to clarify a lot of misunderstanding which has been brought about by malicious and false rumors being circulated through out the County during almost the entire period he has been connected with the office.

"In connection with the matter of the Tractor Deal—a purchase of one new Deisel tractor and the disposition of the old 50 gasoline tractor, it is sufficient to say that there is now a suit pending in the Circuit Court at its next term, against Commissioner Howard Oden and the J. D. Pittman Tractor Company, Incorporated, and said Court will determine and decide the responsibility of the transaction.

"In the meantime, I want all the people of Chilton County to know that their Supervisor will continue to serve them to the best of his ability and with what funds and equipment may be available for the most economic operation in the repair and maintenance of the public roads and bridges, regardless of any rumors they may hear to the reverse, until I am duly relieved by a qualified successor according to law. Raiford was married to Mary Baker Howard, of Selma, who was associated with him in the development and improvement of The Times-Journal which observed its 100th anniversary in 1927 under their management.

In addition to his widow, he leaves three nieces, Mrs. Jessie Mac Shaw, of Lawton, Ala.; Mrs. Fred Shepler, Lawton, Okla., wife of a Lawton publisher, and Mrs. Stanley Barber, of Lawton.

President E. C. Wilson, of the Chamber of Commerce announced he would call a meeting of merchants tomorrow morning to consider closing stores during the hour of Mr. Raiford's funeral. Funeral will be attended by delegations from the Rotary Club of which he was former president, all civic clubs, Chamber of Commerce of which he was former president, Selma Y.M.C.A. and city and county officials.

1937 Ford V-8

● If you think that "all low-price cars cost about the same" — forget it! They don't.

Ford makes a car — a 60-horsepower economy Ford V-8 — that sells from 30 to 60 dollars under the prices asked for any other car of comparable size. The lowest Ford prices in years!

Check delivered prices in your town and see for yourself.

● Of course, first cost doesn't prove "low cost" — you must consider operating cost also.

The "60" has definitely established itself as the most economical car in Ford history. Ford cars have been famous for economy for 34 years, so that means something!

Owners who have driven it thousands of miles report that the Ford "60" averages between 22 and 27 miles on a gallon of gasoline.

You can prove those figures — on the open road — in a car provided by the nearest Ford dealer.

● When you've finished your personal check-up, ask yourself:

"Do I want to save money the day I buy my car and every mile I drive it?"

"Do I want a safe, roomy, comfortable car of advanced design — created from the finest materials to the highest precision standards?"

There's only one answer, of course — the 1937 Ford V-8.

Ford V-8 529 at Dealership. Prices begin at 529. This price is for the 60-horsepower Coupe equipped with front and rear bumpers, spare tire, horn, windshield wiper, sun visor, glove compartment, and ash tray.

Special Diets

A well-nourished person is better able to resist disease than an under-nourished one. Few families, however, are so fortunate as to escape disease at all times.

Any case of serious sickness should be diagnosed by a physician and in case a special diet is necessary this should be prescribed by him. The duty of every mother is to know how to carry out the physician's instructions in the most efficient and capable way. There are also many minor ailments for which the physician is not called but which require a change from the ordinary diet.

In any sickness, care regarding the diet is important and even without food or taking very little food does no harm and gives the digestive organs an opportunity to rest.

A soft diet is one that is given between the liquid and the light or convalescent diet. This may contain any of the liquid foods and such additional ones as toast softened in milk, broth, milk, custards, souffles, junkets, gelatin, ice cream, and sherbets.

In any sickness:

1. The diet must be simple.
2. Regularity of feeding must be followed.

3. The appetite must be tempted by having the foods well prepared and attractively served. Possibly a single flower on the tray or attractive china may be used to have effect on the patient's appetite.

I. DIET IN INDIGESTION:

The causes of indigestion vary, but the digestive tract is usually affected. It is best to refrain from food, or to take only liquid diet until the digestive tract is in better condition.

One or two glasses of hot water before breakfast help. Sugar should be eliminated, as it irritates the lining of the stomach, and it also ferments. Fruits should be used sparingly.

II. DIET IN CONSTIPATION:

1. Foods rich in cellulose are important in intestinal movements: Celery, cabbage, string beans, asparagus, lettuce, spinach, onions, radish, prunes, figs.

2. Foods yielding acids are stimulants to intestinal movements:

Lemons, tomatoes, apples, oranges, rhubarb, cider, kraut.

3. Foods producing gas formation: Honey, spinach, molasses, onions.

The gas breaks up the masses in the intestines and stimulates movement.

4. Lubricants:

When the digestion of fat is imperfect, fat in liberal quantities is laxative. A tablespoonful of olive oil just before retiring and immediately after rising may be beneficial.

Mineral oil is often a help in starting normal habits. Water taken on an empty stomach may start intestinal movement.

III. DIET IN TUBERCULOSIS:

1. The diet should be liberal but not excessive.

2. There should be a generous use of fat and carbohydrates.

3. There is less emphasis on a high protein diet than formerly.

4. Ash and vitamins should be liberally supplied.

5. The foods should be simple and easily digested.

6. Rest, fresh air, food and contentment are all-important in promoting recovery.

IV. DIET IN DIABETES:

The regulation of the diet is the most important consideration in the treatment of diabetes.

1. There must be a low level of total calories and of protein.

2. The amount of carbohydrates is determined by the tolerance of the individual.

3. Liberal use of the watery and fibrous vegetables with small amounts of carbohydrates.

4. Milk substitute. Cream diluted with water and raw egg white added.

5. Breadstuffs made with soy beans or pure gluten flour.

6. Saccharine used in place of sugar.

V. DIET FOR PELLAGRA—PREVENTION:

Milk—sweet milk or buttermilk—2 pints daily.

Lean meats—beef, mutton, pork, fish, fowl, one-fourth to one-half pound per day. Eggs—at least one daily. Vegetables—sweet or Irish potatoes, turnips, string beans, tomatoes, cabbage, collards, turnip greens, spinach, and other vegetables—2 servings daily in addition to starch vegetables.

Fruits—fresh, canned, or dried—2 servings daily in addition to starch vegetables. Fruits—fresh, canned, or dried—2 servings daily. A raw fruit or raw vegetable daily. Whole grain products—breakfast cereals or breads made of the whole grain—2 servings daily. Water—6 to 8 glasses a day.

Food that can keep one from having pellagra can also aid greatly in curing pellagra. When the disease is actually present, Dr. Goldberger says powdered yeast, sweet milk or buttermilk, lean meat, fresh meat juice, scraped beef, egg yolk, fresh or canned tomato juices should be given preference. Liver and salmon should be added to this list of foods high in vitamin G.

Dried, pure yeast contains more of the pellagra-preventing vitamin than any known food. For use as a food, the powdered yeast should be stirred into boiling water and allowed to boil about one minute. Two tablespoonfuls or one ounce of powdered yeast a day will ordinarily be enough for an adult. One or two teaspoonfuls may be given three to six times a day in milk, tomato juice, or fruit juices.

Owning a good cow, raising poultry and eggs and a meat supply for home consumption, and growing a year-round garden on every farm is the best assurance of an adequate food supply.

VI. ANEMIA:

Anemia is a disease of the blood, marked by a deficiency in the amount of blood pigment.

The diet in anemia should be a well-balanced one, that is it should contain all of the nutritive elements in proper amounts. In addition to this balanced diet there should be an abundance of foods to build up the blood.

Since the digestion may be impaired the diet should consist of simple and easily digested foods. Among these milk and eggs are important. Although milk lacks iron it is a valuable food for the anemic patient. A quart a day is desirable. Bread, toast, milk, butter, fruits, and cereals with cream should be included. Foods high in vitamins and minerals should be included. Lettuce, spinach, tomatoes, and orange juice are all excellent.

The diet should also include an abundance of good proteins, particularly muscle meats and liver.

The diet should be strictly adhered to.

VII. RICKETS:

Rickets is the result of a restricted food supply and an indoor life. It does not develop if the diet contains vitamin D, or if the individual gets an abundance of sunshine. Both of these factors influence the utilization of minerals. When calcium and phosphorus are present in proper relative proportions, rickets does not develop.

Vitamin D promotes the development of bones and teeth. Cod-liver oil, being rich in Vitamin D, promotes the assimilation of calcium and phosphorus, which control bone structure. Exposure of bones to sunlight or ultra-violet light has an effect similar to that of cod-liver oil.

Since an apparently adequate diet for the child will not always prevent rickets, it is important that all children have the benefit of the two factors which under all circumstances will prevent it. Sunlight and cod-liver oil.

Results Of Cotton Spacing Tests Given

Auburn, Ala.—"It is recommended that cotton be spaced 18 inches apart in the drill with from 1 to 3 plants per hill," says the Alabama Experiment Station. "The width of rows, where liberal application of fertilizer are made, may vary from 2 1/2 to 4 1/2 feet. Under condition of low fertility or where only moderate fertilizer applications are made the width of rows should not be more than 3 1/2 feet."

From 8,000 to 25,000 plants per acre gave the largest yields. Spacings which gave less than 8,000 or more than 25,000 plants per acre tended to reduce the yield and the size of the boll was increased by wide spacings and decreased by close spacings, says Dean M. J. Funchess.

AAA OFFERS OPPORTUNITY FOR IMPROVING LIVESTOCK

Auburn, Ala.—Farmers of Alabama and most of the southeast are confronted with a splendid opportunity to improve livestock production in connection with the Agricultural Conservation Program which is returning thousands of acres to grass and other soil-conserving crops, states F. W. Burns, extension livestock specialist.

In the past, Alabama farmers have depended to a great extent on cotton and other cultivated cash crops for their income. Under the Agricultural Conservation Program thousands of acres are being seeded to improved pasture and soil-conserving crops which can be marketed to best advantage through livestock.

It is conservatively estimated that the packing industry has invested $10,000,000 in the past eight years in the states of Alabama, Virginia, Florida, Georgia, South Carolina, and Tennessee. This expansion has come about with two objectives in view: namely, to meet the demand in what promises to be the Nation's coming industrial section, and second, the money has been invested in the anticipation that the southern farmer will improve and expand livestock production, Mr. Burns points out.

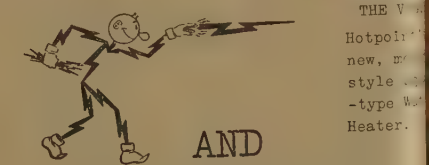

Cattle production can be improved by use of purebred sires. The number of hogs can be increased by use of purebred boars and the maintenance of sows of improved breeding, and the sheep industry can be expanded and improved by the use of purebred rams and the addition of small farm flocks of well-bred ewes, he says.

Cards have been issued by the Peace Franklin Mittau of St. Paul, Minn., each of which entitles the couple to have their marriage ceremony performed in 1937 and pay it in 1938.

LOCAL LAUNDRY INSTALLS NEW VACUUM STILL

Latest Devices Used For Insuring Immediate And Clean Services

Keeping abreast of changing times with an eye on latest improvements in laundry and dry cleaning methods, has enabled F. L. Thompson, manager of the Clanton Laundry & Cleaning Co., to bring to this section one of the most modern laundry and dry cleaning plants in the state.

Recent improvements in dry cleaning equipment being on the market, Mr. Thompson immediately installed a modern solvent cleaner and purifier and a vacuum "still" for quick cleaning.

Cuts Out Greases

This new equipment enables the Clanton Laundry & Cleaning Company to use solvent cleaning fluid that is thoroughly cleansed of all oils and greases accumulated during the process of dry cleaning clothes the modern way. The solvent used by most dry cleaning plants is used time and time again, being forced through a filter. The new system just installed by Mr. Thompson enables them to do this work faster and more effectively, and is the same method now being used in the larger plants in cities. It is also recommended by the National Association of Cleaners & Dyers.

Clanton's CCC Camp Named Most Outstanding In District

Officers And Enrollees Of Clanton's Camp Are Highly Commended For Excellent Work
And Outstanding Examples Set

In the Civilian Conservation Camp No. 3481, Clanton and Chilton County have many things of which to be proud. There is the general outstanding, well-kept appearance of the camp, the excellent character of the enrollees and the fact that this particular camp is located in Clanton.

But, the outstanding thing about this camp to be proud of is the fact that it has recently been acclaimed the best Company in this District, which contains forty-one similar camps for young men.

The announcement of the standing of the local CC Camp was made last week in a letter addressed to the Commanding Officer here from Colonel George F. Baltzell, commander of the 22nd Infantry.

The outstanding record of the local camp is attributed to its officers and enrollees. Lieut. Latham W. Graham served as commanding officer of the camp for six months, leaving on April 13th for another place. He was replaced here by Lieut. Harry Parham, of the 39th Infantry, who is now commanding the Clanton Camp.

YOUTH MAKES EXCELLENT RECORD ATTENDING SCHOOL

A record that is seldom equaled and never beaten in this county has been made by Donald Mitchell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Mitchell, of Verbena, Ala., Route 2.

Donald is eleven years old, in the fifth grade at Cooper School. He has attended school for five years and has not missed a single day from his studies. During this time he has received prizes for his unusual record at school.

Despite cold weather, rain or sleet, Donald would attend school because he really wanted to go and learn all he could. He lives over three miles from the schoolhouse. He has had only two teachers, Mrs. Lucille Allen and Mrs. Zebie Vinson.

County Refrigerating System Coming Soon

It will not be so very long until visitors to Clanton will have plenty of good, cold drinking water without the asking, according to Judge Lee Smith. Judge Smith stated that it is hoped the county will soon install the refrigerating system and drinking fountains at the courthouse sometime in May. Bids on the equipment and installation will be asked for, Judge Smith stated, just as soon as it is determined what will be needed.

Tax Collector Urges Taxpayers To Heed Laws; Property Must Be Sold For Non-Payment, Tax

To The Taxpayers of Chilton County: "As I have stated before, the public has a perfect right to criticize their officials. As your Tax Collector of this county, I have certain legal duties to perform and scarcely any of you appreciate how much I dislike to do some of the things required by law, namely, to sell or advertise a man's home for his taxes. I do not especially care to object to your criticizing me for your taxes being higher than they were, but at the same time I know that most of you know that I have nothing to do with the raising of the taxes, as the tax agent and the Commissioners Court raised all the taxes that are raised in the county.

"The law sets the time for the starting and closing out of taxes, and the same law sets the time for me to make final settlement, as prescribed by law, I will be compelled to advertise the property on May 13, 1937. It will take three or four days to look up and write the description, so in view of these facts, I would like to insist and advise that you pay your taxes not later than May 8, 1937, to avoid paying the advertising cost.

"As stated above, I very much dislike the legal foreclosure of homes for their taxes and I hope and I believe we have started, by this Homestead Exemption, to the place where home-taxes will be exempted totally from taxation up to $2,000.00 assessed valuation.

"Let me ask that you take this in the spirit of the writer and kindly relieve him of the unpleasant duties mentioned above by paying your taxes by May 8, 1937.

"Thanking you for your cooperation in this, I am Yours very truly,
"T.L. McKEE, Tax Collector."

Public Service And Private Profit

"Politics can be made to pay big dividends without violation of the law or conflict with the generally accepted standards of honesty," said a man in our hearing once who had dabbled in municipal politics in a city of considerable size.

"It all lies in using the inside information that a political office gives you," he elaborated. Thereupon he continued with accounts of how money had been made by taking advantage of public improvements. A new boulevard and parkway was being planned. This would obviously double and treble the value of adjoining property. Before the owners of the abutting real estate knew anything about the program he secured options. When the improvement came he exercised these options with big profit to himself.

In a thousand and one other ways politicians in big cities take advantage of their positions to wrig private profit out of public service. And no law in existence can reach them. Legal provisions which prohibit an official from holding any interest in a public contract do not apply. Politicians of this type feel that what they do is quite all right.

And yet, they are among the first to condemn business men for similar tactics. The officer of a corporation who sees a future for the organization which is unknown to the stockholders, buys up the ownership of the corporation at a low price. He even drives it down by manipulation of the market only to reap a big profit for himself at the expense of the majority of owners. Practices like this we all condemn, but we do not condemn abuses in government of equal character.

These abuses, to be sure, exist in large cities primarily. It is rare that any public official can profit heavily through such practices here in Clanton. But when we consider the question from the standpoint of the nation as a whole, we must realize that a higher ethical standard and a new level of public honesty must be demanded before public service will be administered only in the interests of the public.

Warning To Motorists

A screech of the brakes, a quick swerve by a motorist with more presence of mind than forethought, and what might have been a serious tragedy near one of our schools the other day was averted by the narrowest possible margin.

It was not unusual. Such incidents occur frequently these days. Children playing in the school yard. A ball bounds across the street and a happy, carefree youngster darts after it without thought of the danger involved. The motorist may be exonerated from any charge of negligence, but that will not restore the life of a happy, carefree boy or girl.

Parents should caution their children against the greater traffic hazards. Do not permit your child to ride a bicycle on a crowded, high speed street or highway unless he is able to handle his bicycle well. Instruct him never to carry another boy or girl on the handlebars. Instruct him to watch intersections with care. Admonish him never to skate on a busy street. Impress in his mind the necessity of looking to the right and left when he darts across a street.

Motorists should remember that children, whatever instruction they may have had, forget quickly. An exuberant, healthy boy or girl cannot stop at a time when he is playing to think about all the traffic hazards that face him. Hence extra care on the part of the driver is due.

Though you may not be at fault, the recollection of the mangled form of a child under the wheels of your car will long be an unhappy recollection.

Solving Labor Problems

Are we moving toward a new era of understanding in the old, old conflict between capitol and labor? Has the recent decision of the United States Supreme Court paved the way to a peaceable adjustment of labor controversies, or has it merely made business subservient to labor? These questions can be answered only after the Wagner act has been operative for some time and when there is an accumulation of policies and precedent.

In our humble opinion, though we realize how remote we are from the center of disturbance, the act will operate effectively when it is amended, and when definite responsibilities are imposed on both sides. Rights imply corresponding duties. If labor gains a recognition of certain rights in the Wagner act it must accept responsibilities. And in the same breath, we may add, some new obligations must also be assumed by employers.

Labor's responsibilities include a determined effort to terminate practices which have aroused public feeling. Strikes which are called before any sincere effort to negotiate differences has been made; sympathetic strikes in which the public which is not involved is forced to suffer the greater loss; gross violations of law and order; disregard of property rights; efforts of minorities to dictate—these practices must end before understanding and peaceable adjustment of controversies is possible. To end them is labor's responsibility.

Employer responsibilities call for a conscientious effort to stamp out un-American activities. The employment of labor spies, and the retention of paid gunmen to break up labor organizations; discrimination against organized workers, and refusal to deal collectively with the workers—these are practices which business and capitol must eliminate.

When both sides recognize these obligations and seek to deal according to the law, with all the problems that arise in adjusting differences of interest, then we will be substituted for conflict in the relations between labor and capital; and when that time comes this great nation will witness a level of prosperity such as we cannot even dream about today.

Lost In The Wilderness

"Year, I was once lost in the woods over night," said the old time hunter with a twinkle in his eye. "I'd been following the track of a big buck for hours. Before I realized it the night had come. I was far away from camp, I thought, so I built a fire and waited for morning.

"It was a big night, too," he continued. "A light snow was pelting me. Wolves howled just outside the ring of the fire. I heard a lot of queer noises and did a lot of strange thinking that night.

"Then when daylight came at last I looked around. And what do you suppose. There loomin' up in the dim light was the camp, not more than ten rods away."

We've heard similar stories many times, and every time we have thought, how pat an illustration this is of life and the way with most of us.

We group around in a wilderness of dreams and half thoughts. We are always looking for something that we imagine can be found in remote places. We want a different business. We desire some office that brings honor and fame. And we yearn for some opportunity somewhere else that will give us wealth and luxury and comfort.

And while we are dreaming about something far off we fail to see that the opportunity, the comfort, and the security that we desire lies just beyond the limited circle of our vision.

Right here in Clanton and right in the work with which we are engaged lies the opportunity that we dream about. We're like the old man lost in the woods. We can't see what is near at hand.

Secretary Wallace expects the weather to behave this year. Well it should. It certainly has a mandate from the people.

An astronomer says that the earth will support life for only about two billion more years. That's one forecast that doesn't worry us much.

An animal trainer has taught a lion to sit up and beg. Whereupon it may be wondered whether he can teach the wolf at the door the same trick.

Under civil service government workers advance on the basis of merit. But lawmakers seem to fear that they will have to be elected on merit too.

D. W. Haskew

Before the days of Lingbergh aviators had contemplated the crossing of the Atlantic in a plane. They would sail out over the water and feel out the atmosphere, but as soon as they came into a fog, or were faced by a cloud bank, they would return to their starting base. They were afraid to venture into the fog, or to face the wide ocean without being able to see their way in a clear sky. One day a young man lifted his plane into the air and he nosed it straight out over the ocean. Fogs and cloud banks loomed before him, but Charles Lindbergh plunged into these and followed his course by watching his compass and his chart. Many a time he could not see beyond his roaring engine, but he sailed on. The fogs and the clouds were the same to him as the open sky, and Lindbergh crossed the ocean. No man in this life can succeed when he is afraid of fogs and clouds. We are going to meet them in our journey across the sea of life. If we turn back when fogs arise, when we meet with clouds that we can not see through, we will not succeed. Have a compass and a chart with you and follow that in the fog, the same as in the sunshine and the ocean of life will not be hard to cross.

Not long since a clergyman was sent to a hospital suffering terribly. He was so weak that he could hardly hold up his head. He claimed that he had swallowed a set of false teeth during the night and that he could feel them gnawing out his very life. The physician examined him by Xray and could find nothing wrong and they said, the more he suffered. When he was nearing the end a telegram came from his wife saying, "Do not let the doctors operate, I have found your teeth under the bed." When this message was read to the preacher he arose, dressed himself and walked to the depot and caught the train back home. He was a well man when he found out that he had not swallowed his teeth. Medical history is full of cases where a patient was made sick by and through the power of the imagination. If you want to be an invalid just imagine that there is something wrong with you and keep that up for a few months and you will soon have what you imagine. What I am saying is just this, "If you imagine that you have a cancer and imagine it long enough, the results will be about the same as if you really had a cancer. Imagine yourself well and strong and then keep living in that manner and your life will be longer than if you imagine that you have some fatal disease and you will be a lot happier.

We were sitting on the front porch of a country home when a man rode up on a mule and called to the man of the house, "Mr. John as I was passing your field down the road I saw six hogs in your corn." This information brought action and four boys were soon chasing the hogs from the field. We found that the fence on the top was in good repair and that the hogs had found their way into the corn because of a decayed rail near the ground. The rails on the top of the fence were sound, but there was decay at the foundation. Since that day I have observed that many a man seems to be a perfect gentleman in his public life. He seems to be straight in every respect when he is in society, but we know that the hogs are in his character field. How did they get in? There was a decayed spot in that man's private life, the life that was hid out and the hogs of sin went through. Better look well after the foundation of character.

The lady of the house was showing me her pian. She complained that the rust had taken hold of almost every string and that the instrument had lost its harmony. Did I conclude that the law of harmony was destroyed? It was destroyed in that piano, but the same law of harmony was still in existence. The rust had destroyed it in that piano, but not in the field of harmony that has always been the same. When sin eats out the law of right in a man's life we are not to suppose that the great law of right is in ruins. There may be no righteousness in that one life, but the same laws of right and truth are still in existence. Sin ruins the individual but it leaves untouched the great law of harmonious living. One life may lose its harmony, but that should not keep others from living correctly.

They tell us that the Arabs will often drive their camels across the desert under pressure. When night comes they feed the camel and leave the pack on his back so that they can get an early start that next morning. When the camel has consumed his meal, he lays himself down with his load on his back. He tries to rest but the load on his back keeps him from resting and the next morning he is tired before he starts out on the days journey. Many a man deals with himself as the Arabs deal with their camels. When he leaves his office he carries his burden home with him. When he goes to bed at night he lays down with his load still on his mind and in his heart. It is hard to rest when we do not get from under our loads at night. When you leave your place of business leave your burdens there, and when you come back the next morning you will be rested and ready to carry on. Never sleep with your burden on your back.

Farmers Urged To Conserve Moisture

Green pastures that are beginning to provide tender young grass after the long winter months, may be brown and dry by midsummer if moisture is not conserved for use during the hot months ahead, according to W. R. Tamplin said. Contour furrows will not only promote a better growth of grass, but will help to control erosion as well. Bermuda grass, if available, can usually be sprigged over the entire pasture area to advantage at this time of the year. It is especially useful where galled spots and small gullies are beginning to develop.

Application of fertilizer will aid in establishing a good sod and will tend to control the growth of weeds which compete with pasture grasses for food and moisture. Fertilizer recommendations can be obtained from County Agent J. W. Fant.

A good pasture will furnish cheaper feed than any other crop, Mr. Tamplin said. It reduces labor cost because the cattle themselves harvest the crop. Experiments have shown that a good pasture sod is one of the most effective agents of erosion control.

In demonstration areas of the Soil Conservation Service, the moisture-conserving value of contour furrows has been strikingly illustrated by the more luxuriant growth of pasture grasses on these areas during periods of hot, dry weather.

EXTENSION SERVICE WILL AID FARMERS WITH FINANCES

Auburn, Ala.—Hereafter the extension service of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute will give special attention to farm financial problems. P. O. Davis, director, announced today that this service will be rendered and that the aim is to improve financial practices in all farm procedures involving money.

"In extending our financial service," said Mr. Davis, "we shall think of money as a commodity and deal with it like crops or livestock. With these it is our duty to increase income by teaching better methods and practices and with money it is our duty to increase income by improving the use and handling of money."

James D. Sanford, J. D. Moore, and G. W. Ray who have been working especially on cooperative farm problems are being assigned to the entire field of farm finances, individually or collectively. They will work with county agents, home demonstration agents, farm people and financial institutions.

"It has been my observation," continued Mr. Davis, "that most of our problems soon get around to money. I have observed also that people who are skillful in the use of money always get along much better than people who are not skillful. If, therefore, we can improve the use of money we shall improve farm incomes and thereby develop a more prosperous agriculture in Alabama."
